Spirited Contests Assured for Offices of Mayor, Reeve, Dep.-Reeve and Aldermen

The Largest Gathering of Ratepayers Seen at Any Municipal Meeting in Years—The Temperance Element Bound to Figure in the Contest.

If signs and portents count for anything in municipal affairs, then the coming civic elections will fair to be the most interesting and consequential in many years.

We base our remarks on the splendid turnout at Monday's nomination meeting in the town hall. Long before 8 o'clock every seat in the auditorium was occupied, and others stood in serried ranks at the back, awaiting the opening of the speech-making at 8.30, when the hour for receiving nominations had expired. Clerk Knowlson started to read the lengthy list, and it really seemed as if everybody in the hall had been named for some office. The list was truly impressive, if not inspiring in its nomenclature.

The impression seemed to linger that temperance was going to play a prominent part in the municipal struggle this year, and this fact was doubtless accounted for, part, at least, of the increase in attendance. It was thought that some of the nominees on that ticket might have something interesting to say on the subject, but whatever they had, within the necessarily limited period of time at the disposal of each man called upon, to confine his remarks in the main to general subjects.

Crowded Out of This Issue.

Interesting news-letters from Balsa Valley, Bexley, Victoria Road, Fenelon Falls and Bobcaygeon are crowded out owing to lateness of arrival. Time and again our correspondents have been urged to forward letters on Monday, in order that our compositors may have a fair chance to handle the large amount of matter coming in weekly. At the beginning of the year we make another appeal and hope for better things.

Thoughts For The New Year.

Let us walk softly, friend;
Let us make paths lie before us, all untrod;
The New Year, spotless, from the hand of God,
Is like and mine, O friend!

Let us walk straightly, friend;
Forget the crooked paths behind us now,
Press on with steadier purpose on our brow,
To better deeds, O friend.

Let us walk gladly, friend;
Perhaps some greater good than we have known
Is waiting for us, or some fair hope flown
Shall yet return, O friend.

Let us walk humbly, friend;
Slight not the heart's sore stooping round our feet;
The laurel blossoms are not half so sweet,
Or lightly gathered, friend.

Let us walk kindly, friend;
We can not tell how long this life shall last
How soon these precious years be over, at past
Let love walk with us, friend.

Let us walk quickly, friend;
Work our mite while days our little span
And help some halting comrade on the way;
And may God guide us, friend!

—North-Western Christian Advocate.

BERLIN LIBEL CASE

Herr Liman Says Bismarck Hated the Camarilla.

EVIDENCE AT HARDEN TRIAL

Chancellor Ascribed His Dismissal to Its Machinations—Prince Zu Eulenburg Relates His Estrangement From Him—Declares He Never Influenced the Emperor—Frau Von Elbe's Charges.

Berlin, Dec. 28.—The hearing of the Harden-Von Moltke libel suit was resumed here yesterday with open doors. The greater part of the morning session was taken up with the testimony of Dr. Frey of Vienna, who at one time treated Frau Von Elbe, the divorced wife of Gen. Count Kuno Von Moltke. The witness declared that the former countess was most hysterical, and that her charges against Von Moltke were based upon fantasy.

Dr. Liman, editor of The Leipsiger Neuste Nachrichten, who at one time had rather intimate relations with Prince Von Bismarck, and who, since the death of the prince, has been one of the chief apostles of the Bismarck cult, was then called upon to testify regarding a remark he had heard Bismarck make concerning Prince Philip Zu Eulenburg. This remark played a considerable role in the first Harden trial, when Harden interpreted in an equivocal sense as implying a charge of secret vices of an abominable character against Zu Eulenburg. Dr. Limen swore yesterday that he understood Bismarck's words to mean simply that Zu Eulenburg was responsible for certain political occurrences, and that they conveyed no covert innuendo about vile practices.

Prince Zu Eulenburg, who had come into the courtroom with the assistance of his two sons, here asked permission to make a statement. This was granted and the prince said he had enjoyed the most friendly relations with Bismarck until the latter broke with the Emperor, when their intercourse ceased entirely. He had learned from various sources that Bismarck thought he should have made common cause with him and withdrawn his support from the Emperor when he did.

"This, for many reasons, I did not do," Prince Zu Eulenburg continued, "and I encountered much hostility because of my course. Bismarck's was a volcanic nature, and he was volcanic in his hate. I still think with joy of the hospitality I enjoyed at Bismarck's table, but with sorrow of the break in our relations. Bismarck complained of the presence of irresponsible persons in the entourage of the Emperor, but the Emperor had the right to summon who he would."

Prince Zu Eulenburg often accompanied the Emperor on his Norwegian voyages and hunting excursions as a representative of the Foreign Office, but he took oath that he had never sought to obtain political influence over His Majesty.

The prince spoke with deep earnestness, amid the profound silence of the court.

Strikes Were Few.

Ottawa, Dec. 28.—There were very few trade disputes in Canada during November, and the losses through this cause were comparatively slight. The only locality where a large body of employes was affected was at St. John, N. B., where transportation was hampered through a strike of longshoremen, during the latter part of the month. The total number of trade disputes reported to have been in existence in Canada during November was eight, a decrease of 14, compared with the previous month, and a decrease of 11, compared with November, 1906. About 34 firms and 1,686 employes were affected by these disputes, 15 firms and about 1,107 employes being involved in the disputes which began in November.

Gains Bride and Fortune.

Madrid, Dec. 23.—A remarkable stroke of luck has just befallen a soldier of the Saboya Regiment, in garrison here. He was enamored of a buxom cook, and they were discussing recently the prospects of their marriage in the near future, which were very slim indeed. Their combined financial resources amounted to only 100 pesetas ($18), and the marriage fees, etc., amounted to much more.

Finally they concluded to invest their savings in the Government Christmas lottery, which was drawn Dec. 23. Yesterday the loving couple were informed that their share of the ticket had brought them $60,000. The marriage will take place shortly.

Nosse Returns to Japan.

Ottawa, Dec. 27.—Mr. Tatsurgoro Nosse, the Japanese consul-general, who has held that post in Ottawa for the past six years, left Ottawa last night to return to Japan on six months' leave of absence. The impression prevails that his return is permanent.

Boy Read Dime Novels.

Winnipeg, Dec. 27.—Edward Smith, a 14-year-old boy, has been missing since Saturday and his parents believe he has committed suicide, as he had frequently threatened. Sensational literature of the dime novel class is held responsible.

Killed by Mistake.

San Jose, Cal., Dec. 27.—Bertram Somers early yesterday shot and killed his 5-year-old boy, having mistaken him for a burglar. The child, it is believed, was walking in his sleep.

HOME RULE FOR INDIA.

National Congress at Surat Broke Up With Free Fight.

Surat, Bombay, Dec. 28.—After two days of futile efforts to elect a president, the Indian National Congress broke up yesterday afternoon in a free fight, during which the police had to be called in.

The congress, which meets annually, was of especial interest this year owing to the agitation for home rule in India. When the delegates assembled Thursday the Moderates and Extremists at once locked horns on this issue, and the meeting was adjourned amid much disorder.

When the delegates reassembled yesterday their overheated passions broke loose a second time, and the platform from which moderation and constitutional action had been advised was rushed by the Extremists in a body, who loudly demanded the speedy establishment of complete home rule.

Chairs and tables were broken in the scrimmage and table legs and other pieces of shattered furniture were used by the delegates as bludgeons upon each other.

The fighting became fierce and many delegates sustained serious injuries before the police finally came in and cleared the hall.

POINTED GUN FOR JOKE.

Terrace Wept Bitterly When He Heard Old Man Was Dead.

Brampton, Dec. 28.—When John Terrace recovered consciousness and was told that William Curry was dead, he broke down and wept.

He was preparing to go to bed, he declares, when "for a bit of foolery," he pointed the gun at James Curry.

Curry answered him sharply, and the old man came to the door of his bedroom in his nightdress and asked what the quarrel was about. Terrace states he answered him that there was no quarrel at all, and to go back, but that the old gentleman rushed up close to him and the younger man knocked the weapon up in his hands. In doing so the gun was discharged, the shot entering the left breast of the old man.

He declares he had no intention of harming anybody.

Terrace arrived in Canada from Welsen-on-Tyne only Dec. 4. He has a wife and two children in England.

The Toronto immigration officials recall that Terrace arrived here Dec. 4, dead broke, having been robbed while on his way over on the steamship Manitoba. The next day he was engaged by James Curry.

POND MYSTERY UNSOLVED.

Newark Citizens Cannot Identify the Beautiful Woman's Body.

New York, Dec. 28.—While the mystery surrounding the circumstances of the murder of the unknown young woman whose body was found nearly submerged in a pond on the outskirts of Harrison, N.J., appears no nearer solution than when the body was discovered, the theory which the detectives are now working on is that the woman came to her death in Newark and her body carried to the lonely pond, that the real scene of the crime and the identity of the slayer might be concealed.

The Newark police are searching for the slayer, who is believed to have met the young woman by appointment in Newark, and then lured her to her death. Evidence was obtained yesterday that the woman was seen in Newark on Christmas evening.

Prisoners Had a Hot Time.

Kingston, Dec. 28.—All Christmas night there was a hot time in the penitentiary. The prisoners kept pounding in their cells and sang, "We'll Hang O'Leary on a Sour Apple Tree."

The guards were powerless to silence them, and they contented themselves with marking 27 for the dungeon, but as there are only 11 cells in the dark place, the prison of isolation, closed for some time, had to be opened for the surplus offenders.

Thomas Murphy attempted to commit suicide in the Queen's Hotel on Thursday night by taking carbolic acid. Medical aid may have saved his life.

Steamship Mount Royal Overdue.

St. John, N. B., Dec. 28.—There is much uneasiness in this port over the non-arrival of the C. P. R. steamship Mount Royal, seven days overdue from Antwerp.

Officials here believe some word would be received yesterday, but they were disappointed. The Lake Michigan, which left Antwerp five days after the Mount Royal, arrived here Thursday, but did not see her.

The captain of the Lake Michigan says the passage out was very rough, gales and terrific seas being encountered all the way across.

Cheese Factory Burned.

Brockville, Dec. 28.—Thursday night the cheese factory owned by Stevens and Halladay at Phillipsville caught fire in the drying-room and was burned to the ground. Most of the utensils were saved, but nine cheese packages went up in smoke. Loss about $1,500. Covered by insurance.

Congress v. Conference.

London, Dec. 26.—(C. A. P.)—Sir Kinlock Cooke, in a letter to The Morning Post, says the object that the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada seem to have in view is to limit, if not stop altogether the flow of immigration from this country to Canada and thereby to nullify the resolution passed at the recent Imperial conference that it is desirable to encourage British emigrants to proceed to British colonies rather than to foreign countries.

AGED FARMER SHOT

William Curry Brutally Murdered Near Brampton.

HIRED MAN THE ASSASSIN

Fatal Row on Christmas Night—Aged Victim Was Going to the Assistance of His Son Who Had Been Threatened—Murderer Was Overpowered After a Hard Fight and Lodged in Brampton Jail.

Brampton, Dec. 27.—John Terrace, an English immigrant of 25 years, is in Brampton jail charged with one of the blackest murders in the annals of Peel County. His victim was William Curry, one of the most esteemed farmers of Toronto Township, while a son, County Councillor James Curry, escaped death only after a desperate fight for his life.

A special despatch gives the following details of the murder:

Toronto Township, in which so many tragic deaths have taken place in the past few years, was the scene on Christmas day of a brutal and apparently premeditated murder. The victim was William Curry, an old and very well-known farmer living at lot 3 in the 6th concession. The murderer is John Terrace, a young Englishman of about 25 years of age, who was employed as a farm hand with Mr. Curry's son, James Curry.

The facts, so far as can be ascertained, are as follows: Mr. Curry and his son had been spending Christmas day with Mrs. Black, a daughter, who lived near by. They came home in the evening, and after doing the work at the barn sat about the table for a time reading. The old gentleman had gone to bed.

Terrace said to a boy, who was also employed on the farm, "We had better go to bed."

Instead of doing so, however, he secured a double-barrelled shotgun and turning to Mr. James Curry said to him, "You had the laugh on me yesterday, but I have it on you now."

It appears the day before a Brampton pump man had been doing some work on the farm and there was a general laugh about the awkwardness of the Englishman.

Curry said to him: "Your fooling me," to which Terrace replied, "No, I'm going to shoot you."

Curry replied, "The gun is not loaded."

"Oh yes it is," answered Terrace, "I loaded it this afternoon."

Hearing the conversation Mr. Curry, Sr., who was in the adjoining room, came out to the door and enquired what was the matter.

Terrace said to him: "You take another step and I'll shoot you." Almost immediately he discharged one barrel, the shot entering the old gentleman's left breast above the heart. He staggered back and was able to get into bed.

James Curry at once seized Terrace, and in the scuffle the lamp was knocked from the table and went out. The gun was discharged a second time without effect. Terrace then took from his pocket a heavy iron crank belonging to a self-feeding stove and with this he struck James Curry on the head. Finally, however, he was overpowered, Curry securing the iron with which he struck the murderer a blow on the head, rendering him unconscious. Meanwhile the boy had gone for assistance.

Although in an apparently dying condition Terrace was securely tied and attention given to the wounded man. Dr. Aikens was soon in attendance, but the wound was of a character to make assistance impossible. After four hours suffering, death relieved his agony.

County Crown Attorney McFadden and County Constable George Broddy have arrived and taken charge of the case. At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon the prisoner was brought to Brampton jail, where he is still in a semi-unconscious state, but will no doubt recover in a day or two. He is a young man between 25 and 30 years of age, about five feet eleven inches tall, and weighs about 175 pounds. He had only been in the employ of Mr. Curry for three weeks, being engaged in Toronto for one month only. He is an Englishman and came to Canada recently from Newcastle.

Coroner Heggie viewed the remains and arranged for an inquest to be held at Elmbank on Monday next.

Mr. Curry was 80 years of age, and was a well-known and highly respected farmer, and lived for many years in Brampton. He had been living with his son and daughter for the past three years. The funeral will take place on Saturday afternoon.

Among the articles found in Terrace's effects is a photo of himself, a woman and child. Presumably, therefore, he leaves a wife and child in England.

It will come out in the evidence that Terrace secured cartridges from James Curry's room, and that the day before the murder he had been out shooting. A neighbor named McKay heard the gun discharged that afternoon. Two cartridges which fit the gun were found on the prisoner's person.

The prisoner has told a somewhat remarkable story, which has little value, however, owing to his condition as a result of the blow from the iron crank.

St. John, N. B., Dec. 28.—A woman named Mrs. Edward Chisholm smothered herself in bed Thursday night while in a drunken stupor.

DEATH ROLL REACHES EIGHT

Eighteen Reported Badly Injured In Collision on Elevated Track at Camden, N. J.—Wreckage Took Fire—Other Smash Was at Lenox—G. T. R. Express Runs Into Coal Train—All Trainmen.

Camden, N. J., Dec. 28.—Three persons were killed and 18 injured in a collision on the elevated tracks of the Pennsylvania Railroad, just outside the station here, yesterday, when a Pemberton accommodation train ran into the rear-end of an Atlantic City express. A heavy fog was the principal contributory cause of the accident. The dead are: C. P. Sontjen, Stanwick, N. J.; J. L. Garbanini, Mount Holley, N. J.; T. L. Webster, Merchantville, N. J.

Several of the injured may die. All those killed or injured were passengers in the first car of the Pemberton accommodation.

There was a very thick fog when the accident occurred, and it is believed that this condition is the primary cause of the collision.

The wreckage immediately took fire from the hot coals from the Pemberton locomotive and the fire departments of Camden were called into service. The fact that the collision occurred on the elevated structure made the work of rescue difficult. None of the cars left the elevated structure.

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 28.—In a dense fog a collision took place at Lenox, Mich., 35 miles north of here, at 7.30 o'clock last night, between Grand Trunk through train No. 5, southbound, from Port Huron to Detroit, and a northbound coal train half a mile long, which had taken the switch, which, however, had been left open, and the passenger train at 40 miles an hour left the main line and plunged headlong into the first of the two engines of the coal train, plowing underneath the leader and bending the second.

Three of the dead are still in the wreckage. Tyler's body was recovered, and McCall died two hours after being extricated. He had lost one leg and received other severe injuries.

Engineer Fred Hang and Fireman Washburn was in the second engine of the doubleheader. The former was caught in the wreckage, but escaped uninjured, while Washburn, who jumped, was only slightly hurt.

Four years ago at the same place there was a collision from a similar cause, two engineers being killed.

The passenger coaches remained on the rails, and no one was hurt, though the first end of the baggage car was demolished.

It is said that the engineer was unable to see any signal owing to the heavy fog.

The dead are: James Bennett, engineer, Detroit; Andrew Bohnski, engineer, Detroit; Willard Tyler, switchman, Detroit; George Boughner, fireman, Detroit; Albert McCall, fireman, Port Huron.

The injured are: Edward Duval, baggageman, Lenox, Mich., and J. Washburn, fireman, Lenox, Mich.

Gale on British Coast.

London, Dec. 28.—An easterly gale has been prevailing for the past 80 hours and still shows no signs of abatement. Terrible seas are running along the British and Irish coasts. Many wrecks have been reported. The Cunarder Lucania was not able to enter Queenstown.

None of the incoming steamers sighted the Leyland line steamer Cambrian, before reported with her shaft broken in tow of the steamer William Cliff, and it is the opinion among seafaring men that the Cliff had to cast the Cambrian adrift. If this is the case the Cliff will stand by the disabled vessel and take here in tow again when the weather moderates.

Elmira, N. Y., Dec. 28.—T. F. Stockbine of Susquehanna, a fireman on the Erie Railroad, was feeding the furnace of an extra eastbound freight engine when the drawhead connecting the tender pulled out and let the steelplate on which he was working drop to the ground. Stockbine fell under the wheels and was cut into small pieces by the long train, which passed over him.

KILLED BY ARSENIC

Poison Found in Exhumed Body of Mrs. Rochette.

JURY BLAMES THE HUSBAND

Coroner's Verdict of Murder In Death of Quebec Woman — The Husband Married a Few Days After Wife's Death—Is Now on Honeymoon Trip — The Police Are Now Looking For the Murderer.

Quebec, Dec. 27.—The coroner's inquest on the body of the deceased, Mrs. Omer Rochette, whose death and subsequent exhumation has caused so much comment and so many different stories took place yesterday. Dr. Marois and Dr. Vallee, who made the analysis of the stomach, stated that it was found deceased died by arsenic poisoning.

At 3.30 yesterday afternoon the jury rendered a verdict to the effect that deceased died of arsenical poisoning, criminally administered by her husband, Omer Rochette, who is held criminally responsible.

Ten days after his wife's death Rochette married a young girl named Marceau. The newly-married couple left immediately on a honeymoon trip to Montreal.

A nephew of the husband stated that he was present during the two last days preceding his aunt's death at Rochette's house, and that any medicine given to the deceased was almost always given to her by the husband.

When last heard of, Rochette and his second wife were in Montreal, but he is supposed to have left that city on the 9th instant. Chief McCaskill has the matter in hand, and it is expected that Omer Rochette will soon be captured. Rochette was formerly proprietor of the Merchants' Club here.

AUSTRALIA'S FAST SERVICE.

New Contract With Line Plying From British Ports.

Ottawa, Dec. 27.—Australia has made a new steamship arrangement with the line now plying between that colony and Britain, according to a report received here yesterday from Mr. Ross, Canadian Trade Commissioner, at Sydney. The new arrangement is for a period of ten years from 1910. It is for a fortnightly service as at present, but the boats are to be larger and faster, 11,000 tons and 17 knots being required, with ample cold storage facilities. There is a special freight rate as a new feature. It is provided that on butter not more than a cent a pound may be charged and on fruit not more than $14.60 a ton. The new subsidy is for $850,000 a year, an increase of $250,000.

The sailing of the new steamer Den of Ruthven, from Sydney to Vancouver has been cancelled. The boat has to carry coal to Honolulu and bring a return cargo of lumber from British Columbia.

UPRISING IN CHINA

Dowager Empress Alarmed at Growth of Popular Agitation.

EDICT AGAINST MEETINGS

Cry For Recovery of Rights—Spreading With Great Rapidity—Government Thoroughly Aroused—Question of British Patrol—Position of Yuan Shi Kai Strengthened—Suppression of Piracy.

Pekin, Dec. 28.—The Dowager Empress has given verbal orders to the Interior Department and to the police to suppress all public meetings in Pekin and there is reason to believe that this order will be extended to the province.

The popular agitation along the lines of "rights recovery" is growing in a phenomenal manner. The question of provincial as against federal sovereignty enters largely into the matter. Women's societies, schools for boys and for girls, the family newspapers and the political press all are participating in the agitation, and for a month past the Government here has been receiving telegrams in increasing numbers expressing the strong desire of the senders that the rights which have been alienated from them by foreigners be restored to the Chinese.

The movement has reached such magnitude that the Government is thoroughly alarmed and is striving to find a conciliatory position between the revolutionary agitators and those who consider themselves to be aggrieved. The agitations embraces the question of the patrol of the West river by Great Britain, in an effort to put an end to the piracy there, and leading Englishmen here apprehend that the present popular hostility will result in an enquiry into the British trade.

The Government is relying on the support of Great Britain, whose insistence upon China's maintenance of her original position has produced an apparent solidarity among the Chinese Ministers. The pressure of the British Government is strengthening the position of Yuan Shikaik, whose security and influence in Pekin is regarded by foreigners as essential to the safety and progress of China.

It is declared here that the foreign agitation in the matter of the attitude adopted by Great Britain with regard to Manchuria and the warning of Russia concerning the annulment to the telegraph convention, have led the British Foreign Office to take action and it is understood that this has been in the form of representations to the Tokio Government. China, it is stated here, considers the attitude taken by Japan to be based upon impossible claims and Japan, it is averred, is taking advantage of China's complications with Great Britain in order to postpone the negotiations regarding Manchuria.

Travelers arriving here complain of what they call the organized incivility, and in some cases even the "brutal conduct" of the Japanese trainmen and guards on the Manchurian railway.

BOY BURGLAR SENTENCED.

Cook and Porter Locked In Blazing Parlor Car.

Stratford. Dec. 28.—Anthony Steeves, one of the boys convicted of wholesale burglary in this city, was yesterday sentenced to two years in Kingston Penitentiary.

A peculiar accident happened in the parlor cafe car between Stratford and Goderich. A gasolene pipe exploded, and the concussion slammed the door, locking the cook and the porter inside. Flames sprang up and the two men were in imminent danger of a horrible death. By breaking open the door of the kitchen when the fire started they managed to get away. Their clothing was badly burnt. The car was badly damaged, and was taken to Toronto for repairs.

Halifax School Closed.

Halifax, Dec. 28.—Compton Avenue Public school, an eight-roomed building, accommodating six hundred pupils, was gutted by fire last night. The loss will be about $20,000, with $9.500 insurance on the building and $1,250 on the furnishings. The janitors were cleaning the building during the day, and the fire is supposed to have originated from a fire in the basement which they used to heat water. The school had been closed for the holidays.

Counsel Darrow Very Ill.

Boise, Idaho, Dec. 28.—Too ill to stand while speaking to the jury, Clarence Darrow, chief counsel for the defence in the Pettibone trial, sat in his chair as he outlined his case. He spoke with effort at times and never raised his voice above a conversational tone.

Darrow's statement made it evident that to a great degree the same line of defence would be followed as in the Haywood trial.

A TRULY IDEAL WIFE

HER HUSBAND'S BEST HELPER

Vigorous Health Is the Great Source of Power to Inspire and Encourage —All Women Should Seek It.

One of the most noted, successful and richest men of this century, in a recent article, has said, "Whatever I am and whatever success I have attained in this world I owe all to my wife. From the day I first knew her she has been an inspiration, and the greatest helpmate of my life."

Mrs. Bessie Ainsley

To be such a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband, to inspire him to make the most of himself, should be a woman's constant study.

If a woman finds that her energies are flagging, that she gets easily tired, dark shadows appear under her eyes, she has backache, headaches, bearing-down pains, nervousness, irregularities or the blues, she should start at once to build up her system by a tonic with specific powers, such as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Following we publish by request a letter from a young wife:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"Ever since my child was born I have suffered, as I hope few women ever have, with inflammation, female weakness, bearing-down pains, backache and wretched headaches. It affected my stomach so I could not enjoy my meals, and half my time was spent in bed.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made me a well woman, and I feel so grateful that I am glad to write and tell you of my marvelous recovery. It brought me health, new life and vitality."—Mrs. Bessie Ainsley, 611 South 10th Street, Tacoma, Wash.

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Ainsley it will do for every sick and ailing woman.

If you have symptoms you don't understand write to Mrs. Pinkham, daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free and always helpful.

Running

ANOTHER IRISHMAN COMING.

Hoche, the Irish sprinter, has announced his intention of coming to Canada to work under Tom Flanagan, of Toronto. He is a 10 seconds man, and recently defeated Morton, the great English sprinter, on grass in 10 1-5. He is said to be a very graceful runner, taking a seven foot stride, but hardly raising his foot off the ground.

TOM COLEY WON

The annual Christmas Day ten mile road race of Hamilton was run under most unfavorable weather conditions, the course being nakle deep in slush. Coley won with ease in 59.04 4-5, the time being slow owing to the poor footing. The men who started last did not finish were John Sims, Hamilton, Grant Furry, Grimsby; Sidney Jennings, Hamilton; C. Kirkpatrick, Hamilton; H. Whitehorne, Hamilton. The record is held by Tom Longboat, who last year covered the course in 54.50. Coley was the favorite in the betting, being backed down from 6 to 5 to 3 to 5.

GOOD TEAM AT BELLEVILLE

Belleville Ontario: The names sent in to the O. H. A. for the Junior hockey team indicate that Belleville will have a good team this winter, despite the absence of Pepper and Connolly from the line up.

JUMPED THE PRICE.

Barrie hockeyists are in the sleighs of despondent mode. No special are the juniors released yet the O. H. A. than they are up against a hard proposition in the shape of excessive rent for the use of the rink, and there is a danger that the club may offer all let the schedule go off by default.

MARKHAM STRONG

Markham Sun: It is expected the strongest team which ever represented Markham High School will be played on the rink this winter in the O. H. A. With two exceptions the boys that made such a good showing at the tournament last winter are still available, and there is plenty of material to fill up the vacancies left by Shank and Sargent.

PRO. HOCKEY IN WINNIPEG

A Winnipeg paper gives a graphic description of the opening professional game in that city:

Wednesday night saw strikes like the gladiators did their battle axes in the days of old, when players in last night's game turned the Auditorium into a scene of carnage, and instead of witnessing a scientific exhibition of the favorite winter game the spectators were forced to see victim after victim carried off the blood-stained ice, and to finally have the game stopped altogether as the result of a representation of brutal violence. The occasion was a meeting of the Winnipeg and St. Paul teams to decide the right of admission to the senior series. When play stopped the Leafs were leading by a score of 4 to 1, and the time of time had elapsed, but it was not sufficient to provide the game to the satisfaction of the people in the city. The Winnipeg man had been put out of business completely, others had to leave the dressing rooms, groans, and groans when Hall departed, probably the most substitute, or the head. He fell like a sunbeam, and appeared in the records, and the unfortunate player was carried out in a condition approximately equal to that alive. Joe Hall had been seriously ill for a long time on the side, and jumped on the ice just as the Winnipegs were making a rush, and he was carried into Tobin, knocking him off the ice. When prostrate the Pugilistic player seemed to be sick at Hall and missed, and the latter skated back and with a vicious swing caught him fair across the temple with the side of his stick. Practically the whole crowd in attendance was already thoroughly disgusted, and this proved the finishing touch. Even before it was seen the Winnipegs were so disgusted out again, many had left the rink, while others booed and hissed the disgraced player. It was unquestionably a black eye for professional hockey.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

Some of the Berlin professional players are on strike before the season begins. Corbeau, of Fenelon Falls, who was one of the Berlin Crack's bright augury for the future.

Copper Cliff must be a pretty poor place to carry on the O. H. A. intermediate hockey team without a rink. The players have to go to Sudbury to practise and play team games.

Brockville Times; Alfred Sirrine, who learned to play hockey in Brockville, and later figured on the Smith's Falls Federal League team, will figure again this season on the Brockville Junior team of the O. H. A. Sirrine's offer to the ice he will receive a cash bonus of $1,000. He is forced in a foundry drawing $5.75 per day, and pays nowadays to be a good hockey player.

Gravenhurst Banner; Bracebridge hockey club has developed freely profit extremities. As the result of last year it was the glassy eye they had. Perhaps it is just as well that they should drop out, it has saved the city dignity. They nearly captured the Junior lacrosse championship — not quite, however, and it seems to have got on their nerves. Last year they were not thus, our full of anxiety to do so, or. We wonder if the local option scare up there has affected their backers to such an extent that it makes it impossible to finance the game? Whatever the cause its Gravenhurst won't dwell their experiments in group IX of the junior series of the O.H.A.

Trotting

PREDICTS NEW RECORDS

John Boden, of the Montreal Jockey Club and secretary of the New York State racing commission, who is on his way east from the new Santa Anita track at Los Angeles, is authority for the statement that the new race-course is the fastest in the world. He says he accounts for this by the presumption that at the Santa Anita valley in which the track is located was the bottom of the sea. Boden declares this theory is borne out by the fact that the location is fine silt, which all track superintendents endeavor to obtain when they are sure to be made on that grand speeding track.

BLACKBIRD GOING FAST.

In preparation for the winter campaign some of the Dunville flyers have been doing some fast work on the Dufferin half-mile snow track. On Friday Blackbird did a phenomenal trial, doing the mile in 2.15. Prairie Oyster and Joe Allen, some of his colts, worked in 2.33 and 2.29 1-2. Blackbird, who is under suspension, will be eligible on association tracks on February 28th.

Odds and Ends of Sport.

FROM STRING TO FIGURE.

Amos Hustle, the idol of the National League fans a few years ago, when he was without a peer as a pitcher, is now diving for pearls as a diving, if a despatch from Richmond, Ind., is to be believed. When his pitching arm went wrong Hustle earned the princely sum of $1.50 a day as a pearl diver in a pearl mill. He soon grew tired of this. Reports that pearl fishers at Vincennes were making a rich strike attracted the former great twirler.

IRISH GAME OF HURLING

Star, Toronto: is to have a state of Ireland's national game—hurling—and, as usual, the Irish-Canadian Athletic Club is mixed up in the matter. Jim Finnegan and A. G. Heron have been talking about forming a hurling team ever since the club got well under way, but "talk" was as far as it went until M. J. Cowell, the manager, wrote to Jim Finnegan and pointed out that hurling is the greatest game on earth to condition an athlete, it brings into play every muscle in the body, and is especially good for runners, jumpers, and boxers. He wrote to Finnegan asking for a complete outfit of hurling clubs, balls, goals, and nets.

Mr. Cred explained for the benefit of the uninitiated that hurling is something like hockey, only it is played on a football field with a full instead of a puck. There are fifteen men a side, divided into goal tenders, backs, half backs, wings, and scrimmagers. The idea is to drive the ball, which is a lot larger than a baseball but lighter, between posts driven at the ends of the field. If it goes between certain posts points only are counted, if between others, goals are counted. The sticks used are shaped like hockey sticks, but are much heavier. There are no offside rules, but the only legitimate check is a drive with the point of the shoulder.

"What happens if you take a swing at the ball, and wallop a man in the eye?" Tom Flanagan was asked.

"A fight, sir, as irishmen's games," he replied solemnly.

HE OWNS THE TOWN

Gravenhurst Banner; Jack Miles, who looks the All-Canada lacrosse team to Australia last summer is a candidate for the Orillia Council. Jack may as well take the Mayor's chair when he is elected it, as the citizens of that town are disposed to give such a popular candidate anything he asks for.

WILL BE REAL DANDIES.

Belleboro Examiner: The Strathcona will have one of the neatest and most showy uniforms that has been seen here for some time. The body of the sweater is of white with neck and cuffs of red. A red sash runs diagonally across the sweater coming to the hipes. "Strathcona" The O.H.A. team will that of red wear red and white this year instead of the familiar old blue and white.

CHAMPIONS MATCHED

Joe Rogers, of New York, the "American Apollo," and George Hackenschmidt, the "Russian Lion," signed articles in London, Eng., on Tuesday for wrestle catch-as-catch-can, for the championship title of the world and a side bet of $2,500. Le match to take place between Jan. 17 and 13 and January 31. They will divide the large stake offered two thirds to the winner, balance to the loser. The conditions are three pin falls, lee minutes allowed between each.

ACTIVE OARSMAN AT 98

John Flemming, retired Halifax harbor pilot, is probably the oldest active oarsman in the world. Mr. Flemming, who resides at Ketch harbor, is 98 years of age, but nevertheless is as fit as ever he proved from his home up to Halifax City, a distance of 12 miles, this summer, and did not worry over fatigue. Indeed, it was he who piloted the famous Nova Scotia runner, Hallahan, out of Halifax harbor through the southeast passage, while a fleet was awaiting the appearance of the Halifaxian off the mouth of the harbor.

ROLLER RINK STUNT.

Manager Craigie, of the Goderich roller skating rink, got on an interesting event lately in the form of an endurance race. There were nine starters, and the race was for seven hours and a quarter. The first prize, $15 in cash, was won by Dan Higgins, who skated 103 miles in the time; the second prize, a jug of Nor. Lion, presented by the Western Canada Flour Mills Co., was won by P. Duff, whose distance was 95 miles, and the third prize, a pair of hockey skates, presented by C. Cribbes, went to F. Riley, who covered 92 miles in the time.

In a 24-hour bicycle race at Boston, which began Christmas eve, the winning team covered 461 miles 3 laps.

Montreal and Shamrock teams opened the season Saturday night, the latter winning a rather slow game, by 7-4. The ice was not in good condition for fast play.

The Stratford rink opened Wednesday night for the season. The "Indians", the intermediate hockey team, will be able to practise now for the game on Jan. 6th. Lindsay will have to get a move on to be able to have enough practice before the game.

In England, athletes, especially football players, recommend the application of a tablespoonful of mustard to the hot bath. The beneficial results are many. The water becomes "soft" and the effect of the mustard is to impart a warming, soothing glow to the skin, and to eliminate all that exposure to cold is likely to bring.

Lindsay's First Abduction Case

Mr. Marion's Legal Claim Found to be Defective—Case Abandoned.

Evening Post of Dec. 30.

The final chapter in the Marion child abduction case was enacted in Ogdensburg, N.Y., on Friday. As was stated in the Post Saturday evening the child had been located in Ogdensburg, and Mr. Marion had gone to that city to see what could be done in the case. On Friday evening he succeeded in paying the child from the hospitle station, and had a talk with her.

As a result of the conversation that took place, Mr. Marion decided that it would be very unwise on his part to have anything further to do with the child, as she had been completely won over by the mother who had abducted her. He also found that the case was weak as the adoption papers had only been signed by the mother, when they should have had the signature of both parents.

Mr. Marion naturally feels very much put out about the case, as he has lost considerable time and money.

Lockages on Trent Canal During the Past Season

A Total of 10,451 Lockages Between Opening and Closing of Navigation—Over 88,000 Passengers Passed Through the Eight Locks During the Season.

Superintendent J. H. McClelan, of the Trent Canal, furnishes us with the following details concerning the traffic at various points on the system. In this issue we give the lockages for the lower end; in a forthcoming issue we shall publish those for the lower end:

LINDSAY LOCK.

John Makins, Lockmaster.

The number of lockages at the Lindsay lock, is by no means a criterion of the amount of traffic on the Lindsay River. As a matter of fact, there is more trafficl on the Lindsay River than on any other single stretch of water on the Trent Canal. Three boats pop on this stretch of water during the summer months, whilst numerous tug boats find steady employment. As the locks at which the boats pass are below the locks, there are necessarily fewer lockages than there otherwise might be. However, the returns of Mr. Makins, the veteran lockmaster, show that he has had a good season.

The returns from the Lindsay lock are as follows:

	Small Craft	Steam Boats	Barges	Rafts
April	9	5	3	24
May	22	40	12	37
June	28	88	26	7

AN ADVT. IN THIS PAPER PAYS.

THANK YOU.

We wish to extend our thanks to those who contributed to the success that we have had with our holiday stock.

We had some fears that in view of recent conditions we had provided more goods than we should, but the result shows that the character of the stock and the reasonableness of the prices were appreciated by the public and that it responded with hearty good will.

Trade was fully satisfactory in volume and was made doubly satisfactory by the manner in which our line was appreciated by careful buyers.

Nearly Opposite Post office, Lindsay

REMEMBER

Tuesday, January

THE WEST IS GROWING.

The West is picking up. The action of the banks, the Office of Fuel Press points out, has had a steadying effect. Land speculation has been wiped out on the other hand, western traders have begun to pay their debts to the eastern wholesaler, and manufacturer, and with the larger amount of money in circulation in the west owing to the higher prices paid this year, the situation has considerably improved.

This year the farmers of the West are receiving an average of 80c. per bushel cash on the streets, and this represents an amount of $10,000,000 placed in the hands of western farmers up to the present date. Last year the summer of bumper crops up to December 10th, was 25,000,000, but the price paid the farmers averaged only 60c. per bushel, totaling $15,250,000. Therefore it will be seen that the country at points off this year is by $2,250,000, and this represents wheat alone. Oats are bringing 35c. per bushel to the farmer, while last year the price paid was only 25c. But no allowance is here made except for oats already produced. Taking these figures as a set, found that the increased price of oats, despite the small crop, represents a difference of nearly $10,000,000 in favor of this year over the amount received by the farmers last year.

The pessimist seems to be in danger of losing his situation.

ARGUMENTS OF THE LIQUOR TRADE

(The Globe, Dec. 28).

If the arguments against local option, presented by the liquor interest in the series of advertisements now appearing in The Globe and in other newspapers are the best that can be offered, it is no wonder the trade is left without a friend in the daily journalism of this Province. The complaint of the trade is that "Local Option makes Drunkards," and that this is an "education and involves the liquor traffic itself as introvert to the making of 'divers' and of 'drunkards'" that the wonder grows why an association of business men spend money in making public the compromising confession. It is the liquor traffic that makes drunkards, for every glass in which the traffic is engaged on illegally or not of lawful source, whether that glass is a gorgeous barroom in a great hotel or a grimy hovel in a back alley, is a "divers" and it is that liquor traffic that makes "drunkards", for were there no traffic there would be no degraded and helpless victims, is it the agents that the traffic employs the gain made out of it by its promoters that, give the "decent sap" its occupation, and it is that "decent sap" drink and for gain in defiance of public opinion that "necessitates the social gap" for the "decent sap."

Friends of temperance reform should be doubly heartened by the line of defence to which the liquor traffic is driven in the present local option campaign. That traffic has absent its platform advocates left. We do not know of one newspaper in the Province that champions its cause. The advertising columns of most newspapers are open to its announcements as to those of all other legalized businesses. But no daily journal feels under obligation to the liquor interests beyond the payment of its quota of public discussion in a freedom-loving. The best method of promoting temperance reform is an appreciation in Canada, and prohibition, local option, Government control, high license, low license, and all other proposals are matters for discussion, and certain it is that the barroom has disproved its right to be regarded as a useful or necessary institution in civilized society. Communities in which public opinion is strong and active in favor of local option would do well to wipe out the barroom altogether, and they may do it the more deliberately and confidently because of the lame arguments presented by the liquor interests.

DUNDAS & FLAVELLES LIMITED LINDSAY

...Sutcliffe's January Surplus Stock Sale...

A SACRIFICE SALE THAT WILL START THE COMMUNITY BUYING RELIABLE DRY GOODS AT MOST UNUSUAL LOW PRICES

Every Line in Our Immense Stock Will be Reduced in Price From 10 Cents to 50 Cents on the Dollar, and THIS WILL BE ONE OF OUR GREATEST SALES.

The money stringency cry has tightened the purse strings very unnecessarily and especially in this community where the crops are average and prices on many products doubled. Our country is solid and as productive as ever. The banks have repressed the speculative spirit and it is well for Canada that they have. Confidence is being fast restored and there is no doubt but the spring will see Canada and especially this part where solid industries surrounded by a thriving people and progressive farmers, flourishing as heretofore.

We have always reduced our stock during January on account of February 1st, being our Inventory Day, when we determine the business done in the six months gone past. However we have determined that this will be

THE MOST AGGRESSIVE SALE IN OUR HISTORY

All Surplus Stock to the Extent of Ten Thousand Dollars Must be Cleared and We Know That to Accomplish This We Must SACRIFICE PROFITS and in many COST PRICES WILL NOT BE CONSIDERED.

Prior to our taking over the Peterboro business we held a similar sale and it satisfied the public as few sales do. This will beanother such sale only prices will be far lower and the savings speak much louder than on any former occasion.

We do not employ any sales agency to operate our sales and draw a percentage of the receipts. We want this percentage to go into the pockets of our customers and earn for us their confidence and good will in a greater measure than ever. All our sales are originated and planned in our own advertising department and have the backing of our twelve years doing business among the people of this district.

What We Advertise We Always do. The prices we quote are Genuine and backed up with our Fifty Thousand Dollar Stock of Dry Goods which is as carefully and well bought as any firm doing business

We will be marking down and repricing throughout our store from now until sale day, but that evertning will be reduced in price we will be compelled to close all day Monday, January 6th.

Sale Commences at 9 a.m. Tuesday Morning, Jan. 7th and will continue during the month of January, but we would advise your coming early as some lines are not sufficiently large to last the full length of this sale.

The prices we will quote during this sale will be so low that the present prices asked by manufacturers will not permit us to replace them for spring, but we have said everything to have a reduced price for this occasion and we will not protect the best selling article in the store. You simply take your choice, make the selection to suit yourself and save money on every ten cent piece you spend in the store.

Ferry's Free Seed Book.

For half a century thousands and thousands of farmers and gardeners have regarded "Ferry's Seed Annual" as the best guide for the buying of seeds, but for their planting and care. Daily references to its text and illustrations proves it to be the actual beginning of a successful season. The new edition for 1908 is now ready for free mailing to all who write to the publishers for a copy.

It is a high tribute to the house of D. M. Ferry & Co. that two generations have planted Ferry's Seeds, each succeeding year adding to the confidence that "Seed trouble" will never arise when Ferry's seeds are planted as "Ferry's Seed Annual" says they should be.

Another remarkable feature developed by the house of Ferry is the method of distributing seeds to dealers throughout the country, so that the planters everywhere can secure at their home stores exactly when they want it, with the absolute assurance that it is fresh and fertile. Everyone should send at once to D. M. Ferry & Co., Windsor, Ont., for the 1908 edition of "Ferry's Seed Annual."

COMMUNICATIONS

AN EXPLANATION.

(To the Editor of The Post.)

Sir,—Under the heading "Held a Prisoner in Peoro Studio" in a recent issue, you refer to the unpleasant experience of being locked in a studio. I being a friend of the individual, would have liked your contributor to have mentioned the important fact that the subject under notice is somewhat deaf, which would prevent him hearing the departure of Messrs. Grey and Lee. Furthermore, I should like to feel quite satisfied that the gentlemen referred to, who, I believe, have the sense of hearing, and who saw the strangest sight, had the good sense to put practice a grim joke, for at the time of "Peloe and good will to all men", there is often a disposition to have jokes at the expense and pain of the other fellow.

Thanking you in anticipation for insertion, I am yours truly,

A FRIEND,

Lindsay, Dec. 30th, 1907.

Artificial Maple Syrup.

Writing to a feminine publication a woman gives the formula for making "genuine maple syrup."

Granulated sugar, 7 lbs.
Hot water, 4 pints.
Tri maple, 1-2 oz.
Dissolve sugar, stir in the tri-maple, and strain through a damp cloth.

She says the product cannot be told from that extracted from the tree, and costs 15 cents a quart.

Hard on Nesbitt.

(Toronto News)

The trouble with the Whitney government, the mass of the conservative party and the general body of citizens would rather give Dr. Nesbitt an increase of salary as registrar, where he had comparatively nothing to do than make him mayor over at a smaller salary, and with the opportunity of doing a good many things that probably would be better left undone.

Lindsay, January 1st. 1908.

GENTLEMEN:—The end of the year means Stocktaking. A careful Stocktaking of the business situation is also interesting and profitable.

Quite recently there was a slump after a long period of splendid business all over the country. Someone discovered that currency was scarce and immediately set up a howl. Political firebrands and other schemers took it up and worked it overtime. Complications set in, some fatalities occurred, specialists relieved the situation, but the scare was general.

Suddenly it was remembered that our natural resources were never in better shape, our producing capabilities never greater, our consuming power never so large and our transportation facilities wholly inadequate.

Since then the available medium of exchange has been kept on the move. No good business man has held on to a dollar unnecessarily. Confidence is crawling out of the cyclone cellar and we shall all be busy again very soon.

Look cheerful, act confidently, be optimistic. It will help the good work along.

Our trade of selling dependable clothing and furnishings for Men and Boys for the year 1907 was good. This to us is very encouraging, it goes to prove that the buying public looks to quality as well as price.

We want 1908 to be a prosperous year and ask you one and all to join us in this desire.

With the New Year greeting and best wishes, we are

Yours very truly

M. J. CARTER.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

prised, and not quite pleasantly surprised. He walked back to the fireplace, followed by his guest.

The guest seemed nervous and agitated. "I must apologize for the hour of my visit," he said. "My—my time is not quite my own."

Loder waved his hand. "Whose time is his own?" he said.

Chilcote, encouraged by the remark, drew nearer to the fire. Until this moment he had refrained from looking directly at his host. Now, however, he raised his eyes, and, despite his preparation, he recoiled unavoidably before the extraordinary resemblance. Seen here, in the casual surroundings of a badly furnished and crudely lighted room, it was even more astounding than it had been in the mystery of the fog.

"Forgive me," he said again. "It is physical, purely physical. I am bowled over against my will."

Loder smiled. The slight contempt that Chilcote had first inspired rose again, and with it a second feeling less easily defined. The man seemed so unstable, so incapable, yet so grotesquely suggestive to himself.

"The likeness is rather overwhelming," he said, "but not heavy enough to sink under. Come nearer the fire. What brought you here? Curiosity?" There was a wooden armchair by the fireplace. He indicated it with a wave of the hand, then turned and took up his smoldering pipe.

Chilcote, watching him furtively, obeyed the gesture and sat down.

"It is extraordinary!" he said, as if unable to dismiss the subject. "It—it is quite extraordinary!"

The other glanced round. "Let's drop it," he said. "It's so confoundedly obvious." Then his tone changed. "Won't you smoke?" he asked.

"Thanks." Chilcote began to fumble for his cigarettes.

But his host forestalled him. Taking a box from the mantelpiece, he held it out.

"My one extravagance!" he said ironically. "My resources bind me to one; and I think I have made a wise selection. It is about the only vice we haven't to pay for six times over." He glanced sharply at the face so absurdly like his own, then, lighting a fresh spill, offered his guest a light.

Chilcote moistened his cigarette and leaned forward. In the flare of the paper his face looked set and anxious, but Loder saw that the lips did not twitch as they had done on the previous occasion that he had given him a light, and a look of comprehension crossed his eyes.

"What will you have, or, rather, will you have a whisky? I keep nothing else. Hospitality is one of the debarred luxuries."

Chilcote shook his head. "I seldom drink. But don't let that deter you."

Loder smiled. "I have one drink in the twenty-four hours—generally at 2 o'clock, when my night's work is done. A solitary man has to look where he is going."

"You work till 2?"

"Two or 3."

Chilcote's eyes wandered to the desk.

"You write?" he asked.

The other nodded curtly.

"Books?" Chilcote's tone was anxious.

Loder laughed, and the bitter note showed in his voice.

"No; not books," he said.

Chilcote leaned back in his chair and passed his hand across his face. The strong wave of satisfaction that the words woke in him was difficult to conceal.

"What is your work?"

Loder turned aside. "You must not ask that," he said shortly. "When a man has only one capacity, and the capacity has no outlet, he is apt to run to seed in a wrong direction. I cultivate weeds, at abominable labor and a very small reward." He stood with his back to the fire, facing his visitor. His attitude was a curious blending of pride, defiance and despondency.

Chilcote leaned forward again. "Why speak of yourself like that? You are a man of intelligence and education." He spoke questioningly, anxiously.

"Intelligence and education!" Loder laughed shortly. "London is cemented with intelligence. And education! What is education? The court dress necessary to presentation, the wig and gown necessary to the barrister. But do the wig and gown necessarily mean briefs or the court dress royal favor? Education is the accessory. It is influence that is essential. You should know that."

Chilcote moved restlessly in his seat. "You talk bitterly," he said.

The other looked up. "I think bitterly, which is worse. I am one of the unlucky beggars who in the expectation of money have been denied a profession—even a trade, to which to cling in time of shipwreck—and who when disaster comes drift out to sea. I warned you the other night to steer clear of me. I come under the head of flotsam!"

Chilcote's face lighted. "You came a cropper?" he asked.

"No. It was some one else who came the cropper. I only dealt in results."

"Big results?"

"A drop from a probable £80,000 to a certain £800."

Chilcote glanced up. "How did you take it?" he asked.

"I? Oh, I was twenty-five then. I had a good many hopes and a lot of pride; but there is no place for either in a working world."

"But your people?"

"My last relation died with the fortune."

"Your friends?"

Loder laid down his pipe. "I told you I was twenty-five," he said, with the tinge of humor that sometimes crossed his manner. "Doesn't that explain things? I had never taken favors in prosperity. A change of fortune was not likely to alter my ways. As I have said, I was twenty-five." He smiled. "When I realized my position I sold all my belongings with the exception of a table and a few books—which I stored. I put on a walking suit and let my beard grow. Then, with my entire capital in my pocket, I left England without saying goodby to any one."

"For how long?"

"Oh, for six years. I wandered half over Europe and through a good part of Asia in the time."

"And then?"

"Then? Oh, I shaved off the beard and came back to London!" He looked at Chilcote, partly contemptuous, partly amused at his curiosity.

But Chilcote sat staring in silence. The domination of the other's personality and the futility of his achievements baffled him.

Loder saw his bewilderment. "You wonder what the devil I came into the world for," he said. "I sometimes wonder the same myself."

At his words a change passed over Chilcote. He half rose, then dropped back into his seat.

"You have no friends?" he said. "Your life is worth nothing to you?"

Loder raised his head. "I thought I had conveyed that impression."

"You are an absolutely free man."

"No man is free who works for his bread. If things had been different I might have been in such shoes as yours, sauntering in legislative byways. My hopes turned that way once. But hopes, like more substantial things, belong to the past"— He stopped abruptly and looked at his companion.

The change in Chilcote had become more acute. He sat fingering his cigarette, his brows drawn down, his lips set nervously in a conflict of emotions. For a space he stayed very still, avoiding Loder's eyes; then, as if decision had suddenly come to him, he turned and met his gaze.

"How if there was a future," he said, "as well as a past?"

CHAPTER V.

FOR the space of a minute there was silence in the room; then outside in the still night three clocks simultaneously chimed 11, and their announcement was taken up and echoed by half a dozen others, loud and faint, hoarse and resonant, for all through the hours of darkness the neighborhood of Fleet street is alive with chimes.

Chilcote, startled by the jangle, rose from his seat. Then, as if driven by an uncontrollable impulse, he spoke again.

"You probably think I am mad"— he began.

Loder took his pipe out of his mouth. "I am not so presumptuous," he said quietly.

For a space the other eyed him silently, as if trying to gauge his thoughts. Then once more he broke into speech.

"Look here," he said. "I came tonight to make a proposition. When I have made it you'll first of all jeer at me, as I jeered when I made it to myself. Then you'll see its possibilities, as I did. Then," he paused and glanced around the room nervously, "then you'll accept it, as I did." In the uneasy haste of his speech his words broke off almost unintelligibly.

Involuntarily Loder lifted his head to retort, but Chilcote put up his hand. His face was set with the obstinate determination that weak men sometimes exhibit.

"Before I begin I want to say that I am not drunk—that I am neither mad nor drunk." He looked fully at his companion with his restless glance. "I am quite sane—quite reasonable."

Again Loder essayed to speak, but again he put up his hand.

"No. Hear me out. You told me something of your story. I'll tell you something of mine. You'll be the first person, man or woman, that I have confided in for ten years. You say you have been treated shabbily. I have treated myself shabbily, which is harder to reconcile. I had every chance, and I chucked every chance away."

There was a strained pause, then again Loder lifted his head.

"Morphia?" he said very quietly.

Chilcote wheeled around with a scared gesture. "How did you know that?" he asked sharply.

The other smiled. "It wasn't guessing. It wasn't even deduction. You told me or as good as told me in the fog when we talked of Lexington. You were unstrung that night, and I—well, perhaps one gets overobservant from living alone." He smiled again.

Chilcote collapsed into his former seat and passed his handkerchief across his forehead.

Loder watched him for a space. Then he spoke. "Why don't you pull up?" he said. "You are a young man still.

"Why don't you drop the thing?"

Why don't you drop the thing before it gets too late?" His face was unsympathetic, and below the question in his voice lay a note of hardness.

Chilcote returned his glance. The suggestion of reproof had accentuated his pallor. Under his excitement he looked ill and worn.

"You might talk till doomsday, but every word would be wasted," he said irritably. "I'm past praying for by something like six years."

"Then why come here?" Loder was pulling hard on his pipe. "I'm not a dealer in sympathy."

"I don't require sympathy." Chilcote rose again. He was still agitated, but the agitation was quieter. "I want a much more expensive thing than sympathy, and I am willing to pay for it."

The other turned and looked at him. "I have no possession in the world that would be worth a fiver to you," he said coldly. "You're either under a delusion or you're wasting my time."

Chilcote laughed nervously. "Wait," he said. "Wait. I only ask you to wait. First let me sketch you my position. It won't take many words."

"My grandfather was a Chilcote of Westmoreland. He was one of the first of his day and his class to recognize that there was a future in trade, so, breaking his own little twig from the family tree, he went south to Wark and entered a shipowning firm. In thirty years' time he died, the owner of one of the biggest trades in England, having married the daughter of his chief. My father was twenty-four and still at Oxford when he inherited. Almost his first act was to reverse my grandfather's early move by going north and piecing together the family friendship. He married his first cousin, and then, with the Chilcote prestige revived and the shipping money to back it, he entered on his ambition, which was to represent East Wark in the Conservative interest. It was a big fight, but he won—as much by personal influence as by any other. He was an aristocrat, but he was a keen business man as well. The combination carries weight with your lower classes. He never did much in the house, but he was a power to his party in Wark. They still use his name there to conjure with."

Loder leaned forward interestedly.

"Robert Chilcote?" he said. "I have heard of him. One of those fine, unostentatious figures—strong in action, a little narrow in outlook, perhaps, but essential to a country's staying power. You have every reason to be proud of your father."

Chilcote laughed suddenly. "How easily we sum up when a matter is impersonal! My father may have been a fine figure, but he shouldn't have left me to climb to his pedestal."

Loder's eyes questioned. In his newly awakened interest he had let his pipe go out.

"Don't you grasp my meaning?" Chilcote went on. "My father died and I was elected for East Wark. You may say that if I had no real inclination for the position I could have kicked, but I tell you I couldn't. Every local interest, political and commercial, hung upon the candidate being a Chilcote. I did what eight men out of ten would have done. I yielded to pressure."

"You can do for me what no other man in creation could do."

"It was a fine opening!" The words escaped Loder.

"Most prisons have wide gates!" Chilcote laughed again unpleasantly. "That was six years ago. I had started on the morphia track four years earlier, but up to my father's death I had it under my thumb, or believed I had, and in the realization of my new responsibilities and the excitement of the political fight I almost put it aside. For several months after I entered parliament I worked. I believe I made one speech that marked me as a coming man." He laughed derisively. "I even married"—

"Married?"

"Yes—a girl of nineteen, the ward of a great politician. It was a brilliant marriage, politically as well as socially, but it didn't work. I was born without the capacity for love. First the social life palled on me, then my work grew irksome. There was only one factor to make life endurable—morphia. Before six months were out I had fully admitted that."

"But your wife?"

"Oh, my wife knew nothing—knows nothing. It is the political business, the beastly routine of the political life, that is wearing me out." He stopped nervously, then hurried on again. "I tell you it's hard to see the same faces, to sit in the same seat day in, day out, knowing all the time that you must hold yourself in hand, must keep your grip on the reins"—

"It is always possible to apply for the Chiltern Hundreds."

"To retire? Possible to retire?" Chilcote broke into a loud, sarcastic laugh. "You don't know what the local pressure of a place like Wark stands for. Twenty times I have been within an ace of chucking the whole thing. Once last year I wrote privately to Vale, one of our big men there, and hinted that my health was bad. Two hours after he had read my letter he was in my study. Had I been in Greenland the result would have been the same. No; resignation is a meaningless word to a man like me."

Loder looked down. "I see," he said slowly; "I see."

"Then you see everything—the difficulty, the isolation of the position. Five years ago—three—even two years ago—I was able to endure it. Now it gets more unbearable with every month. The day is bound to come when — when" — he paused, hesitating nervously—"when it will be physically impossible for me to be at my post."

Loder remained silent.

"Physically impossible," Chilcote repeated excitedly. "Until lately I was able to calculate—to count upon myself to some extent—but yesterday I received a shock—yesterday I discovered that—that"—again he hesitated painfully — "that I have passed the stage when one may calculate."

The situation was growing more embarrassing. To hide its awkwardness, Loder moved back to the grate and rebuilt the fire, which had fallen low.

Chilcote, still excited by his unusual vehemence, followed him, taking up a position by the mantelpiece.

"Well?" he said, looking down.

Very slowly Loder rose from his task. "Well?" he reiterated.

"Have you nothing to say?"

"Nothing, except that your story is unique and that I suppose I am flattered by your confidence." His voice was intentionally brusque.

Chilcote paid no attention to the voice. Taking a step forward he laid his fingers on the lapel of Loder's coat.

"I have passed the stage where I can count upon myself," he said, "and I want to count upon somebody else. I want to keep my place in the world's eyes and yet be free"—

Loder drew back involuntarily, contempt struggling with bewilderment in his expression.

Chilcote lifted his head. "By an extraordinary chance," he said, "you can do for me what no other man in creation could do. It was suggested to me unconsciously by the story of a book—a book in which men changed identities. I saw nothing in it at the time, but this morning, as I lay in bed, sick with yesterday's fiasco, it came back to me. It rushed over my mind in an inspiration. It will save me and make you. I'm not insulting you, though you'd like to think so."

Without remark Loder freed himself from the other's touch and walked back to his desk. His anger, his pride, and, against his will, his excitement were all aroused.

He sat down, leaned his elbow on the desk and took his face between his hands. The man behind him undoubtedly talked madness; but after five years of dreary sanity madness had a fascination. Against all reason it stirred and roused him. For one instant his pride and his anger faltered before it, then common sense flowed back again and adjusted the balance.

"You propose," he said slowly, "that for a consideration of money I should trade on the likeness between us and become your dummy, when you are otherwise engaged?"

Chilcote colored. "You are unpleasantly blunt," he said.

"But I have caught your meaning?"

"In the rough, yes."

Loder nodded curtly. "Then take my advice and go home," he said. "You're unhinged."

The other returned his glance, and as their eyes met Loder was reluctantly compelled to admit that, though the face was disturbed, it had no traces of insanity.

"I make you a proposal," Chilcote repeated nervously, but with distinctness. "Do you accept?"

For an instant Loder was at a loss to find a reply sufficiently final. Chilcote broke in upon the pause.

"After all," he urged, "what I ask of you is a simple thing—merely to carry through my routine duties for a week or two occasionally when I find my endurance giving away, when a respite becomes essential. The work would be nothing to a man in your state of mind, the pay anything you like to name." In his eagerness he had followed Loder to the desk. "Won't you give me an answer? I told you I am neither mad nor drunk."

Loder pushed back the scattered papers that lay under his arm.

"Only a lunatic would propose such a scheme," he said brusquely and without feeling.

"Why?"

The other's lips parted for a quick retort; then in a surprising way the retort seemed to fail him. "Oh, because the thing isn't feasible, isn't practicable from any point of view!"

Chilcote stepped closer. "Why?" he insisted.

"Because it couldn't work, man—couldn't hold for a dozen hours!"

Chilcote put out his hand and touched his arm. "But why?" he urged. "Why? Give me one unanswerable reason."

Loder shook off the hand and laughed, but below his laugh lay a suggestion of the other's excitement. Again the scene stirred him against his sounder judgment, though his reply when it came was sound enough.

"As for reasons," he said, "there are a hundred, if I had time to name them. Take it, for the sake of supposition, that I were to accept your offer. I should take my place in your house at—let us say at dinner time. Your man gets me into your evening clothes, and there at the very start you have the first suspicion set up. He has probably known you for years, known you until every turn of your appearance, voice and manner is far more familiar to him than it is to you. There are no eyes like a servant's."

"I have thought of that. My servant and my secretary can both be changed. I will do the thing thoroughly."

Loder glanced at him in surprise. The madness had more method than

A prosperous manufacturing concern have located in Lindsay without importic from the United States in a pretty much condition, and after being idle for six weeks in a steam dry kiln, is ready for manufacturing timber for wheels. The timber is grown in Canada; second growth ash or oak is used, and it is also thoroughly dried. To follow the wheel through the differ-ent departments would take us from rear of the Hamilton block. This company devote their energies entirely to making buggy and light commercial wheels. They employ seventeen hands, mostly married men who earn good wages, being experts in that line of manufacture.

Unpleasant Predicament in Which a Farmer Found Himself Wednesday

Evening Post of Dec. 26

Christmas is the jollest time of all the year when it is noised, not so much for its jollity and boisterous fun as for the general good feeling which exists in it, especially in the atmosphere at this season. However, laughable occurrences are things which come to crop up in the most unexpected times and places. A camera, a photo studio, a farmer's wooden-head, and two young men entered into a little comedy which took place Christmas day here.

It seems that Mr. Jack Gray, wishing to take some pictures, went to Frank Lee of the Mercury block to do the business. Frank agreed to the loan, and proceeded to take him to the studio to make a selection. They entered, leaving the door ajar, and went to the room of the stock, where the cameras are kept. While they were in there selecting a machine an out-of-town visitor, who had taken a journey to Lindsay for the day, came strolling up the stairs and through the open door into the waiting room. Getting off his coat and thought he would negotiate time till the attendants should appear, by looking over the photos hung up on the walls of those who had come before him with like aspirations. He wandered around, gazing at, and not too interested in a corner not visible from the door.

Meanwhile Jack and Frank had finished and started out. Jack saw the coat, immediately guessed what had happened, and went about. They looked the door and proceeded merrily on their way. Mr. Farmer began to tire of photos and thought it was time to investigate, and on awakening found discovered to his horror that he was alone and a prisoner. He tried to open the front door, which he knew they were about. He tried every known way to get hold, but it was useless. All he went to the photo gallery, and began pacing his head out of some of the footsquare vacillating panels hollered for help until all the strength of a good of well-developed lungs. A passer-by heard him and was induced to come to the door and a messenger was sent in hot haste to Mr. Morton's, in another part of the town to get the key. On being liberated the grumpy farmer, greatly concerned for fear he should be left in a predicament, robbing or attempted robbery, and was loud in his protestations of innocence. When everything was satisfactorily explained, all enjoyed a hearty laugh and went home to finish our their interrupted Christmas afternoon.

Manitoba Versus Ontario Wheat

Farmers of This Province Should Refuse to Buy Western Flour.

In the olde days, when practically all our farmers planted wheat as their cash crop and had the best quality were grinding this wheat into good pieces in their barns and shorts sold for about half what they do now. These feed stuffs were cheap because wheat was high and hard to sell. When Manitoba flour problem its way into Ontario, our farmers the only thing "big loaf of fresh" they bought western patent flour, stopped raising wheat, and made the Manitoba wheat their staple. Naturally our millers had little wheat to grind, and had to go to the Western Canada for their wheat. Freight rates were and are high. And our stockmen and farmers, for years, took no pay-ing for this folly.

The remedy lies with the farmers. They should refuse to buy western flours at any price. The blended flours, milled right here in our own province, of Ontario wheat, and of little Manitoba wheat, are better and cheaper than any blend of good Western hard patent flour, by reasons more wheat, and having blended long loaf of fresh bread. Our own people, great farming population would not only keep their money at home, but also save our farmers and stockmen wheat. With plenty of wheat to grind, there would be plenty of bran and shorts for our stockmen and farmers to buy at a much cheaper price.

Ontario farmers may hardship on the part of the farmer. As a matter of fact, when he buys blended flour, he gets a better, better flour than he has ever bought before. These Ontario blended flours contain Ontario wheat and a small quantity of Manitoba wheat. Ontario flour, while perfect for cake and pastry, does not contain enough strength for gluten as the chemists call it to make a long loaf of bread. Now, our millers have found out just how much gluten Ontario flour needs, and they add the gluten by adding a little Manitoba flour, which is high in gluten. So, in these Ontario blended flours, we get a bread flour and a pastry flour, and the best of each kind.

Certainly, when our farmers can get a better flour, and at the same time create a new market for their wheat and so restore wheat growing to its former fever among our agricultural population, there is no reason in the world why every farmer in Ontario should not use Ontario blended flour.

Vote Competition at Roller Rink

Miss Ethel Adams Captured the Gold Watch—Over 50,000 Coupons.

Evening Post of Dec. 26

One of the largest crowds that has been at the rink since the roller2 were introduced in Lindsay, was there last night. All seemed to enjoy themselves, and every pair of skates were in use. The demand being far greater than the supply.

The great interest taken in the voting competition for the handsome lady skater was evidenced by the fact that over 50,000 votes were cast in all. Out of that remarkable Miss Ethel Adams received 18,345, being the highest number cast for anyone of the ladies. Miss Lillie Torry was second, with 10,795, Miss Laidlaw third with 7,205, and Miss Arnot strong fourth with 6,925.

The voting has been going on for some weeks, and last Christmas night at 9 o'clock, when the polls were counted and the winner (Miss Adams) was presented with a handsome gold watch valued at $25.00. In counting the ballots there was found to be some fraud in the ballot box that did not have the private mark on the reverse of the ticket, thus showing that the voting was all on the square, and the lady that won the gold watch was entitled to it by the popular vote. The friends of the two leading candidates deserve great credit for the way they worked in collecting votes for their choice. It was very near 11 o'clock before the votes were all counted, and notwithstanding the lateness of the hour, the majority of the people waited to see the result of the votes.

The band was present afternoon and evening, and contributed very choice music, to the entire satisfaction of every person present. The Roller Rink will be open every night and every night this week, with band in attendance every night, unless the weather gets cold enough to put on ice.

Charged With Public Indecency

Lindsay Young Man Who is Becoming Familiar With Law.

Evening Post of Dec. 26

The case of William LeFage, charged with indecency exposure on Saturday evening last on the corner of the east part of Kent-st., came up before Police Magistrate Jackson on Wednesday evening. The case was adjourned for 7.30, and the Magistrate, constables and witnesses were on hand, but the defendant did not put in an appearance until a few minutes to 8 o'clock, and as the clock iterate was increasing the Chief Constable to issue a warrant, Lefage arrived soaly the influence of liquor.

The case was then proceeded with. Constable Ward said he found the accused guilty, but did not remember what had occurred. He was fined $3 and costs, a total of $6.50. In delivering his judgment the Magistrate said that LeFage had already eight convictions against him, but he had taken on somewhat lenient view of the present case on account of the defendant's family. Should he appear before him on a similar charge he would be punished to the full extent of the law.

Fine Flour from the Peace River

Unique Christmas Souvenir Sent Out by The Winnipeg Free Press.

It seems incredible now that a high scientific authority should have declared so recently as Ottawa years ago that wheat growing could never be made a success on the continent west of the mouth of Ohio. That declaration, made by John Rickport, in contempt of many learned treatises on his work on "The Wheat Plant", published in 1856, is one of the most interesting matters referred to in the little book entitled "Wheat: From Canada's Far Northwest. With Some Account of Wheat Growing and Flour Milling. Ancient and Modern," which the Winnipeg Free Press has sent, but accompanied by a diminutive barrel—with staves, hoops, and all complete—filled with flour made at the Hudson Bay Company's mills at Fort Vermilion, on the Peace River, the northernmost grain field of importance from wheat grown in the Peace River country.

Prior to a number of years the Free Press has made it a custom to issue a little pamphlet, or some other out souvenir, and this latter one is far more in worth of its predecessors, and should be sought out by those who set them in interest. Among the preceding souvenirs have been a little pamphlet on grasses, a flint arrow, a pen made from the quill of a Canadian wild goose, a gopher's tail, a specimen of the Canadian dominion and a little sack of No. 1 Hard. Manitoba wheat. Each souvenir has been accompanied by a descriptive booklet, usually containing an Indian legend, but more than makes up for the lack of these, in that it is the mass of interesting, curious and valuable information which it gives. This year's is an exception to the rule, and is a little gem of the word, an attractive, and, indeed, the most special specimen of the bookmaker's art.

An opposite contains up-to-date meteorological information in regard to the development and progress of Western Canada, the advertising of which is novel and attractive. Of the curious purposes of these Christmas souvenirs.

RESOLVED:

That I can't understand how ANY one, even a donkey, can get mean THIS time of year. I know what makes a man a donkey, I know he is one, I know he thinks He knows it all, I don't it cost to sections Pinnacle, I know he is a donkey, I know he is mind and nothing can change it. None of the GREAT men in the world ever made such a thing as that stuck. I am willing to change my mind any time you can show me where I am wrong, I think it is as necessary to change your mind as to change a your shirt. But not for a donkey, of course. Donkeys don't change their minds.

FARM NOTES

BIG ALSIKE YIELDS.

"There are few fields in the Dominion of Canada to-day, which will produce more in one crop than one owned by Geo. Simpson, of Peterboro. Recently he sold one load of alsike that had grown on a little acre field of his farm for $270 to James Storey, Peterboro. This is a fair-able realization from one small field of Mr. Simpson's farm, is something with no known equal in Ontario-county. It is equal to over $82 per acre."—Family Herald and Weekly Star.

Alsike is certainly a paying crop, writes J. E. Dyer, both for the seed and honey, and as regards the latter commodity, I venture to say that most localities in Ontario would go over honey locations if there were no alsike. The report we have published from a correspondent, and from the year seen a number of cases in our own locality and in Victoria county, of wonderful yields that have obtained. Yields from six to eight bushels per acre were commonly and as high as twelve bushels per acre were reported. The price is now ranging around $7 per bushel, and the demand is good, and yields and high prices has bounds bonanza to farmers formerly growing it, and thinks this year. Some years ago, when we were farming, we sold from ten acres one year, and from twelve acre seed, and although only $6.50 per bushel was obtained, yet it was a paying crop.

RETURNING TO SHEEP.

"There's more money in sheep than any other kind of stock," was the opinion of O. Turnbull, of Alliston, in a letter to the Farmer's Advocate published at Guelph, that had brought him six prizes, including two first. "I said good feed," he said, "the farmers are just tumbling over one another to get back into sheep raising. Why, the price of mutton has doubled in the last few years, and sheep don't cost half the trouble that hogs or cattle or dairy work do. There were far more sheep in Ontario five years ago than there are now, I know the price of wool went down, and the price of hogs was good, so most farmers dropped the sheep. Then the market for sheep grew so fast that the price began to soar, and now everybody is trying to buy sheep and get back into the game."

The consideration of sequering hirl-ed labor is a great factor in the use of sheep, he added. "Two years ago I had no den this five thousand in a flock of nine months. They weren't bad fellows, but they would never stay. Fortunately I have now a permanent farm-ment and I could get him to send me man whenever I needed one."

Grinding and cooking feed for stock has always given satisfactory results, and is worth the expense. The cost of feed in cooking is as man and the chance of cooking feed is good. Farmers now, however, grinding mills that do rapid work and in winter, horses are fed on cooked food, and are well benefit to idle horses.

The man who grows a pig, whether in the fall or spring and has in "root hog or dog" can get expert much profit. The pork is worth more contrate the marketable product of the farm. The hog is a pigeon eater, and is an economical consumer. It is easy to supply his wants and they should be supplied to its full capacity.

The coal might feed to produce eggs in winter is worth, and a dozen eggs and wheat is a little better. While poultry require some roughage they appreciate the boiled oats or wheat. Oats are the cheapest of all grains, and are the most economical power in our soil and climate which gets a stronger form and a more nutritive substance than any other. Five stock cored in our plands that are found in the same breed or species in any other part of the world.

A farmer from Minnedosa, Man., has sent in a sample of the Dominion ship of Fanelion, informed The World that apples have been retailing out there for $4.50 and $5.00 per barrel. Occasionally they get a cured mark, and No. 1. thus if anything out than grade. This Northern Dominion fruit apple there, although Baldwins, Northern Spies and Greenings are welcome. On the schools, he says, the west will do well this year.

A poultry house is not much good unless it is well ventilated, for pure fresh air is very absolutely good health and productivity in hens. On account of their higher body temperature, the chickens require plenty of good air to breathe even more than most other domestic animals. Then in addition to this, the unpleasant odors and gases existing in the poultry house must be dissipated and removed.

Salvation Band Visited Homes

Rendered Christmas Carols and Sang Appropriate Hymns.

Evening Post of Dec. 26

The Salvation Army started a very nice idea on Christmas morning. About nine o'clock the members of their band gathered and proceeded in a sleigh from house to house to play Christmas music. At each residence the players would line up on the verandah, porch or front walk, and play one of the inspiring world-old carols. On having their music welcomed by the inmates, they gave a Christmas hymn before departing.

Their playing was certainly fine, and the music heard on the morning air was much appreciated by all who heard it. It is one of the novel and most appropriate ideas which has ever been practiced in town. It would not be out of place in an annual feature.

Mr. Ira Poole, game and fishery overseer at Omemee, was in town the other day. Everything is going well in his locality.

Mr. John Stewart, game and fishery overseer at Caesarea, was in town lately, and in conversation said that he had seen cases of numerous fish law ready for trial. A Bear in The Hole.

Two men were going through a field, A bear and mean disposition, and had waited until they had gained the middle of the field, which he set upon them, bellowing.

The two men ran for their lives, but the bear caught one and began hooking at their coat tails. One of the fugitives sands for a tree and climbed up it, while the other took refuge in a hole in the ground.

The bull made for the man in the hole. He turned over so he could hit instantly hobbed out again, the bull made for him, and he hobbed in and out on the hole back and forth. They kept this up for a while, and the man in the tree yelled:

"Why don't ye stay in that hole, ye dang fool?"

The bull was dashing across the hole with mad roars, and the man was hobbing in and out desperately, but he heard the voice from the tree:

"Dang fool yerself," he panted breathlessly. "That's a bear in this hole!"

Omemee Man Loses One Eye

Was Shooting When Cartridge Shell Flew Back---The Eye Removed.

Evening Post of Dec. 28.

Francis Blackwell, son of Mr. Jas. Blackwell, of Omemee, and nephew of Mr. William Blackwell, architect, was very painfully injured yesterday morning in a shooting accident which cost him the loss of one eye. Mr. Blackwell is a clerk in the Newmarket branch of the Bank of Montreal, and was spending the holidays at his home in Omemee. Thursday morning with a couple of companions he was amusing himself shooting. In pulling the trigger, and owing to the faulty mechanism of the gun, or to a bad cartridge, the shell of the cartridge was blown back, striking the young bank clerk in the eye.

It was at once seen that he was badly injured, and he was taken to Peterborough, where the eye was examined by Dr. T. P. McCullough. The latter, after examining the wound, decided than an operation was necessary, and had the patient removed to the Nicholls Hospital, where it was found necessary to remove the eye. The operation was successfully performed.

ON THINGS IN GENERAL

By "The Stroller."

The other day we met a good Tory brother, who is in the habit of reading this column. Usually he has something of a commendatory nature to say, but this time he rather sarcastically accused us of saying nothing about the recent revelations in the London election case. He appeared to be under the impression that we never called attention to Grit shortcomings, as we did to any little Tory slips. Now, this man is one of that class, eminently fair in every phase of life, yet who in politics can't see past their own party. We think our readers will agree with us when we say that we have never thought or said that all the good was on our side, or all the evil on the other side. We are of those who believe that there are good and bad men on both sides, but where one party is brought up to believe that their party is by some sort of divine right the only party capable of ruling a country, and that all outside of it are a lot of dubs, and who have this doctrine preached to them from their birth, they are very apt to draw to themselves those who use methods that will not bear the light of day, and be secretly glad to have them there, on the principle that the end justifies the means. We have never believed in the "tu quoque" or the "you're another" argument, although we read somewhere in the standards of a great teacher once saying, "Thou fool, first cast the mote out of thine own eye, before thou seekest to take the beam out of thy brother's eye."

Along with the majority (we hope) of Canadians, we were ashamed, when we read of the way they had been doing things up in London. It is shamefully disgraceful, and we sincerely trust that the guilty ones will get their deserts. We occasionally read an article suggesting that the authorities that be get after the real culprits — the people who supply the money, and who authorize these doings. That is impossible. The people who supply the money, don't know where it is going. They may have an idea, but in these kind of matters it does not do to probe too deeply. Were a man like Mr. Graham, of the Montreal Star, who, it is said, raised half a million, between himself and friends, to try and bring the Tories into power at Ottawa, to get inquisitive and want to know what was done with his money, presuming he wanted done only what was right, he would probably be told to take his money and go to the other side, or even a hotter place. Even the candidates, or the high-up monkety-monks, who speak from the platform about wanting clean elections, have to keep away from the inner workings, or they may see too much. If a candidate is absolutely determined to have a clean election he can have it by getting right to the bottom. If he sees a certain class of men hanging around his committee rooms, he can know at once that all is not right, the same as anyone knows that drinking is going on somewhere when men are hanging around the saloon in chunks, even if it is supposed to be closed. He can soon rid himself of them if he wants to, but human nature is very perverse, and the best of us do not like to be defeated. However, we believe that the best men of both sides would like clean elections, if for no other reason than to find out what the actual temperament of the people was. We do not think that it can be done under the present system. It is too much to ask a man, who wants a clean election, to personally see that nothing is done amiss, especially in a large constituency.

Were we to take the temptation and the chances of doing wrong away, would it not be the better plan? Suppose we had compulsory voting, with a forfeit of the vote for a number of years were it not cast, look at the saving it would be to both sides. This, with the prohibition of personal canvassing, either for voting or registration, would do away with this running after the manhood suffrage vote, which, to tell the truth, is not worth its cost. We would have the regular courts for registration, but it would have to be voluntary and only held when there is an election on. If a man did not think it worth while to vote, he would deserve to lose it. If neither candidate suited, he could spoil his ballot like the ultra-Socialists do, or put in a blank one, but he must vote. A true Reformer or Liberal is not particular whether his party is in power or not, as long as the reforms he advocates are made laws. George Brown was in power but 24 hours out of 40 years of public life. His great opponent, John A. Macdonald, was practically in power most of that time, and yet Brown hammered away at his reforms until every one of them were put on the statute book, most of them by Macdonald, and all of them against his will. Who really exercised the power?

We presume our readers noticed the straight flung words uttered by Wm. Whyte—all honor to the old gentleman—regarding the dives and saloons that infest the neighborhood of the C.P.R. station at Winnipeg. Mr. Whyte is a man whose words is to be believed, a man who, when he states a fact, requires to add no superlatives, either in adjectives or adverbs to impress it unmistakably on his hearers, and when he says that he knows that certain dives (naming them), were responsible for drugging and skinning the summer worker of his hard-earned money, when he came to town, we can believe he is prepared to prove his assertion to the hilt. We have seen the thing done ourselves. We slept over a bar one night in a western town, (or rather we went to bed, for there was little chance of sleep), where all night long there was a game of cards going on, that had been going on without interruption, except for drinks, for 36 hours. The wind-up resulted in the poor devil losing ever cent he had earned for the season back in the woods, and he did not even have the fun (?) of a drunk out of it. They simply bled him white, and then threw him out. The poor fool knew they were fleecing him, and every once in a while would draw his shooting iron, but they calmed him down and skinned him. Why is it that the respectable part of the community will put up with these, worse than parasites? Here is a business going on that we know is costing us millions of money, and we hardly do the first thing towards stamping it out. If there is a band of thieves, or burglars, or counterfeiters, known to live in a neighborhood, how long is it before they are either scattered or placed behind the bars?

And yet, were we to have local option in Lindsay, there would be a band of people who would set themselves out to deliberately break the law. They have local option in Owen Sound, and the Mayor had the brazen effrontery to say in public the other day that he knew that liquor was being sold and could place his hands on a dozen places, and that therefore prohibition did not prohibit. That man has just as much right to be behind the bars as if he had stated that he knew there were thieves in town, and that he could lay his hands on them if he wanted to, but he didn't want to. A sorry spectacle of a Chief Magistrate, truly. We are very apt to hold our heads high in comparing our morality with that of our neighbors to the south of us, but they seem to be losing their senses on the liquor question quicker than we are, and are literally sweeping it into the sea. Surely we Canadians are not going to be behind them on a subject like that? John Burns, that champion of labor, says that Britain is spending 820 millions of dollars yearly in drink and most of it by the workingman. Is it any wonder there is a submerged tenth, or that, as the Socialists say, there is a tenth of the people always hungry? Does it not seem tommy-rot for people otherwise sensible to be prating around about "conditions", etc., with THE sore spot staring them right in the face, no matter which way they turn and doing nothing towards healing it? If this money were thrown into the sea, and no liquor drunk, the whole country would be far more richer. Strange, is it not, yet true. It is one of those paradoxes we meet with occasionally in life.

We have a serious crisis on in our own town. The better class of people want local option. We can't get it this year, but we can elect a Council that will cut off at least two licenses, and yet it is hard to find men courageous enough, or honest enough, to state how they stand on the question. Approach them for their views, and they throw back their heads and place their hands over their hearts and pose and say that they want to do "justice" to everybody, which means that they are afraid of the liquor vote, but care not a jot for the poor devil who is pouring his little all into their tills at the expense of his wife and family. The man who is not afraid to say he is in favor of licenses is not to be feared so much as the man who is undecided and nowhere on the question.

That was a pleasant and wholesouled dinner that was tendered to Banker (or should we say ex-Banker) Lytle, the other night. We don't know how the enterprise was engineered, but it would seem from all we can hear as if some people were overlooked, in being given the opportunity to contribute, whether designedly or not we do not know. These frequent changes in the Bank of Montreal managerships remind us of one of Peter Dooley's stories. In one of his confidential chats with his friend Hennessy he said, "he wished Jan. D. Rockifiller would quilt givin his millyons to the universities, for he couldn't afford it any more." "Phwat have you got to do wid that?" says Hennessy, "How does it hit you?" "Shure," says Dooley, "Ivery time Jan. gives a million to the college, up goes ile half a cint, and be the powers it's as high as I can sthand it now."

However, to come down to normal, we rather think that the banquet was tendered to Mr. Lytle as a citizen, more than as having any connection with the Bank of Montreal, important as the position was. One of the speakers voiced our idea of Mr. Lytle when he spoke of the close interest he took in the affairs of the town, and everything and anything that tended towards its interests. We do not recollect of any banker we have had in recent years who threw himself so heartily into the work of forwarding the interests of the town as has Mr. Lytle. He, of course, had the advantage of his brother bankers in that he was a native of the county, and his interests, social, family and mercantile were all here, and yet there are others, not bankers, who are equally interested, who will not put one foot in front of the other to help anything along that will tend to advancement of the town. We can understand that the strain on a banker, especially a manager, would be such that he could with reason be excused were he to absent himself from any further strain outside, but Mr. Lytle seemed to think he was called upon to bear his share in the advancement of the town's interests along with the rest of us, and the different institutions that he has either promoted or helped to stand on their feet are a testimony to his worth as a citizen. We are not seeking in any way to minimize the citizenship of the other managers — they are all first-class fellows, but here is an example before them of what one man can do to help on his town when he is so inclined.

It is well-known that when Mr. Lytle was called to the managership of the Ontario Bank, it was down in the depths, but by close application and his knowledge of the surrounding country and people, and his popularity in the community, he raised it up to be one of the best branches of the bank, and had the head office been run by a banker instead of a gambler, there would have been a different story to tell, in which case we might not have had the dinner. It is astonishing how we all like to go to a feed. We often wonder whether our wives feel hurt when they see with what glee we will pay out $1, $2 or $5, as the case may be, for a feed away from home. Some of those who were there, however, don't know what the term "wife" means; more shame to them in a young and growing country like this. There are others who were not there who might take a hint too. We think we voice the sentiment of the community when we wish Mr. Lytle long life, and good health, and that he will still interest himself in looking after the town's interests wherever he can. It is probably too late this year, but we are seriously of the opinion that Mr. Lytle would make an ideal mayor for us.

OBITUARY.

Dr. F. J. Bradd, Peterboro.

Review; The news of the death of the late Dr. Frederick John Bradd, which occurred at Nicholls Hospital, was received throughout the city with the profoundest regret. About two weeks ago Dr. Bradd was boarding a street car, when he missed his footing and fell, striking the side of his head on the car. A few days later a bealding in the right ear developed and it was found necessary to have an operation. A week ago yesterday Dr. McDonough, specialist, of Toronto, was called, and the operation performed. Everything that medical sikll could do was done, but it was of no avail, and the doctor passed peacefully away Monday night.

The late Dr. Bradd was 48 years of age and was born in Northumberland county. He received his early education at the old Cobourg University and later on took a course in medicine at Toronto University, graduated from there in 1888. He first practiced in Campbellford, afterwards moving to Omemee, where he remained a few years before coming to Peterboro. He had resided in this city for the past ten years, and during that time enjoyed a large practice. In his chosen profession he was considered one of the most clever and successful physicians.

Respected Resident of Eldon Township Passes Beyond the Dark Portal.

Mr. Thomas McCombs departed this life at his home in Eldon on Dec. 25th, 1907, aged 60 years. He was born in Pickering, Ont., and leaves a beloved wife, five daughters and one son to mourn the loss of a loving husband and kind father; William, at home; Mrs. J. Brentnell, Bexley; Mrs. Geo. Black, Mariposa; Mrs. Fred Black, Mariposa; and Misses Sadie and Lena, at home, are the daughters.

A private funeral took place on Friday, Dec. 27th, at Riverside cemetery, Lindsay. Words chosen by the loved one departed, found in St. John, 17th chapter, were read as follows:

"I pray for them; I pray not for the world, but for them which thou hast given me, for they are thine. And all mine are thine, and thine are mine, and I am glorified in them. And now I am no more in the world, but these are in the world, and I come for thee.

"Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom Thou hast given me, that they may be one as we are. While I was with them in the world, I kept them in Thy name; those that Thou gavest me I have kept, and none of them is lost, but the son of perdition, that the scripture might be fulfilled in themselves. They are not of the world even as I am not of the world. Sanctify them through Thy truth; Thy word is truth. As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world. And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth. Neither pray I for these alone, but for them also which shall believe on me through their word.

"That they all may be one, as thou Father, art in me and I in thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that thou hast sent me. And the glory which thou gavest me, I have given them; that they may be one, even as we are one, I in them, and thou in me, that they may be made on perfect in one; and that the world may know that you has sent me, and hast loved them as thou hast me.

"Father, I will that they also, whom thou has given me, be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory, which thou hast."

FELL DOWN STAIRS WITH CHILD

The following testimonial proves once again the superiority of "Nature's Healing Balm," Zam-Buk. Mrs. L. Spalding of 505 Erie St., Stratford, Ont., says: "Some time back I met with a peculiar accident while descending the stairs with a child in my arms. I slipped, falling heavily on my left arm and elbow, receiving a flesh wound. My arm was inflamed, swollen and very painful. I tried different preparations, but the wound kept discharging and refused to heal. About this time my brother suggested using Zam-Buk. I acted upon his advice. Zam-Buk thoroughly cleaned the wound, stopped all discharging and soothed the pain and in four weeks the wound was nicely healed. I have had perfect use of both elbow and arm ever since and owe this good luck to the wonderful healing balm Zam-Buk and would advise others to use nothing else." Zam-Buk cures cuts, bruises, burns, eczema, festering wounds and all skin diseases—of all druggists and stores—50c. box or post-paid from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. In the course of a brief address to the brethren the worthy Chief Ranger took occasion to point out that the membership of the local Court is now 227, and rapidly increasing, thanks to the high reputation of the order and the effective missionary work being carried on by Organizer W. P. Chard.

Thrashed Fellow Who Misled Son

Irate Mother Administered Beating to Man Who Carried Whiskey.

Evening Post of Dec. 26.

For some time certain individuals have found it quite profitable to purchase and supply with liquor those unfortunates who are on the "Indian" list. When one of them has a thirst the price does not seem to cut any figure—they will pay a dollar or more for a 50c. flask of whisky and the go-between will run the risk of the fine of $20 to $50 for the gain there is in the job.

There is one place in town where an "Indian" makes his headquarters, and has been able to secure whiskey notwithstanding the watchful care and increasing attention of his friends, who have been annoyed beyound degree. A few days since the exasperated mother of the young man, who has papers up against him, arrived on the scene as one of these go-betweens was passing a full bottle along to her son. It was more than the angry mother could stand—she snatched the bottle, promptly pulled the cork, allowed the liquor to escape, and then destroyed the vessel. The only thing convenient with which to forcibly express her feelings was a short piece of two inch scantling, and with it she went at the embryo merchant. The way she did lambaste the chap was a fine illustration of what an indignant mother can do in defence of a son, and the go-between has sufficient bruises and wounds to make it a certainty that he will not need the lesson repeated for some time to come.

Needn't Shovel Snow or Coal

Lindsay Citizen Located in a Californian Paradise for Winter.

In a private letter received from Mr. J. J. Wetherup, who, with Mrs. Wetherup and young daughter, are wintering at Hollywood, California, he says;

"We arrived here without any inconvenience on Monday, 16th inst. I like the place well—the climate is as near perfection as possible. During the day the temperature runs about 80 degrees, but between 1 and 5 p. m. it goes down to 70 and gets cooler at nightfall, and before morning it gets as low as 50 degrees, so that one can sleep comfortably in blankets. Everyone I speak to is perfectly satisfied with the country.

"Living is a little higher than in Lindsay. Fruit is abundant and the trees and grass are green, also roses and flowers in full bloom. The streets are graded and finished with pitch and sand, with stone curbing set parallel with the cement walks, the space between being planted with flowers. The place is growing very fast. Property runs from $25 to $100 per foot frontage.

"We think we shall spend the winter here."—Yours sincerely,

J. J. WETHERUP.

GOOD OF THE CAUSE

Bishop Scadding, of Oregon, with a diocese twice as large as Ohio recently deplored the policy of the Episcopal Church, which sent $30,000 to foreign missions and only $1,000 to the strategic points of the Pacific coast, where 20,000 homesteaders are arriving each year and need the church quite as much as the heathen.

ABOUT SOLOMON'S SONGS.

Prof. Hampt, professor of Semitic languages in John Hopkins university, who has finished a translation of "The Songs of Solomon," is credited with saying that Solomon never wrote the songs. "The songs" Prof. Haupt says, "were written fully 600 years B. C. The book is a collection of love songs, dealing particularly with the love of the Christ who was to come, for man. It was written in the neighborhood of Damascus.

SENTENCE SERMONS

He who thinks only of his dividends has invested himself with the devil.—Ram's Horn.

Mankind cares nothing for you until you have shown that you care for mankind.

Charity should begin at home, but it should not stay there. Life is service. Service is a part of life; it is the only real human life, and from Christ's own existence we see the great example of it.—Phillips Brooks.

Christ's mission was to save men—to save them from littleness, selfishness, sin and death.

Is it possible for any man to be a true Christian himself, and yet be doing nothing to make other men Christians too?—T. L. Cuyler.

We raise by things that are under feet,
By what we have mastered of good and gain,
By the pride deposed and the passion slain,
And the vanquished ills that we hourly meet. J. G. Holland.

A SISTER'S INFLUENCE.

He who has never known a sister's kind ministrations, nor felt his heart warming beneath her endearing smile and love-beaming eye, has been unfortunate indeed. It is not to be wondered if the fountains of pure ing flow in his bosom more sluggishly, or if the greater emotions of his nature be lost in the sterner attributes of manhood. "That man has grown up among kind and affectionate sisters," we heard a lady of observation remark the other day. "And why do you think so," we inquired?" "Because of the rich development of all the tenderer and more refined feeling of the heart which is so apparently his every action and word." A sister's influence is felt even in manhood's later years, and the heart of him who has grown cold in its chilling contact with the world, will warm and thrill with pure enjoyment as some incident awakens within him the soft tones and glad melodies of his sister's voice. And he will turn from purposes which a warped and false expediency, and even weep for the gentle influences which moved him in his earlier years.

CHURCH NOTES

Stoke Hall, recently purchased as a residence for the new Bishop of Suffolk, England, has been found to contain some most extraordinary cellars, with beautifully groined roofs of great archaeological interest.

It is now just 25 years since Bishop Mallalieu formed the Boston district of the Swedish Methodist Church, the first church of the Swedish Methodists having been organized just two years previous to that time.

Emory College, in Georgia, is to erect on the campus a chapel to the memory of Dr. Young J. Allen, a missionary of the Methodist church in China, and so far about $20,000 has been subscribed toward the project.

The Holiness Church, whose members are mainly in Texas, Arkansas, Tennessee and Missouri, has joined with the Association of Pentecostal churches of New England, bringing under one head about 13,000 communicants.

A memorial cross has been erected by the Santa Clara Historical Society, of San Jose, in commemoration of the one hundred and twenty-sixth anniversary of the founding of the missions by the Spanish padres in California.

The Christian Brothers, a religious congregation of the Catholic church, founded in 1680 in France is building a large business college at Portland, Ore, an entire city block having been purchased for the school and a large playground.

Eight churches in one of the suburbs of Baltimore secured trained men to take a church census of that section, and a card index has now been arranged that tells the ministers all about the religious affiliatoins of every family of that locality.

CHILD ALMOST A SOLID SORE

From Skin Disease from Birth Until Six Years Old—Father Spent Fortune on Her Without Benefit—Old Doctor Suggested Cuticura, which Cured Her in Two Months, Leaving

SKIN SOFT AS A BABY'S AND WITHOUT A SCAR

"I have a cousin in Rockingham Co. who once had a skin disease from her birth until she was six years of age. Her father had spent a fortune on her to get her cured and none of the treatments did her any good. Old Dr. G—— suggested that he try the Cuticura Remedies which he did. When he commenced to use it the child was almost in a solid scab. He had used it about two months and the child was well. I was there when they commenced to use your Cuticura Remedies. I stayed that week and then returned home and stayed two weeks and then went back and stayed with them two weeks longer and when I went home I could hardly believe she was the same child. Her skin was as soft as a baby's without a scar on it. I have not seen her in seventeen years but I have heard from her and the last time I heard from her she was well. That is where I became acquainted with Cuticura. I hope this may be of some service to you in the future. Mrs. W. P. Ingle, Burlington, N. C., June 16, 1905."

Abducted Child May be Recovered

Word Received by Mr. Marion as to Whereabouts of Little One.

Evening Post of Dec. 28.

The Marion abduction case has again been active the last few days. A few days since, word was received by Mr. Marion that the woman abductor and the child were in Ogdensburg, N. Y., and her address was also secured. Mr. Marion communicated with the Attorney-General's department, asking their assistance in securing the child, but he received word that the department had no jurisdiction in the matter, and therefore could not assist him.

Mr. Marion, however, has not given up hope of securing the return of the child, and we understand is now in Ogdensburg to see what can be done.

No Strangers in Catholic Church.

The Catholic who goes to church does not expect the glad hand of welcome from any usher or committeeman when he enters the door, and he does not feel like a neglected stranger if he does not receive a cordial welcome. Says the Monitor, Newark, N.J.; "The worshipper who enters the church, whether it be on a Sunday morning when the throngs are flocking thither on an errand like his own, or whether it be on a week day afternoon, the desolate hour for churches, when a sacred silence hangs over the holy place, goes always for the same purpose, to adore and honor the son of God in the mystery of his love. The Catholic expects no human welcome; his welcome comes from the depths of the tabernacle. He cares not whether his fellow worshippers greet him or whether courtesies are extended to him. He goes to his church because he has a right, and because it is his duty. Bound together by a common belief, afire with the same love, urgent on the same purpose, all the worshippers are brethren — brethern whether in the jungles of African, or in the stately edifice in the crowded city. There are no strangers."

WEDDING BELLS

Corneil---Mitchell. Mitchell---Mark.

Cambridge-st. Methodist church was the scene of a very quiet but pretty double wedding on Christmas Day, when Mr. George Corneil and Miss Lila Mitchell, town, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Rev. Dr. Bishop, pastor.

The bride was becomingly attired in a tailored suit of bronze novelty, opening over a dresden blouse, and wore a trim little rose hat with touches of mink.

Miss Helen Louise, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mark, of Valentia, Ont., became the bride of Mr. Walter Mitchell. She looked charming in a handsome suit of brown broadcloth, with hat to match.

The Post joins with a host of friends in extending hearty congratulations to the young people, who are well known in this town and surrounding country.

Robson---Cornock.

On December 23rd, Mr. Albert H. Robson (the Art director of Grip Co., Limited, Toronto), was married to Miss Mildred J. Cornock, of St. Thomas. The venerable Archdeacon Hill performed the ceremony. The bride was attended by Miss Hazel Schultz, and the groom by Mr. F. E. Robson. Mr. and Mrs. Robson are spending their honeymoon in the east, and will no doubt visit portions of Quebec province, which has been a favorite sketchery ground of the groom.

Mr. Robson is a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Robson, of Lindsay. We join with the many Lindsay friends in wishing them every happiness.

Might be Different With New Inspector

Toronto News Interviews Some of the Prominent Citizens of Lakefield.

The Toronto News contains an interesting article on local option rule in Lakefield, written by one of the News staff, in which the opinion of representative citizens, concerning the success of the measure is set forth. There seems to be a great difference of opinion over the matter, and some think that local option is a failure because of liquor brought in from Peterboro. Mr. Wm. Graham, according to the News report, remarks; "Local option would fare better here if the inspector did his duty properly. It is strange that everybody knows that he is coming three hours before he arrives, and those who are to be inspected have time to get ready for him."

A Good Recommendation.

(The Sacred Heart Review.)

Little Tommy Whacken was taken by his mother to choose a pair of knickerbockers, and his choice fell on a pair to which a card was attached, stating; "These can't be beaten."

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and favor to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. Without that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend

MAY YET BE A MURDER

Serious Stabbing Affray at Village of Gooderham

Roland Madill, the Victim, Received Five Deep Wounds—Lungs Perforated in Two Places—Assailant Now in Lindsay Goal.

Evening Post of Dec. 26.

The little village of Gooderham, in Haliburton County, was the scene of a vicious stabbing affray on Christmas eve, whereby a young man named Roland Madill received injuries which may yet prove fatal.

Gooderham, the little hamlet thus suddenly projected into the limelight of publicity, is a busy little hamlet located in Glamorgan township, about 50 miles north-east of Lindsay, and is surrounded by Dorset, Minden and Ottawa Railway, which runs east from the G. T. Ry to a point near Bancroft village, in North Hastings. The village is quite a sightly place for the lumberman when logging is on in the bush, but, and on the evening of the tragedy, owing to many men being returned from the camps to spend Christmas, there was unusual gayety and good fellowship everywhere visible.

Among the arrivals from the camps was Roland Madill, 23 years of age, who was on his way to his home in Mamouth township, seven miles distant, where wife and children were awaiting him. During his stay he met his uncle, James Morrison, a married man aged about 30 years, for whose home he in the village, and whilst the two were conversing in front of Barr's general store, Morrison became suddenly enraged and attacked his nephew with an knife, inflicting five deep wounds before help arrived—two in the side, one in the neck, one in the shoulder. The weapon used was a hunter's jack-knife, having a long blade.

The wounded man was carried into the nearest house and a doctor sent for, who found it difficult to extract the flow of blood. In the meantime Constable John Kennedy arrived on the scene and arrested Morrison. There being no gaol in the village he was compelled to incarcerate his prisoner in a room in his own dwelling.

Magistrate Wm. Fielding, of Minden, reached the village next morning at an early hour, and after a brief examination into the facts he committed the accused to Lindsay gaol to await his trial. Constable Kennedy handed him over to Gaoler Jackson late evening on the arrival of the 6.10 train from the north. The wounded man was likewise conveyed to Rose Hospital, where he is receiving every attention, and his physician, Dr. Shiers, has strong hopes of his recovery.

No theory can as advanced as to the cause of the affray, Morrison, apparently there had been no prior quarrel nor any grudge. It is whispered, however, that family troubles had something to do with the regrettable affair.

Furious Driving Led to Accident

Emily Lady in Serious Peril—Run Over by Heavy Team and Sleighs.

Evening Post of Dec. 30.

As Mrs. Pat. Meehan, of Emily, was coming home last evening for the hired man about half-past 7 last Saturday evening, a team of furiously driven farm sleighs horses shaded up and right over the sculer, pulling with them the heavy ebonogan they were driving. The whole upper part of the sculler was knocked off and demolished, and how Mrs. Meehan escaped death is a mystery. As it was some of the horses stepped on her side, leaving her as dead, and had to be carried to a nearby house. She was driven home later by her husband in-law.

The driver of the horses which did the damage was seen talking to some friends under the electric light at Flavelle's elevator before the accident. At the close of the conversation he whipped up his horses to a furious gait, evidently trying to show Lindsayites how he could shake up so many of the farmers who when going home after a day in town. The accident happened when he had gone no further up King-st. than Spratt & Kilborn's storehouse, and it is hard to find an explanation for it, but Mrs. Meehan was well over to one side of the road to allow the hired man to sleigh in.

To make matters worse, the team drove on harder than ever, the driver not stopping to see what damage had been done. The three men in the sobleigh were recognized as Mr. and Mrs. Henderson, one of whom was driving, and Leisure Robinson, a town man, who was riding with them. After the accident Robinson leaped from the flying sleighs near his own door and fell, escaping his head and face on the ice.

There has been a great deal of fun poking at Mrs. Meehan's driving in streets, and along King and Lindsay-sts. particularly, and many narrow escapes from being run down on sidewalks and crossings. Her friends are now in a quiet way trying to find out who the party is who was responsible for the injuries sustained by Mrs. Meehan, and if possible to have the offender brought to justice. The matter is in the hands of Mr. Fitzgerald, K.C., and if the party is found he will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Crazed With Drink Abused His Family

But Couldn't be Arrested Till he Had "Done Something Serious."

Evening Post of Dec. 30.

A representative of The Post was at the police office Saturday morning when a young man, a friend of a woman came in and appealed to the Chief Constable for protection from her husband, who, she said, had abused her and had been keeping the neighbors in terror of their lives for some days. Friday night he gave one of the daughters a severe beating and terrified the family out in the street in the middle of the night to shift for themselves. The distressed woman said that she was afraid to return home.

The move is no good story, and we hope it will be found on the side of sympathy for the mother and children, who are respected by all who know them. The husband has had papers up against him, which were withdrawn at his pleading in incredible. Therefore such an one is bound to avoid the occasion. But why can he not be a good husband or any atmosphere of quiet? If, therefore, local option removes the occasion for such a husband, he is tempted fall, or even make it remote, common sense and religion teach that it will do a good thing.

First, the occasion being removed and then followed up by the sovereign remedy of all—the endeavor to obtain God's help and grace through prayer and the holy sacraments—he will soon become master of himself and live in conformity with right reason and the law of God. (Temperate and sober people are guided by reason, and virtues, more than any other gifts, depend upon spiritual helps. It is vain to hope to reclaim the drunkard or preserve the sobriety of others or self unless you can bring them to the practice of spiritual prayer and religious duty. Even if a man be not addicted to the vice of drunkenness, yet, if his society are sometimes more disagreeable than the vice of drunkenness, yet, if Christian is first humble, knowing that he can neither give from evil nor remain constant in good without the help of God. Next, he hopeful and full of faith, for he knows he has a heavenly Father who has nothing nearer to his children than to draw him to himself. Lastly, he is obedient—adopting the means intended by God to serve him, and making use of the divine sacraments which convey the Precious Blood to his weak and sinful soul.

It is too much the custom to treat the evil of drunkenness with levity — to laugh and to pass on. May all feel the responsibility and be guided by christian generosity.—Yours, etc., J. O'SULLIVAN, Q.-P.

ON THINGS IN GENERAL

By "The Stroller."

We notice that the Duke of Argyll has written another book, in which he gives his opinion, that the class of people who rule in Great Britain, are responsible for the slum who rise to the top in a new country like Canada and are united upon the land question. We understand that this gentleman was out here for five years as our Governor-General, and if he kept his eyes and ears open, which no doubt he did, he had ample opportunities for seeing and hearing, and the worst of us, as far as our public men were concerned. His last remark, that the preference is for the class of men who rule in the old land are better fitted for it, by reason of their training and the scope their disposal, and that there is not the opportunity for great the same as there is on a new country, is true.

Now, let us look at the situation. Four-fifths of the land in Britain is owned by the Lords and their hangers-on, and consequently the overwhelming number of the population are living in idleness at the expense of the toiling masses. Things are so insatiable, their wants are satisfied, and being assured of three meals a day, they prefer to take up the larger affairs of the nation with a freer hand than the same number of people could do in a country such as ours, where the wheel turns other and the meals are not assured to the majority of the "moiless oblige" about these old, well-fed families, but it is more apparent than real. In Canada, for instance, that the railroads of the right of way which were given to the extent of 250 acres for land owned the right-of-way. What does this mean? Simply that the property of the people in many of these roads are permanently taxed to the extent of a dividend paying investment to the shareholders. As the lords own four-fifths of the land, it follows that they got four-fifths of this money. You may not suppose that anyone will argue that this right-of-way was actually worth anything when it was given, but it is well known fact that the railroads had to pay exhorbitant prices for the land they wanted right up by those people, who, Argyle thinks, are more graft and not susceptible to improper influence than ourselves.

As is well known, these roads have to get their charters through parliament, which is composed of the lords over the land. What more easy than to hand this bill up until the tenders were made, and then say, "and the lots" land paid for? This sort of thing has been done time and again, and the difference between a scheme that said "nothing" a month ago and "nothing" now is the difference "that makes the mare go." These roads, as a rule, never paid a cent for the lands they supposedly own. Some of it was stolen from their neighbors, on the principle that might was right, some of it was the gift of the people, and so away on things who had no more right to get it than the other fellows had the right to steal it. This, of course, was years ago. The something could not be done to-day—that is, in the same way. They would have to come over to America and get protection from Rockefeller et al, but the results would be the same. We can see, therefore, that providing these lords are not over-greedy, they are apparently at least, not go open to the reproach of being greater than their ears over here. But could we not put up as good (?) a class of robbers here, if we were to give away 500 acres, single four-fifths, or even one-half, of our land with the immense possibilities that that means, to a single party? We are not surprised at the Socialists getting such a strong foothold in these old homes. And may not a man on goods in his possession is considered a bad man, and, indeed, sometimes worse, for very often, he is a Pagan, the thief merely a roof, and it does not matter whether the goods were stolen in the time of William the Conqueror, or Charles the Second, the man is responsible for the crime to-day is as culpable as his forbears, I suppose we cannot make it right, but does not, I ask, the history of forces of hand that have been given away by the nation through its parliament, give us a look of it that been stolen at one time or other—by the king or tissue by the lords at other times, so that by taking a "graft" we don't think Argyle was very decoy in his comparison at all.

Shot His Father To Save Mother

"He is dead!" he asked in a whisper.

The detective looked straight ahead and nodded his head. Then the young prisoner's knees gave way, and he would have fallen to the floor, had he not been aware of the police, who rushed to his side, caught him by the body, "God grant that I be not hanged," Father was dead, and I killed him. I killed my way out." He was awful when he spoke.

While clutching his wife's throat in a vice-like grip, Charles Schroff, a widowed father of eight, was shot and instantly killed at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon by his son Chas. Schroff, jr., who fired a bullet into the family kitchen in the rear of the saloon. It was the climax of a quarrel that began in the midst of his mom meal.

Railway Notes.

It is reported that when the new pension fund of the Grand Trunk comes into operation about two hundred of the older employees of the company will be retired from the service. Some years ago it was proposed to age limit prescribed by the pension rules and regulations, many of them being very old men, in all the country stations, who have been with the company the greater part of their lives.

OUR RESPONSIBILITY--EVIL OF INTEMPERANCE

The Drink Temptation Largely of Man's Own Making, But Closely Affected by Local Conditions—Views of Rev. J. O'Sullivan, of Victoria Road.

The sin, the evil and the misery, caused everywhere in this quarter of the country by indulging drink are so great that it is the duty of all to exert and to make sacrifices in order that the temptations may be diminished and the weak and tempted may be helped and saved.

The doctrine that will this earth and do their worst to slay the immortal souls of man. Pride is Pride — which we corrupts the soul made by God himself, that man worship himself with places of God, and neither recognises God's presence, hears God's voice, nor needs to God's mind and law, there in Insolence, Insolence—an evil spirit made up of ignorance and wallowness, which particular to slung a fatal wound which makes the world pleasant, and religion hard and impossible. Other hatred, there is Dishonesty, there is Love of Money. All these have to be fought and conquered, and the possession fight gives our human nature or life its nerviousness and its grell.

But the drink temptation differs in many ways from all the other evil influences only withstood to show our manity down to hell. In the first place, it is far less a part of our own corrupt nature. The inclination to drink to excess is by no means so inborn in us as pride, luxury or laziness. The drink temptation is the large extent, of man's own making, and thus differs from most others, it is more directly affected by man's surroundings. Of these the most important is social company drinking. Very few men or women care to drink in solitude. On the other hand, the evil is most manifestous in sociality. There is seldom a christening or a wedding or a funeral without drinking, and even without disgraceful excess.

There is a public house at every corner to tempt the working man and the working man's wife, and, the working man's growing sons and daughters, and to finish, health and warmth, and companionship after his work, to induce him to throw away his hard earnings and to waste his and shame his family. There, amidst coarse mirth and treats and wagers, and, and, the spirits lessening, he finds the dangerous liquor everywhere, ready to be called for, ready to elicit a laugh or to honor! It is to the lowest good luck, or to drown disappointment in fire. Can this be the career of rational man? Can this perpetual fame of alcohol be worthy of christians who are signed with the baptism of Christ? Can this stupid quaffing, this inane hilarity, this irrational talking, shouting and quarrelling, be the preparation which immortal souls, should make for death and eternity? It is not necessary to dwell upon the consequences. It is not worth to touch upon them. But what if wish to dwell upon it — what can we do, what can we discover, what can we in practice to stop this scourge, to lift this BLACK CLOUD from the face of our fair a portion of Christ's inheritance!

EVERYONE IS CONCERNED.

Every one is concerned, at last, is concerned, for this calamity affects the whole community. There is many of us who love God, who are free from the vice we are considering, but not on that account are we free from the responsibility for our neighbors and our fellow citizens. St. Paul said to his disciples, "Concerning brotherly charity, we have no need to write to you, for ourselves have learned of God to love one another." It is the special mark of a child of Christ to assist in need, not in deed and in truth. What, therefore, can we do?

First, it is the plain duty of everyone, if they are concerned, to make intimate occasion of sin, to make it remote. This is a principle which we learn as Christians. If a man has within himself the drink craving, he can only keep it quiet and get rid of it by abstaining, like a cripple, the presence of drink. To such a man to enter a public house is like telling the devil on the spot, he can take the rush of an express — he cannot hope not to be killed. To such a man to be a friend to drink is to touch the shaft that is charged with temptation, to fan into incredible. Therefore such an one is bound to avoid the occasion. But we can do not all this, if we surround by an atmosphere of drink! If, therefore, local option removes the occasion for such a man, or a tempted fall, or even make it remote, common sense and religion teach that IT WILL do a good thing.

First, the occasion being removed and then followed up by the sovereign remedy of all—the endeavor to obtain God's help and grace through prayer and the holy sacraments—he will soon become master of himself and live in conformity with right reason and the law of God. (Temperate and sober people are guided by reason, and virtues, more than any other gifts, depend upon spiritual helps. It is vain to hope to reclaim the drunkard or preserve the sobriety of others or self unless you can bring them to the practice of spiritual prayer and religious duty. Even if a man be not addicted to the vice of drunkenness, yet, if his society are sometimes more disagreeable than the vice of drunkenness, yet, if Christian is first humble, knowing that he can neither give from evil nor remain constant in good without the help of God. Next, he hopeful and full of faith, for he knows he has a heavenly Father who has nothing nearer to his children than to draw him to himself. Lastly, he is obedient—adopting the means intended by God to serve him, and making use of the divine sacraments which convey the Precious Blood to his weak and sinful soul.

It is too much the custom to treat the evil of drunkenness with levity — to laugh and to pass on. May all feel the responsibility and be guided by christian generosity.—Yours, etc., J. O'SULLIVAN, Q.-P.

New Husbands--Read Carefully

Care of Family the Test by Which You are Judged After Marriage.

When a man has established a home, has a wife and children, the most important duties of his life have been begun. The errors of his youth may be obliterated, the faults of his early days may be overlooked, but, upon the manner of his marriage he commences to write an ineffable history; not by pen and ink but by deeds, which will be read ever afterward or reported and judged.

His conduct at home, his care for his family, the training of his children, his attentions to his wife, his devotion to the proper interests of his home, these are the tests by which his character will ever afterwards be estimated by those who think or care for him. (These will determine his position within living, and influence his memory when his grave has closed over him.' And as he uses well or ill the brief space allotted to him, so will his memory be established a fame founded on the most solid of foundations—private worth—so will God and man judge him. He holds in his hands the private weal and woe of his children; and if he causes his home, his wife, God-given trust, he cannot hope for mercy hereafter. Many a child goes astray because of his parents' unhappy wedding. Many a wife estranges death her best friend, because he who swears before God to love, honor and cherish, has forgotten his vows.

MARVELOUSLY INTERESTING JANUARY SALE

OF FURS, CLOTHING CARPETS. HOUSE FURNISHINGS AND GENERAL DRY GOODS.

There are causes however, that have aided us in clearing the decks for an imposing January Sale. First our stock is to heavy, secondly we must clear all Men's Suits, Overcoats, Boys' and Youths' Clothing to make room for Ladies' Ready-to-wear Garments. Our present space for these goods is too small and the increased sale in our new premises, of these lines make a clearance of Men's Goods imperitive. This sale will effect every article in our store. For the last few seasons we have held sales at this period that have been popular and money-saving to you. This sale will eclipse all others. Come Wednesday January 8, 1908, at 8.30 sharp, when our door swings open to one of the most money-saving opportunities of the season.

We are Prepard to Sacrifice Every Article in Fur.

There will be a quick Sharp Clearance in Furs.

On New Year's night Miss Maud Stoddart entertained a few of her friends to a social evening.

A very enjoyable evening was spent by about seventy-five young people at the home of Mr. Jno. Bell, on Tuesday evening, Jan. 7th.

The lecture given by Rev. Dr. Marsh in the Methodist church, on Monday evening was decided a success. The church was filled to the doors and the lecture delivered was well worth the price of admission.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Woodland spent Sunday and Monday at Mr. Woodland's, Victoria Road.

The annual school meeting held on Dec. 26 was largely attended, and some interesting business was transacted, a part of which was the appointment of Mr. Thos. Weaver, the position of trustee in the place of Mr. Fred Humphrey.

Mr. Jas. Thurston has purchased the ice north of the bank and intends creating a large implement shop on it in the spring.

The municipal elections passed off quietly here, as the Reeve of 1907 has re-elected for the ensuing year.

Don't forget the oyster supper to be given in Woodland's hall on Wednesday, Jan. 15.

COMFORT.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The holiday visitors have nearly all returned to their respective places.

The L. O. L. concert on Christmas night was very successful in every way and was conducted in a very orderly manner. The performers, Pickel, Tupper and Miss Cathcart were fine entertainers and were greeted by a large crowd.

There were a number of visitors from Lindsay, Peterboro and other towns and cities on New Year's day, which both of the villages is excellent at present.

Everyone is now settling down to business for the New Year.

Alex. Geo. Griffin is occupying his store in the tailor and merchant line.

There was a large attendance at the morning service of prayer in the Anglican church.

Our hockey and skating rink has been taken up by Messrs. Parson and Mitchell.

The annual concert held on New Year's night in the auditorium of the Presbyterian church, exceeded in every respect all previous efforts for many years past. Miss Edna Wheeler, from Peterboro Conservatory of Music, showed herself to be a winner of no little. Miss Wheeler is a splendid and accomplished. Mrs. D. Snellgrove, vocalist, made her debut, and well received. She possesses a clear and beautiful voice. Mr. Percival Cullen, from Lindsay, made his first appearance, and showed a great favorite and is far ahead of other performers in violin music. Miss Lavery, of Omemee, and Mr. Bowles, of Toronto, played the accompaniments in a most artistic manner. The hall has been greatly improved by electric lights, more room, and is well worth the price of admission. Proceeds amounted to about $100.

R. J. Grundy was elected by a big majority over Hayes for a term of years. Councillors, G. Griffin, Rogers, Corey and Skuce. Major Ewart was elected unanimously, and left by one vote behind Skuce, which surprised every one, as the major was very intelligent and active council lor.

Following are the results of the municipal elections in the adjoining ship: Reeve, ex-Reeve R. Beaton defeated Isaac Fox by over 100 votes. Councillors, Wm. Ashton, Cottingham, Courtney and Harding.

Local Option carried by three-fifths and five to spare. The temperance people, including Rev. McCullogh, Butler, Rev. Mr. Parkover and the Salvation Army, spared no pains. Mr. Coatty, proprietor of the Commercial house, took the defeat well, and will now devote his attention to the temperance hotel. It would go a difficult matter to find a more competent person. The proprietor is one of the few exceptions, that has never been arrested for illegal proceedings.

D. Stinson, furniture merchant, is occupying his new store.

H. Courtney's mill is receiving a lot of logs.

VICTORIA ROAD

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mr. J. Grant and daughter, Miss Alma, were in Beaverton for a few days last week.

The skating rink has been well patronized since the opening. We are glad to see a number from the neighboring villages enjoying the sport. We hope that the hockey match between Coboconk and the home team will come off on Friday night.

Miss Mabel Shields has returned to the Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby, after spending the holiday in her home here.

Miss Florence Graham is home, after visiting friends in Bobcaygeon and Lindsay.

Mr. Chas. Peel is in Coboconk receiving his brother, Mr. Fred Peel, who is manager of the Dominion Lumber Co., and is now in England for a few months.

Mr. Percy Chirpaw, who has been in Toronto for some time, was home for a few days last week.

LITTLE BRITAIN

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Mr. Wm. Beecroft was with spent Christmas and New Year's at Mr. Nathan Bowman's.

Mrs. Walkes, of Toronto, and Mrs. McPherson, of Oshawa, visited Mrs. Thos. Manchee last week.

Mr. Lawrence Heasle and wife have returned from their wedding trip and are settled in their new residence. The usual charivari did not take place as Mr. Heasle gave the boys a couple of dollars instead, and in time to make any preparations.

We see on the rink is now in the park of Sonyea, on which we have spent patronized by skaters this week. The room for putting on skates is very warm and convenient.

The annual convention of the Mariposa Sabbath School Association was held in the Methodist church here on Tuesday, Jan. 7. The afternoon session commenced at 2 p. m. and closed at 5 p. m. There was a good attendance from all the schools. The evening session commenced at 7.30 and closed at 10.15. The church was packed with delegates and workers from Manilla, Oakwood, Valentia, Pontypool, Salem and Little Britain. The programme was very interesting. The lecture given by Mr. J. A. Jackson, B. A., of Toronto, was a rare treat.

Breezy Local Brevities.

—In another column we publish an article dealing with the progress of the Dominion Life Assurance Co., of Waterloo, Ont., of which Mr. P. A. Ferguson, of this town, is District Manager. The Dominion is one of the few companies that has special reserve fund instead of having the surplus allocates to each the profits made therein. The report should be read carefully. 4c

The Ready Money Famine Compels a Great Sacrifice

Entire Stock of B. J. Gough, Aggregating $58,000 Worth of Men's and Boys' Clothing, Hats, Caps, Furs and Furnishings, to be Sold at Half Price.

The first has gone forth, the die is cast. Destiny has placed within reach of the citizens of Victoria County and territory bordering thereon the greatest money saving opportunity that has ever come to a favored people, and they should take full advantage of the exceptional circumstances.

The facts are these: One of the big deals periodically launched by the Gough Syndicate makes it ignominious upon Mr. B. J. Gough, of this town, to raise a large sum of money. Now, as everybody knows, ready money has been, and is a square article, and in order to get the sum required, and so be able to carry out his engagements, Mr. Gough had unbeatitudes by called a big sacrifice sale of his entire stock of high class stock of clothing and furnishings.

There is no guesswork about this transaction. The big stores will be closed Monday and Tuesday, and a portion of plain "mark-down" prices being placed on all the goods. Wednesday morning will initiate the carnival of bargains. The prices will be so low as to attract ready money out of the old stocking, crawled into pot, hole in the wall, or other secure receptacle. Don't forget the date — Wednesday, Jan. 15th, at 9 a.m.

Lindsay Race Meet Next Week's Event

Tuesday and Wednesday, Jan. 14th and 15th, are the Dates.

The Lindsay ice races are going to be well worth seeing this year. The large number of entries of fast horses have already been received. Among those expected for the first of the sale: Lady May, 2:04; Birdy B, 2:05; Capt. Spinks, 2:06 1-4; John McKeon, 2:08; Blackbird, 2:11 1-4; and others who will enter later in the 2:15 class—Peter Miller, 2:15 1-4, Jerome Porter, 2:16 1-4; Gertie Bell, 2:35 1-4; Miss Delite, 2:16 1-4; Abe N. Bruno, 2:16 1-4; Harry Steel, 2:17 1-4; and Daily Dillard, 2:19 1-4 will likely enter.

Other horses which will in all probability be here are Johnnie K., charge E. Al Patriot, Prairie Squaw, Hunter Lilly, Prairie Wolf, Jim, Lucky Queen, Dr. Mac, J. B. Wilkes, William O. Joe, Allan, Planet, Wonder and Bill Jones, which are all well known horses in the racing game.

An Appreciation Richly Deserved

Lindsay Gains Estimable Citizen by Mariposa Family's Removal to Town.

There has just moved from con. 1, lot 24, of the township of Ops, a family whose outgoing ought not to pass unnoticed, and because of what they have been to the neighborhood, religiously, as also in many other respects, and the loss sustained through their removal. I have reference to Mr. Graham, his wife and two daughters, who have left the place mentioned for the town of Lindsay. Mr. Graham has spent his whole life on the farm named, and has been no mean factor in making the vicinity mentioned what it is. He has been a very successful farmer, and in keeping with this fact, has exerted a much-to-be-desired influence along agricultural lines. And he has had his place politically. But I write of him and his more especially in relation to religious affairs. As a family they have had a large place in the church, and in her work. Mr. Graham has been a trustee of the church known by this own name ever since it was built, and a Circuit Steward for a long term of years, and it must be said of him in this connection that he succeeded as a trustee, and, as handed down by the Apostle Paul, "it is required in stewards that a man be found faithful." He was hardly ever absent from the meetings of the quarterly official board of this church, and his relation, relative to the work of the church have always been good and wonted. He had a place at the service of his own church, and was invariably in his place unless prevented by some very good and sufficient circumstance over which he had no control. He was also a regular contributor to all the funds of the church, and was ever ready for every good word and work. He has been a consistent member, and has seen my others and acknowledged by himself, not that the Lord does not find fault with his work, but because of his good worth, and the obligation one is under to make favorable mention of the same.

Then his daughters have been most faithful to the musical feature of the services of their church. I never knew them to fail in relation to this very important part of the work. For three years and a half, and I know not for how long a time before, they have been in their places, without a single exception, ready for the service of song and to furnish an extra section in the form of a voluntary. They are among the most loyal I have ever met, and are gratified to the highest commendations I can possibly give. May the Lord reward them all for service so faithfully, so unreligiously rendered, and for which no material compensation has ever been received, and at the last great day may they hear Him say, "Well done, enter and take your rest." (REOB. BROWN,
Meth. Minister,
Oakwood, Jan. 7th, '08.)

Dominion Life Assurance Co.

Big Increase of Business in 1907—Mr. P. A. Ferguson, Local Mgr.

The busy town of Waterloo, Ont., is now well known as the home of "The Hartford of Canada," is the home and birthplace of the Dominion Life Assurance Company. This company is a distinctly Canadian institution and, while not large in size, has all that goes to make a strong and well balanced company, one that should and, we believe, does command the confidence of the insuring public.

The Dominion Life was organized in the year 1889, by its present president and managing director, Mr. Thos. Hilliard, and commenced its inception, as the Government Blue Books show, a healthy, steady growth has been maintained. One is struck by the careful, economical and conservative way in which the management has conducted its affairs. It developed at the insurance investigation that the initial expenses of organization amounted to but $13,24, and this practice of economy we certainly begin to think has been adhered to throughout. While, perhaps, this has resulted in a smaller volume of business in fact, there might otherwise have been the case, the results as far as policyholders of the company are concerned seems to have been very favorable. This company now has in force somewhat over $7,000,000 of business and the surplus to policyholders over and above all liabilities, including paid-up capital, is over $110,000, while the assets of the Company, we understand, exceed $1,300,000. Considering the volume of business upon the books of the company, this appears to be a showing which should satisfy the existing policyholders and attract others to the company. The company, themselves claim that it is in a "splendid position to pay substantial profits to policyholders on account of its high interest earning power. During 1906 the average rate of interest earned on the funds was the high rate of 6.73, per cent.

The company holds no stocks or speculative securities. The greater portion of its funds being invested in first mortgages upon real estate. The Blue Book shows the interest bearing assets at the end of 1906 to be as follows:

Debentures	$130,483
Mortgages	962,132
Real Estate	12,520
Loans on Policies	47,886

The authorized capital of this company is $1,000,000, of which there is paid-up $100,000 and its paid-up capital, including the reserve fund, is provided that its policyholders to-day and into the future will "share equally" the "Abstainers," and the "Wet." The Blue Book shows that the mortality loss of its section and shares in the profits accordingly, is the lowest mortality experience.

We understand that the company's business for this year promises to show substantial increases over previous years, and under the direction of its president and managing director, Mr. Thomas Hilliard, who has already been re-elected to the position of Mr. John H. Bell, A. I. A. A. A. S., is the hope of the Dominion Company of Mr. P. A. Ferguson, is its Manager for Central Ontario.

Mr. P. A. Ferguson, of this town, is District Manager for Central Ontario.

The Municipal Elections Shew Surprising Results

Mr. Begg Won Out in the Three-Cornered Fight for the Mayoralty by a Handsome Majority—Mr. Geo. Ingle Snowed Under by Mr. Geo. Jordan in the Race for the Reeveship—Mr. Eyres Captured the Deputy-Reeveship Against Great Odds—The Aldermanic Fight an Extremely Interesting and Close One.

Evening Post of Jan. 7

The municipal battle is over. Bullets were the weapons used, and a number of stalwarts combatants got slaughtered among the slain. The fices struggle lasted from 8 a.m. till 6 p.m., and during the interval the candidates led many assaults upon the respective polling booths. Some of these expeditions were highly successful; others started out gaily, but the grim grovel, rough and the leaders failed to rally their men into the firing line. It is even whispered that a number of desertions occurred during the day, and that some of those hoisted to the front—not caring that such a thing—changed the colors of their leaders — actually went over to the enemy weapon in hand. Treason over than in municipal warfare.

(The firmness of the fight may be judged from the fact that even the ladies were summoned to the colors in far greater numbers than usual. However the native chivalry of their commanders prompted them to provide sinews for the journey. He is known to tell that in the fair Anna, men seem to have handled their weapons with discretion and considerable skill, leaving the marks every time they aimed at anyone. It is whispered that their sympathies were strongly in favor of Mr. Welsh as likely to make an ideal commander-in-chief, but this must be believed as a mere conjecture. Of course, being a bachelor, it is possible that another fair one was overheard making some admission to this effect.

To be serious, the electors of Lindsay handed out some surprises yesterday. With three candidates in the field for the Mayoralty, many were of the opinion that Mr. Welsh would slip in by a close margin, but Mr. McWatters, both of whom were flying claim to the temperance vote (Taking Mr. Begg's popularity and acquaintance with his voters into account, Mr. Welsh made a splendid run, and may be expected to be heard from with confidence in handling himself with good judgment in the meantime.

The result of the fight between Mr. Geo. A. Jordan and Mr. Geo. Ingle for the reeveship was a real surprise for many, but is explainable on the ground that Mr. Jordan had given the best of satisfaction in the position of deputy-reeve, and was deemed worthy of promotion. Mr. Ingle's rejection often not mean lack of appreciation now on the part of the people who voted for him, but may be large numbers in years past—we feel sure. From the opinions frequently expressed, that did the majority make up in judicious choice of office. People generally admit the advantage likely to accrue from having a big man represent the city ability at their services, but reluctant to be impost to Mr. Jordan in order to secure the services of Mr. Ingle.

The fight for the Deputy-reeveship was perhaps as determined and stoutly waged as any. The three contestants were good men, many Messrs. McLean and Eyres had qualified for the fray by good work done in Council, while Mr. Cinnamon, who had served in Council frequently some years ago, had slipped into the march again with avowed intentions of carrying off the honors of the day. With two men of matured judgment and experience offering, Mr. McLean has no cause to be dissatisfied with the showing made on him in the running. He is a young man, and the evidences of ability afforded during his term in Council will stand him in good stead later on. Mr. Eyres is to be congratulated on his success against strong opponents and adverse circumstances. His victory has only accrued to the well-earned confidence in his fairness, impartiality and sound judgment, qualities to the fact that he has been the very center of the municipal career shown himself to be the friend of the workingman and retiring from the tedious attention to the rights of employers and all others. Not being a "worker" he has earned the respect and good will of all classes, and the thoughtful voter simply could not ignore the claims which his work earned the ballot.

Several of the aldermen left nothing undone to secure their election, and in that way contributed to the general excitement. All of them to be congratulated upon heading the poll — a deserved mark of the appreciation in which has been held. Mr. W. Jordan also won the "Well done!" of his fellow citizens, who advanced him to second place. Mr. Smale, for a newcomer, stands well, and will go higher still. Mr. McGough retains the confidence of the people, who placed him exactly where he wishes to be — in the middle of the bunch. Mr. Hogle Dobson looks a little old all over town, and has good reason to be proud of his popularity.

The victory of Mr. Donald Sinclair over Mr. J. R. McNeillie in the contest for Water Commissioner was the surprise of the day. (Mr. McN. was an extremely useful member, and is likely to be sorely missed.)

Leap Year and its Opportunities.

The present year, 1908, is leap year. It is the first time we have had it for four years, and most people don't expect it again for ample. Leap year is the year in which the fair sex is supposed to have entire sway, and in which those who have been in the habit of using discretion must avail their pleasure and invitation. It is the year in which the fair sex may wail their troubles and deeper grips deep into the hearts of those outside the garden of eve. It is a time also for the girls to show the boys how they things shall be done, and to express in deeds their appreciation of the actions of the boys during the past three years. Some of the young men about town have even heard already expressing their views that they are glad leap doesn't occur oftener than it does.

Local Option Also Voted on Yesterday—Result Hangs in the Balance—Many Licenses Cut Off—Contests For Mayors—Roll of Successful Candidates—Polling Was Very Quiet All Over Province.

Toronto, Jan. 7.—Elections took place in the various Ontario municipalities, outside of Toronto and North Toronto, which have special legislative sanction for New Year's Day voting. The local option bylaw, the power bylaws and various local bylaws were also means of more or less lively campaigning.

Kingston abandoned politics as applied to local elections by giving Dr. Ross, president of the local Conservative Association, as mayor. R. F. Matthews was handily elected for a second term at Peterboro. Brantford received Mayor Henry over Ald. Whitham by 34. Toronto Junction received Mayor Reid. Goderich elected Andrew McMillan. Mayor Stewart of Hamilton was in the lead of Ottawa were elected by acclamation.

In a dozen cities and towns yesterday the Hagarty power bylaw was submitted for the ratepayers, and in every case but one, to be specially mentioned, it was carried by big majorities ranging in about the same proportion as at Toronto last Wednesday. London and Waterloo carried it by 3 to 1; Hamilton by 7 to 1; Guelph by 10 to 1; Brantford had 1,311 in favor to 141 for it; Stratford, 1,144 to 34; Thomas, Woodstock, St. Mary's, Hespeler and Mount Forest were all in line.

Hamilton bylaw was for $275,000; London, $325,000; Galt, $66,000; Brantford, $85,000; Guelph, $50,000; Stratford, $46,000; Stratford, $35,000; Waterloo, $1,000; New Hamburg, $10,000.

The following are the complete results of the local option:

OBITUARY.

Dr. F. J. Smale, Assistant Manager of the Wm. Davies Co., Dead.

Toronto Globe, Jan. 6th

Dr. Fred J. Smale, assistant manager of the Wm. Davies Company, who resided at 76 Glen road, died yesterday at Rochester, Minnesota. He had been ill some time, and on Saturday last went to Rochester to undergo an operation for gall stones. Six weeks ago he was operated on for the same ailment, without any benefit. His friends and relatives had few particulars yesterday as to his condition. Deceased, who is widely known throughout the city and the province, leaves a widow and one child, aged 7 years.

Dr. Frederick J. Smale was a man of attractive personality and brilliant talents. His professional skill and success he attained extraordinary success, and his death is a distinct loss to his adopted city as to the big business interests with which he was associated. He was born near Lindsay and attended Bobcaygeon and Collegiate Institute in that town. Subsequently he graduated to the Toronto University, and his first career was of the kind that leave their mark as an aspiration to future generations. He graduated practicing in arts in 1892, with first-class honors in medicine, and subsequently he was awarded in the spring of that year the 1851 scholarship, the first established by the University, and worth $750 a year. Usually given for two years, it is extended, in the case of great merit, for a third year, and was for that reason given to Dr. Smale for three years. On quitting the university he entered Leipsic, Germany, pursuing his studies at the University there and continued his studies in Vienna and Berlin. He then returned to Toronto, and was at once taken on the staff as a lecturer in chemistry in Trinity university of 1900 he entered the service of the Wm. Davies Company as chemist, and soon became assistant general-manager. He was quite as noted in business as in science, and this happy combination added to his personal qualities, made him a strong factor in still more prominent spheres in the commercial and scientific world. At the office of the company and at the Universities he had friends who expressed when the news of his death came. Deceased was a Methodist man, still in his 30's. In religion he was a Methodist, member of the Sheppardsville Methodist church and superintendent of the Sunday School there.

Demise of Wm. Meagher, a Pioneer Resident of Ops Township.

It was with extreme regret that a wide circle of friends throughout the county heard of the death of William Meagher, one of the most widely known and respected residents of Lindsay, who passed away at the family home on St. Lawrence-st. on Saturday, Dec. 28th.

The late Mr. Meagher was born in Tipperary county, Ireland, in August, 1824, and was thus in the 84th year of four sons and one daughter, the others having predeceased him many years ago. He came with his parents to Canada in 1836, and settled in Ops township, but shortly afterwards removed to Lindsay, then a town, where he remained until a few years ago, when he retired from business and retired to the home where he died.

In 1854 Mr. Meagher married Mary Maloney, who, with three daughters of a family of six, survives. The daughters are Mrs. Thos. Ryan, of D. Tooley and Mrs. D. Murphy; the sons—John, James and William—died some years ago.

Mr. Meagher was a man of unusual energy and sound judgment, and core his share of the work incidental to pioneer life. He was one of the last of the early settlers who by work and perseverance have done so much to make this country what it is to-day. The funeral, which took place Tuesday to St. Patrick's church, was largely attended. High mass was celebrated by Ven. Archdeacon Casey, their mother, combined forces to restore the family fortune. They argued that the medicine which was so good for their woman friends and neighbors was equally good for the women of the whole world.

The Pinkhams had no money, and little credit. Their first laboratory was the kitchen, where roots and herbs were steeped on the stove, gradually filling a dozen bottles. Then came the question of selling it, for always before they had been a nuisance. They hired a job printer to run off some pamphlets setting forth the merits of the medicine, now called Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and these were distributed by the Pinkham sons in Boston, New York, and Brooklyn.

The wonderful curative properties of the medicine were, to a great extent, advertised, for wherever used it was commended it to others, and the demand gradually increased.

In 1877, by combined efforts the family had saved enough money to commence newspaper advertising. At from that time the growth and success of the enterprise was phenomenal, until to-day Lydia E. Pinkham and her Vegetable Compound have become household words everywhere, and many tons of roots and herbs are used annually in manufacture.

Lydia E. Pinkham herself did not live to see the great success of this work. She passed to her reward years ago, but until she had provided means for continuing her work as effectively as she could have done it herself.

During her long and eventful experience she was constantly consulted in her work and she was always careful to preserve the confidence of every case that came to her attention. The case of every sick woman applied to her for advice—and there were thousands—received careful attention. She studied the symptoms, treatment and results were recorded, and from these records, to-day these records, together with hundreds of thousands of letters from grateful women the world over, and representing every state and country in the world.

With Lydia E. Pinkham worked her daughter-in-law, the present Mrs. Pinkham. She was especially instructed in all her hard-won knowledge, and for years she assisted her in her vast correspondence.

To her hands naturally fell the direction of the work when the operator passed away. For nearly twenty-five years she has continued, and is adding to the work shown when the first Lydia E. Pinkham prepared her first recipe. The present Mrs. Pinkham, now the mother of a large family, is in good health and vigor, and, as she came as nearly well, the present Mrs. Pinkham continues to receive and answer letters from the office of no other person have so many letters been addressed, how to regain health. Sick women, this advice is free, and the medicine is given if you only write to ask for it.

Such is the history of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound: made from simple roots and herbs; the one great medicine for woman's ills, and the gifting monument to the noble woman whose name it bears.

WHO SHE WAS

SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF LYDIA E. PINKHAM

And a True Story of How the Vegetable Compound Had Its Birth and How the "Panic of '73" Caused It to be Offered for Public Sale in Drug Stores.

This remarkable woman, whose maiden name was Estes, was born in Lynn, Mass., February 9th, 1819, coming from a good old Quaker family. For some years she taught school, and became known as a woman of an alert and investigating mind, an earnest seeker after truth, and a woman of great power of a wonderfully sympathetic nature.

In 1843 she married Isaac Pinkham, a man of fair ability and strong will, but of a wonderfully sympathetic nature.

Lydia E. Pinkham herself did not live to see the great success of this work. She passed to her reward years ago, but until she had provided means for continuing her work as effectively as she could have done it herself.

Mrs. Nelson Babcock, Lindsay.

The news of the death of Fanny Vernon, beloved wife of Nelson Babcock, which occurred at the Ross Memorial Hospital on Dec. 20th, was a shock to her many friends. Mrs. Babcock was taken suddenly ill and her physicians found it necessary to have her removed to the Hospital, where an operation was performed, which proved fatal. Deceased was a good woman, well known and highly respected and loved by her many friends and relatives in town and surrounding country. She was a member of the Methodist church.

The funeral, which took place from her home on Dec. 23rd, was largely attended. Her husband and little son Ervin is left to mourn her loss, to whom much sympathy is extended.

THE FIELD OF SPORT

What is Occurring in the Town and District, and Sporting Circles Generally.

Hockey

CORONTOS STIFF GAME

Whitby made it interesting for Coborg New Year's night in the first game of the local O. H. A. group. The score at full time was 5-5, but the locals managed to get two goals in 20 minutes' extra play.

NEW LEAGUE A CERTAINTY.

The new district hockey league is a certainty, according to a Kingston despatch. Brockville and Kingston will have four teams, Belleville and Gananoque three teams each, and Deseronto and Napanee one each, towns will play a series until a winner is decided, and then will play the other towns for the championship.

COULD GO SOME, TOO.

Belleville Ontario: When the Port Hope team come out for their preliminary, a team of wonders will be brought to address, for so big a lot of boys were never before seen on Ballmaiden ice. Big as were the Lindsay Midgets, they were dwarfed by the representatives of Port Hope. Four or five of whom were six feet high and over, and some of them were correspondingly stout.

BRACEBRIDGE WON OUT.

The opening O. H. A. game intermediate series, between Newmarket and Bracebridge, was played New Year's night in the northern town. The teams were not in good shape, having had very little practice. The Newmarket goalkeeper, Cox, got a bad slip on the hard frost the puck early in the game, and held it safely, which weakened the side. Bracebridge won out by 37 to 7.

CROWLEY MAKING GOOD

Edmanton Bulletin: William Crowley, who will play cover-point, is a rigger man than Bamford, coming here with a record which perhaps no other athlete in Canada has, having played on fifteen championship teams in his entire career. He will be of great value to the local team. He and Bamford will make the highest defence in Canada and one of the best, and will make all the big league teams go on limit.

HOD STUART MEMORIAL.

The Wanderers and an "All-Star" team of Eastern Canada hockey players will get on a board: game Thursday in Montreal for the widow of the late world's leading hockey player. A big gate is looked for.

The sterling worth of Hod as a hockey player was realized this season when it was found so difficult to get a player to fill the gap left vacant by his untimely death. In addition to the honor he brought to Canada in connection with his brilliant play in the International League, he was the principal factor in lifting the Stanley Cup from its berth in the Kenora Skating Rink.

PUCKLETS

It a clean and exciting game at Beaverton, Woodville beat Beaverton 5-3 Saturday evening.

Referee Waghorne says the Midland-Fenelung game was one of the fastest and most exciting he ever witnessed. Surely Wag. has not forgotten the Lindsay-Belleville game here, when he almost fainted from sheer nervousness.

Oclette, of Fenelon Falls, who played with Guelph, has joined his old friend Cornell Corbeau on the Toronto team.

Mr. W. Clarke, of the Winnipeg Boxing Club, is in town for the winter. He has signed for the C. L. C. hockey team.

Gravenhurst and Orillia came together Friday in the forum down the Stan, winning with ease, score 12-2.

Roy Henderson, the Lindsay hockey player who played a good game with the Toronto Parkdale Canoe Club, will again don the same uniform this year.

Cobourg has secured a transfer of John E. Rouke, a junk clerk, from Trenton. He is a junior, out may get a place on the Intermediate team.

Harry Smith, the former Ottawa hockey player who was expelled from the National League for rough play, has signed to play with Pittsburg.

Midland and Penetang teams had a great game Friday in the former town, the play being the best seen in years. The crowd numbered 1400. Score—Midland 12, Penetang 10.

Mercer, the former Port Hope boy who last year played a dashing, winning game with Hanlan Irving's Guelph Pros., is this season playing a good game with the Ottawa Victorias.

Mr. A. W. Dunkley, late of Orangeville, but now Classical master at the Collegiate Institute, has signed to play on the line-out of the Lindsay team. He will be a strong man.

Guelph professionals won out last Friday in the opening game with the Brantford bunch. Score 4-2. Corcoran, the Paisley Falls crack, scored three of Guelph's four goals

Port Perry and Cannington came together Saturday night, at Cannington in the first game of the Intermediate O.H.A. series. The game was closely contested, the score being 8-4 in favor of the Port.

Belleville and Port Hope junior hockey teams came together Friday night at the Bay city, and a good game was the result. Score at half time was 3-2 in favor of Port Hope, which was increased to 6-5 by the close.

At Monday night's meeting of the O.H.A. executive, John Seymour was granted a date of residence from Peterboro to Lindsay. He has been Lindsay for some months and will make a valuable addition to the local line-up.

Simcoe's magnificent new hockey rink was opened New Year's night. It is 226 feet by 87 feet over all, with an ice space of 170 feet by 60 feet. It has an arched roof, the top of which is 44 feet above the ice, over no obstructions. It is brilliantly lighted with 12 natural gas arc lights over the ice. It has ample seating capacity and standing room for 2500 people, and is the most modern design, with all the latest conveniences.

Running

GREEN'S GOOD RECORD

Hilton Green, the I. C. A. C. crack runner, will lay up for a couple of months. He has been hard at it since May 24. He has run in 34 races, winning eight and finishing inside the money in fourteen. He was always breaking on the tape. If he could train consistently Green would be a dangerous man in any company.

COAST RUNNER'S MARK

Fred Elder won the Vancouver to M. C. A. Harriers' race of five miles and four-fifths. He broke last year's record, covering the distance in 31 minutes 23 3-5 seconds. Rapp secondand Simpson third. Will Chase let over the long-distance mark of 7 4-5 miles. Time 41 minutes 56 seconds. H. Johnston second, Fraser third, all are Vancouver men.

MADE FAST TIME

Finishing as fresh as if he had only run a few miles, Claude Pearce, the I. C. A. C. 18-year-old youngster, finished at the Grand Central noted at 12-0 yesterday afternoon, and 33 minutes behind him came Hilton Green, his club mate, after their run from the postoffice at Brentwood, a distance of 27 1-2 miles, in the record-breaking time of 3 hours and 13 minutes.

ST. KITTS' ROAD RACE

Tom Coley won the Martin Kierlee road race at St. Catharines on New Year's day, romping in like a young colt in 54 1-5, with a lead of a quarter of a mile. The real struggle was between Tom Ellis, the 18 year old Hamilton youngster, Thomas Fitch, of Toronto South End Association, and Hilton Green, the I. C. A. C. Indian. At the outset Ellis had started to hold Coley in check, and so for half a mile. Weiss he felt Lack Dodd made it seem for him, and he became badly winded, but picked up again and cut a terrific pace, which happened to be executive time—when there was but a mile to go Green forced a new fast time and tore after Fetch like a cyclone, the latter winning out by the narrow fraction. It was a spectacular finish.

THE OLYMPIC RACES

That Tommy Longboat, Tom Coley, Jack Tait, and company will have to do some tall tramping in the English Olympic is certain. An accurate line upon the situation is given in a letter from Fred Appleby, of London, England, to Tim O'Rourke, received recently.

Appleby is the man who beat the famous Alf Shrubb twice in English mile races, and now holds the world's record for the same distance.

Appleby says that the English runners are already in hard training for the Olympic, and he plans to run 7 miles at Christmas, time in an even two hours.

"The Marathon will be run in 2 hours and 22 minutes," predicts Mr. Appleby.

If the English amateurs travel the 25 miles in 2.22 even, the long, lean Canadians will have to step some. Tom did 2.24.02 4-5 at Boston, a full 25 miles, but there were two or three prizes for the prizes of distance, and that "Mr. Big Canoe" wasn't hollered much after the eighteen-mile mark, where he hit "good-day."

In England, with the champions of a dozen countries pounding at him, it will be very considerably to speed along a lot faster than at Boston. That he can go faster is the opinion of his friends who saw him at Boston, but he must be in "the pink."

WHO PUT UP THE MONEY?

John Walsh, the pedestrian, who is walking from San Francisco to New York, on a wager of $5,000, has been ill with pneumonia since Dec. 23 at Johnstown, Pa. Walsh left San Francisco Nov. 10, on a bet that he would make the trip in ninety days. He began his journey again in a sweater, but weakened and nervous condition, and expects to reach New York in ten days. Some stalling on the trip Walsh has lost 25 pounds.

Trotting

PACIFIC COAST RACING.

Vancouver, B.C., sports are planning great things for next year, and if things do not miscarry, a string of first-class racing tracks will be established. It is now apparent that the public will evince great enthusiasm.

RACE WINNINGS.

Complete returns from last published show that $3,375,551 were distributed among the owners of the United States and Canada half over Toronto, Montreal, Hamilton, Windsor, Fort Erie and Woodbine in 149 days, the horses winning altogether $429,785, or $98,940 here, $70,275 at Montreal, $19,019 at Fort Erie, $92,665 at Windsor and $67,845 at Hamilton. Toronto made the best distribution, giving nearly as much money in 29 days as did Fort Erie in 38.

LINDSAY WINTER RACES.

The annual winter meeting of the Lindsay Trotting Association will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, 14th and 15th Jan., 1908.

First Day—2.30 Class, trot, or pace, $100; 2.18 Class, trot or pace, $150. A prize of a $25 set of harness will be given by the Association for green horses owned in the County of Victoria, than never started for money. Half mile heats.

Second Day—2.20 Class, trot or pace, $150. Free-for-all, $200.

Come and see the biggest race meeting ever held in Lindsay.

Jockey Notter's contract to ride this season for James R. Keene has been signed. The terms are novel, inasmuch that he will receive a percentage instead of a straight fee for his retainer. It, however, carried a guarantee of $10,000.

Tuesday and Wednesday of next week ought to be interesting days for lovers of horseflesh here. The Lindsay Trotting Association are going to pull off some fine events, one of which—a race for green horses owned in the County of Victoria—is of particular interest to owners of fast horses that have not yet qualified in races. Four regular racing events will be pulled off besides.

Curling.

SCHEDULE GAMES

Unusual interest is being taken this year in the curling fixtures, according to the fact that some of the games usually included are just now lagging in the rear. Of course, only a fraction of the games have been played, and as soon as a good frost comes would make a big change in the table of averages.

AHEAD FOR A TIME

Toronto Granites under Hilton's quartette visited Lindsay Saturday and were downed by the famous Victoria team, 21 to 14, in a good game. The young Torontonians went into the lead on the fourth end, when they got a score of five on one stone, and held their lead to the fourteenth. Lindsay's game was good, but the first lack of practice told, and they faded away.

Odds and Ends of Sport

WILL DEPEND HER TITLE.

Miss Elizabeth Ryan, of Los Angeles, holder of the women's international tennis championship, has announced that she will not defend her title, if the plan games to be held in London this year, when women players from many countries will contest, is carried out.

TWILL BE IN EARNEST

Ireland's greatest ruction of recent years promises to occur next St. Patrick's Day, when Jem Roche of Dublin meets Tommy Burns, alias Theobald Brunsa, the German-Canadian-American champion of the world. If the Irishman beats this Canadian-American champion he is entitled to revive the flag by surrounding the green harp with a red halo.

HANDY WITH A GUN

The world's sporting record for endurance has been beaten by Topperwein, who at San Antonio, Texas, completed a test day's shooting, at which he himself was beaten. He fired 6,500 targets and missing only 1,000 Topperwein used a 20-calibre, automatic rifle, and the blocks were two and one-half inches thick and were thrown into the air at a distance of twenty feet from the point where the marksman stood.

WILL VISIT CANADA

According to all present plans it is likely that the English Association football team will pay another visit to this country this coming spring to play several matches with Canadian and American clubs. An English combination, known as the Civil Service team, may be brought over by A. W. Parker, of London, who managed the Canadian team while playing of late last year. The men of this team are all amateurs holding the championship of the Southern league in England. They will play two matches in this country, two in this city at Staten Island Cricket Club, two at Philadelphia and two in Canada.

CRICKETERS PLANNING TOUR

A Winnipeg despatch says that next season a team of Western cricketers will be sent East to meet all comers. The tourists will be drawn from the Winnipeg clubs alone.

DUTCHMEN WON.

The Toronto pro team ran up against a stiff proposition when they faced the flying Dutchmen of Berlin on Mutual-st. rink Saturday evening in the first game of the newly organized professional series. Over 1200 spectators were present, and got the worth of their money. The ice was in bad shape, and good hockey was impossible. The Dutchmen were in better condition than their opponents and stood the arduous work better. The score was 3-0.

THE GAME OF BILLIARDS

Geo. Sutton has agreed to play Mormugetter for the 18-2 world's championship on Jan. 28th, in New York.

Thos. Hueston, pool champion of the world, has been challenged by Jerome Keough, of Buffalo.

Albert Cutler, of Boston, has challenged Jacob Schaefer for the 18-1 balkline championship of the world. Schaefer has accepted, and has set the time January 23, at Philadelphia. The game will be played in Agricultural Hall.

The Toronto Star says of Ned Hanlan, who died last Friday in pneumonia: "It was 32 years ago since Ned Hanlan, champion oarsman, stroke into the limelight. Fame is fleeting, but Hanlan's word more enduring than the average athlete. The 'Canadian boy in blue' was known throughout the whole world, and his achievements brought Canada into prominence.

The bath in which the Olympic swimming and diving contests are to be carried out has been completed, and is placed opposite the Royal Hotel. Next to the bath is the running track and a huge iron and stone stand is being built round. The stand will have accommodation for 80,000 people, and it is said it is twice as large as the one at Athens. Beneath this stand dressing rooms have been arranged for the competitors of the 25 countries that are expected to be represented.

Doctor Wanted To Amputate

Woman's Toe Saved by Zam-Buk.

But for the timely arrival of a box of Zam-Buk, Mrs. E. F. Fonger, 43 Myrtle-st. St. Thomas, Ont., would have lost her toe. She says: "I am most thankful I discovered the existence of Zam-Buk. For about 9 months I suffered cruelly from the effects of having a corn removed from my little toe, for with its removal a hole remained and my toe was in a terrible state. For months I was unable to wear a shoe and as the toe kept showed no signs of healing I was in such a shocking condition the doctor thought it necessary to amputate it. About this time I received a sample box of Zam-Buk and began using it on my toe. The first application gave me the great est ease from pain, and encouraged me to give Zam-Buk a thorough trial. Six weeks after commencing with Zam-Buk there was no sign of a hole for the flesh had grown in very firmly and all soreness and pains were entirely banished. Zam-Buk brought about this healing when all other remedies failed. We find Zam-Buk so valuable that we would not be without a box in the house."

Zam-Buk heals cuts, bruises, old wounds, running sores, eczema, ulcers, boils, eruptions, scalp sores, ringworm, chapped hands, burns, scalds, and all skin diseases. Use a box, all druggists and stores, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 3 boxes $1.25.

Do Orchards Pay?

Port Perry Star: Mr. William Bateman, of this town, received a letter from his brother-in-law, Mr. Myron D. Silver, of Sutton West, Ont., last Saturday, giving a statement of the proceeds of his orchard during the past season. He sold to J. O. Henry & Sons, Oshawa, over 1,200 barrels for $1,200 net. He states that he did not furnish a barrel nor pick an apple nor board the train, simply delivered apples at stations, including barrels of a mile; also sold 800 worth to neighbors in village and kept 20 barrels for family use. This orchard comprises 25 acres and consists of over 200 Northern Spy trees and other local apples, including Baldwins, Ben Davis, Russets, Greenings, etc. This orchard has been little or no expense to Mr. Silver, the trees having been planted when he purchased the property. How will this catch a number of our farmers on Scugog who last year cut down and burned large orchards, regarding them as an encumbrance to the land?

THANK YOU

We wish to extend our thanks to those who contributed to the success that we have had with our holiday stock.

We had some fears that in view of recent conditions we had provided more goods than we should, but the result shows that the character of this stock and the reasonableness of the prices were appreciated by the public, and that it responded with hearty good will.

Trade was fair satisfactory in volume and was made doubly satisfactory by the manner in which our line was appreciated by careful buyers.

LINDSAY, FRIDAY, JAN. 10th, '08

LINDSAY POLICE AFFAIRS.

We are continually receiving enquiries from our readers why the police court proceedings are not published in the Post as they occur, and to our correspondents and the public an explanation is due.

Police Magistrate Jackson and Chief Constable Vincent are adopting a course that has never been practised by the police of Lindsay before, or by the police of any other town or city we know of. Viz., only giving the press the most meagre information concerning some cases before the court, and suppressing all first offence cases and special cases that they apparently wish to be particularly kept dark. Naturally very little police news filters through to the press.

We believe the publication of the police court proceedings has a greater influence upon offenders than the Magistrate's almost private court, with a small fine, and we know we are not alone in our opinion.

The police court is held at irregular intervals, and it is not always convenient to have a reporter at every session of the court. It is the duty of the Chief of Police to furnish accurate and full information of the cases before the court, particularly when the police books are not accessible to the reporters.

Here is a case in point: On Christmas eve a load of hay was stolen almost from under the night constable's nose, close to Kent-st. Each day since then our reporter, when asking the Chief for police news, has received the same reply—"Nothing to-day." We can draw our own conclusions, that there is looseness somewhere, or the hay or its equivalent would long since have been returned to its owner. There seemed a reluctance to reference to the matter, but we are not supposed to pay any attention to them.

FENELON FALLS

The enclosed paragraph was inadvertently omitted by you from the correspondence sent in Tuesday, 1st inst. It belongs to the article on the Irish evening and should come second on the program; Mrs. Wm. Bessgoyne contributed a humorous reading, which pleased the audience immensely.

I didn't see you at the Irish evening on Monday night, Jack, where were you? "Oddfellows' meeting! Oh, yes! but that wasn't in it at all, at all. You should have seen there me pet amongst all those bright-eyed daughters and grand-daughters of old Ireland; that was the place for you. Share I wouldn't have missed it meself for all the Oddfellows ever made. Well, to begin wid, the first thing to hit yez the eye when yez went in was the decorations; everything spoke the heart of St. Patrick himself to see them. 'All across wid side of the big front room was "Erin Go Bragh" in big green letters on a white background, wid the clear little shamrocks scattered around. Then all around the rooms and halls more white and green, and over the doors and windows the shrook flags in all their glory were hanging. Faith, whoever did it all had murthuri, it was quite uncanny. First of all we had a spacha from the Riverend Mr. Frinch. Faith, it's himself knows how to talk, sure enough, when he sets out to tell us about dear ould Orelaud, or any other land for that matter. Mr. Frinch, he got through spakin, we had a song by our host, Thos. Cashure, wid the song "The Little Ould Log Cabin on the Hill," and he did it well. After that came a readin' by Geo. Wigginton, and the name of his readin' was "The Orish Letther" and many a good laugh he gave us. Miss Bertha Austin played a few instrumental solo, which delighted all lovers of music. Miss Alice Hand sang a little good ould song, called 'Come back to Erin'. It made wan feel a lot lonesome, but when Miss Nora Brandon came out wid her recitation all about the Widdy McCree and Larry O'Dee and the pigs—where it there was a lot of a fuss about—where it was soon shamed away, for everyhwan had to laugh. It's a swate voice Miss Fanny has to an aisthey. Mr. Frinch then gave us a song, 'The dear little shamrock,' and I never heard it sung better. Miss Hand gave a readin' about a couple of Dirrmaid fresh from the ould sod—fairly brought down the house. Mr. Frank Rutherford sang that beautiful song 'Killarney', which can never be heard too often, especially when sung as this lady sung it on Monday night. She did full justice to the song, which is saysh a great dhis. Miss E. McDougall played the accompaniment. Mr. Frinch then sang another song, 'I'm waiting, Asthore.' If there hadn't been another bit of entertainment where to hear this wan would have been well worth going to hear. There is just one word that has escaped me and that is Mr. Frinch's address at this occasion, and that word is magnificent. He was accompanied by Mrs. Frinch. Dr. Ryan was called on for a spache, seing, as he was one of the successful candidates at the recent Medical examination, but to the point, touching on the touchiest question, one of the burning questions of the day. He thanked the friends who had supported him one and all. The doctor is all right, and hearty thanks was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Cashore for the warm welcome and hospitality shown the people. Mr. Frinch's address in aid of the St. James Lithery Society got it say. We had refreshments, and cakes and tea and coffee and thin we had a while in innisent diversion, after which we went home to dream of shamrocks, shillyloes, rice, etc. etc.

If you only knew how anxiously we bachelor bachelors have been waiting for 1908 to come around, you would not let your chances go by. The municipal elections for Dalton township held on Monday last, were very exciting and also close. The Local Option bylaw for Dalton was carried, the temperance party lacking 6 votes to give them their 0-5 majority.

F. C. Fielding was returned Reeve of the township by a majority of 10 over his opponent, G. T. McKague. The Council is as follows: J. A. Richman, Jos. Lytle, J. H. Black and J. A. Ross.

The elections in Somerville township were very keenly contested, and were excitement high. Local Option has been high. R. A. Callan, of Coboconk has been returned Reeve for another year, and has scored another great victory over his opponent, Jas. Wilson. Good Templars and Coulson's majority being 73. Two of last year's council were re-elected namely, Dunn and Cooke. The Reeve for the year will be Fell and Hoskins.

As was expected, Local Option carried in Somerville, but the majority was not as large as was first expected, the Temperance Party securing only 8 votes over their necessary 5-5 majority. A very large vote was polled in the township, perhaps the largest in years, due no doubt to the local option bylaw, and the supposed close contest between the two aspirants for Reeve.

F. Elliott and wife, of North Dorset, were the guests of friends here enjoying the refreshing air of Ontario during the winter season.

Business has been very good in the village this season.

Mrs. J. F. Gill, of Pembina, N. D., has improved greatly since her return to the home of her parents here. The pure air, water, choice fruits, and good medical attendance has been the means of putting new life in her. An absence of 16 years has wrought a marvellous change in her appearance.

WILBERSMITH—NORTH EMILY.

(Special to The Post.)

Everyone seems to be enjoying the beginning of the New Year, as concerts, weddings and parties are the order of the day.

On Friday last a crowd of Dunford and Emily people joined and spent a very enjoyable evening at Mr. Norman Kennedy's.

Quite a number from here went down on Monday night to hear Mr. Marsh's lecture, which was very interesting.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Elliott spent their holidays at Argyle.

Mr. Garner Kennedy, of Davidson, Sask., who has been visiting at his home here with his brother, Matthew, arrived home on Dec. 30. He speaks well of the country as a place of business and for agriculture. He has his own home, which was by the States, to spend four days in Chicago on business, and also four days in Toronto. Garner will return to his ranch in the spring, so he thinks it is a good country, and has done exceedingly well in the past.

Everyone seems to be well pleased to hear that Mr. James Courtney has been elected councillor, as he is the young man in the prime of life.

Mr. and Mrs. David W. Kennedy have returned home from their honeymoon, which was spent in Peterboro and Lakefield.

Miss Maud Fowler, of Toronto, is visiting at Mr. John Mathew's.

Mrs. John Davis, of Brussels, is at present visiting Mr. James F. Kennedy.

Could Not Identify Burke.

Charles Porteous, the farmer who was shot four times in the head by an unknown highwayman, at Cavansville, near Millbrook, Ont., early in December went to Toronto on Monday to see Chas. Burke, whom the local police have in custody on a charge of vagrancy. When Porteous saw him he could not be sure that Burke was the man, as the shooting took place in the stable, and he was unable to get a good look at his assailant. Another farmer who says he saw the strange man earlier in the day will be brought to the city to have a look at Burke.

The liquidation of this Company has been finally closed. The property has realized enough to pay the creditors 40c. on the dollar, but nothing whatever for the shareholders. Fortunately for the shareholders in this locality, Mr. R. J. McLaughlin, K.C., who acted fore them, raised the point shortly after the liquidation, that the preferred stock of the Company had not been legally created, and that there were really no preferred shareholders, but that the people who paid money in for preferred stock were entitled to sue for their money back, and consequently to rank as creditors. As a result he has succeeded in ranking some sixty-five parties as creditors for the amount that they paid for preferred stock, and they are now getting 40c. on the dollar, the same rate as the bank and trade creditors are being paid. Shareholders who neglected to repudiate their preferred stock and establish claims as creditors, get nothing.

The litigation has been carried on now for about five years. Some eight cases in all were tried as tests, three of which went to the Court of Appeal, all of which were decided in favor of the contention raised by Mr. McLaughlin. The effect of these decisions were also to relieve a large number of people in this vicinity who had subscribed for stock, from having to pay for it, and as a result of the whole litigation many thousands of dollars were saved to people of this county.

THE NEW RURAL EDUCATION.

Teachers in sympathy with rural life and the school garden are the two points of importance in the movement for a new rural education, says the Toronto News. The purpose which they are meant to serve is to give rural life its proper preeminence in the rural school. The movement towards this end began in the United States when a country school for agriculture was established at Wausau, Marathon county, Wisconsin, in 1892. In Ontario, outside the Provincial Agricultural College, which is one of the most powerful influences we have in modern agriculture, the new rural education had its first victory when the provincial authorities established agricultural classes in six provincial high schools.

Fifty-eight per cent. of the total school population of Ontario, towns and cities included, received its sole instruction in the rural schools. Fifty-eight per cent. never reaches the high school. This fact speaks for the importance of the rural school. The education of the children of the farming community depends on the teachers of the rural schools and on the rural school curriculum. Farming is the most important of all Canadian industries. Two things are necessary to give children an understanding of the importance, dignity, and enjoyment of country life. The first of these is a teacher who understands and is in sympathy with life in the country. The second is some practical experience of ideal methods in agriculture. This practical experience is to be gained in the school garden.

To provide teachers of this description for the rural schools, it will be necessary to modify the training in the model and normal schools. The professional training of teachers for country schools should contain a preparation for teaching not only reading, writing, arithmetic, the outlines of history and geography, composition and the study of English literature, but preparation on the lines of the new rural education which directs work in the school garden. In this field surely the Ontario Agricultural College could lend aid to the normal and model schools. Such an undertaking must mean a gradual revolution in the character of rural school education. To be accomplished successfully the revolution should come slowly. The work of preparing teachers for rural schools, qualified to undertake practical work in a school garden and to give instruction in elementary agriculture of the same fine modern type which is made in the Ontario Agricultural College, can not be completed in one year or two. But eventually it must be accomplished. The advocates of the new rural education are justified in asking for a modification in professional training of teachers; for the maintenance whenever possible of continuation classes in country schools; for the revision of text books with an introduction of instruction to show the importance and beauty of country life; and for improvement in the grounds, buildings and equipment of country schools.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. Borden has not yet asked Dr. Pugsley for the names of the gentlemen who carried the swag.

It is said that two hundred and fifty shoplifters were caught in Montreal stores last Saturday afternoon and night. Five hundred private detectives watched the departmental and other large stores with the above result. Not one of the 250 were prosecuted. Why? Because, we are told, it is a settled policy with the big dry goods stores of Montreal not to prosecute where they can avoid it. Publicity of the kind entailed in a police court they believe to be harmful to their business. They only prefer charges when some very valuable article is lifted or where some notorious thief is the culprit. In all cases, however, the party detected is usually made to sign a confession of guilt, which is carefully locked away to be used should the party be found stealing a second time.

YELVERTON.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

On the eve of Dec. 23rd, a surprise party consisting of three sleighloads, visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Stacey, North Yelverton, for the purpose of a presentation to their daughter, Miss Elva M., organist in the Methodist church, Yelverton. After the jolly party of forty or more were comfortably seated, Mr. William McGill was asked to preside and announced the purpose of their gathering together on this occasion, and asked Miss Stacey to take the chair, when an address was ably read by Mr. Joseph Porter, a purse of twenty dollars being presented by Miss Ollie Neal. The address was as follows; To Miss E. M. Stacey, dear organist,—We, the adherents and choir of this appointment feel that we should show some slight appreciation to you at this Christmas time for the faithful services you have rendered during the past three years as organist. While you have not labored for present reward, yet your devotion and untiring energy in assisting in the service of praise and song has not been unnoticed. You have been a true organist, for not only have you led the choir and been most efficient as organist, but you have also endeavored to raise our thoughts in gratitude to Him, who alone is worthy of all praise. You have nobly used the talents that have been allotted to you for the promotion of Christ's kingdom and your own life has been benefitted thereby and your influence extended for good. We ask you to accept this purse as a slight recognition of your services, and pray that in the years that are to come God's richest favor and blessing may attend you; that you may be gently led by Him who is too wise to err and too good to be unkind, and in the great future you may hear Him say, "Well done, good and faithful servant." Signed on behalf of the choir and community. Miss Stacey, after her surprise, replied very feelingly, thanking her many friends for such a gift, and hoped to be spared to do even more for her choir than she had in the past. She wished them all a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. There followed a few speeches from the gentlemen present congratulating Miss Stacey. The rest of the evening was spent in music and games, and other amusements. Later, a supper was provided by the visiting ladies, after which all joined in singing God

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Cure Anaemia

Pale Faces, Dizzy Spells, Palpitating Heart, Headaches and Shortness of Breath Are Symptoms of Anaemia.

Watery blood is an open invitation to disease to take possession of your system. Watery blood is responsible for nearly all the headaches and backaches and sideaches that affect womankind. Watery blood is responsible for the dull eyes, sallow cheeks and the listless, dragged out feeling that is found in so many growing girls. Good blood means good health, and good blood actually comes through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Weak, ailing, despondent women who use this medicine are made active and strong; listless, pale-faced girls are given new health, rosy cheeks, bright eyes and a new sense of happiness and security. Mrs. E. S. Nightingale, Chesley, Ont., says; "My daughter was ill for a long time with anaemia and would often be confined to bed for three or four days at a time, and we feared she was going into a decline. A lady friend advised the use of Dr. Williams Pink Pills and I got a half dozen boxes. By the time these were used there was a marked improvement, and I got a further supply for her. The change these pills have wrought in her condition is so great that you would not think that she was the same girl. I will always have a kindly feeling for Dr. Williams Pink Pills."

You can get these pills from any medicine dealer or by mail at 50c. a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Save the King, and on leaving wished the Stacey home a merry Christmas and a happy new year.

FENELON FALLS

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

After tea there was a programme, which afforded much pleasure to all present. They returned about eight o'clock in the evening, much delighted with the entertainment.

Miss Ethel Robson entertained her Sunday school class on Tuesday evening, New Year's eve, after which they attended watch night service at St. James' church.

The Rev. G. W. Henderson, of Port Hope, gave a lecture in the Methodist church on Christmas night. It was much enjoyed by all present. The Rev. Mr. Dewey, who was to have lectured on that occasion, was prevented by illness from attending. Miss Lilian Wilson sang a solo, "The Star of Bethlehem" most acceptably, and Mr. W. Chambers contributed a violin solo in his usual excellent style.

The anniversary services at St. James' church on Sunday, Dec. 29th, were well attended. The Rev. Geo. O'Mara, who preached at both services, is an able and eloquent speaker, and his sermons were most impressive. The music was excellent, and the church, which was beautifully decorated for the Christmas service, presented a most attractive appearance.

He was married in 1860 to Miss Swindon, of Fenelon township, who survives him. Deceased was a lifelong and consistent member of the Church of England. In politics he was a Conservative. The funeral took place on Thursday, under the auspices of the Grand Orange Lodge of British America, of which deceased was a life member. A number of brethren from a distance attended the funeral, which was one of the largest seen here for years.

SALEM—OPS

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

On learning that Miss Jennie Hartley, who has faithfully filled the position of organist in our church for four years, intends leaving our midst that she may take a course in music at Albert College, Belleville, the neighbors showed their appreciation of her services by assembling at her home on Wednesday evening and presenting to her a beautiful gold locket and an extension bracelet with the following address;

We, the members and adherents of Salem church have heard with very deep regret of your intended departure from our midst. Not only as organist of our church, which position you have so eminently filled to our entire satisfaction, but your kind heart and many social qualities, which has endeared you so much to every member and adherent of the congregation that we feel it incumbent upon us to make some acknowledgment of the many pleasures we have enjoyed through your many contributions to entertain us in every way possible. Your absence will create a vacancy amongst us which will be keenly felt in the whole community and one that will take a long time, if ever, to fill so pleasantly and satisfactorily as you have done. Our hearts and best wishes will go with you and follow you wheresoever you may go, with the hope that your future life, wherever your lot may be cast, shall be one of happiness and prosperity.

As a small token of our esteem and on behalf of this congregation we beg to present you with the contents of the accompanying parcel, which we trust you will appreciate, not for its intrinsic value, but as an evidence of friendship and kindness from the congregation who appreciate you so highly and who so deeply deplore your enforced absence from their midst.

We sincerely hope, however, that what is our loss will in your sphere of life be your gain, and result in your happiness and prosperity. Signed on behalf of the Salem congregation, Hilliard Patton, James Naylor.

The address was read by Mr. Hilliard Patton and Mr. James Naylor made the presentation. Miss Hartley made a very appropriate reply, thanking the people for their kindness.

BOBCAYGEON.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The grim reaper, Death, has been claiming his share during the past week. On Sunday the 29th ult. the wife of Mr. John Vanvalkenberg was laid to rest in the cemetery here. On Thursday, the 2nd inst., the funeral of Mr. F. White, who resided two and a half miles south of this, took place to the cemetery here, and on Friday, the 3rd inst., the funeral of Mrs. John F. Johnston, of South Verulam, took place. All three funerals were largely attended, and the surviving relatives have the heartfelt sympathy of the village and vicinity.

Our village Council were all elected by acclamation, and the following are our city fathers for 1908; Reeve, George Byng; councillors, Messrs. Adam Brock, Joseph Kelso, Maurice Lane and James Lewis.

The members of the School Board are Messrs. John A. Moffatt, W. Hickson, Rev. W. G. Smith, John Conway, D. D. Cain and Charles Athill. The Electric commissioners are Dr. S. H. Thorne and W. C. Moore.

Knox church held a social tea for its members and adherents on New Year's eve, which proved a very pleasant affair. There was no admission fee and whole families came for a social evening, and they were not disappointed, as both the tea and the program, which was well rendered, were heartily enjoyed by all. Sleighs were secured to bring those who were infirm or had no means of getting to this family gathering, so that some who have not been able to attend church service for some time, were in attendance.

The entertainment, which was held in the town hall here on New Year's night was a decided success. The members of our fire company had secured the best talent of the village and district for the occasion, so that a most excellent program was presented to a packed house. Everyone present enjoyed the evening and went away happy. The proceeds go to aid the fire company.

Wood is coming into town rapidly these fine days. The prices for wood this season are moderate here.

The work is progressing well on the new dam at Little Bob.

Lindsay, January 1st. 1908.

GENTLEMEN:—The end of the year means Stocktaking. A careful Stocktaking of the business situation is also interesting and profitable.

Quite recently there was a slump after a long period of splendid business all over the country. Someone discovered that currency was scarce and immediately set up a howl. Political financiers and other schemers took it up and worked it overtime. Complications set in, some fatalities occurred, specialists relieved the situation, but the scare was general.

Suddenly it was remembered that our natural resources were never in better shape, our producing capabilities never greater, our consuming power never so large and our transportation facilities wholly inadequate.

Since then the available medium of exchange has been kept on the move. No good business man has held on to a dollar unnecessarily. Confidence is crawling out of the cyclone cellar and we shall all be busy again very soon.

Look cheerful, act confidently, be optimistic. It will help the good work along.

Our trade of selling dependable clothing and funishings for Men and Boys for the year 1907 was good. This to us is very encouraging, it goes to prove that the buying public looks to quality as well as price.

We want 1908 to be a prosperous year and ask you one and all to join us in this desire.

With the New Year greeting and best wishes, we are

Yours very truly

Had Goods on Wrecked Ship.

Mr. Stubbins, Bond-st., received a case of household furniture from England the other day, which had been on the road for nearly two months. It was shipped to him on the steamship Mount Temple, which was wrecked about a month ago off Sable Island, near Nova Scotia. Six chairs belonging to Mr. Stubbins were also in the wreck, and of these Mr. Stubbins has had no word, although he might receive them any day. He had to pay the steamship company 66 per cent. he had believed. Then as he held wood-el a fresh idea struck him, and he laughed.

"You have entirely forgotten one thing," he said. "You can hardly dis-miss your wife."

"My wife doesn't count."

Again Loder laughed. "I'm afraid I scarcely agree. The complications would be slightly—slightly" he re-paused.

Chilcote's latent irritability broke out suddenly. "Look here," he said. "the joke's a shabby one. It will be moonshine to you, but it's reality to me."

Again Loder took his face between his hands.

"Don't ruffle the idea. I'm in dead earnest."

Loder said nothing.

"Think—think it over before you re-fuse."

For a moment Loder remained re-tionless, then he rose suddenly, push-ing back his chair.

"Tush, man! You don't know what you say. The fact of your being mar-ried bars it. Can't you see that?"

Again Chilcote caught his arm.

"Two misunderstand," he said. "You mistake the position. I tell you my wife and I are nothing to each other. She goes her way; I go mine. We have our own friends, our own rooms. Marriage, actual marriage, we have never entered into. We meet occasion-ally at meals and at other people's houses; sometimes we go out together for the sake of appearances; beyond that, nothing. If you take up my life nobody in it will trouble you less than Eve—I can promise that." He laugh-ed mutedly.

Loder's face remained unmoved.

"Even granted that," he said, "the thing is still impossible."

"Why?"

"There is the home. The position there would be untenable. A man is known there as he is known in his own club." He drew away from Chil-cote's touch.

"Very possibly. Very possibly," Chilcote laughed quickly and excitedly. "But what club is without its scandal-mongers? I am glad you spoke of that. I am glad you mined that point. It was a long time ago that I hit upon a reputation for myself as a shield for—for other things, and the more useful it has become the more I have let it grow. I will prepare my ground ex-ten-sively. Ten years ago I was a wild man, and as you were it to outward appearances no one would raise an eyebrow. Be the same way you might vote in my place, and, I guess, make a speech if you wanted to".

At the word speech Loder turned re-voluntarily. For a fleeting second the coldness of his manner dropped and his face changed.

Chilcote, with his nervous quickness of perception, read in a shield for—and a new look crossed his own face.

"Why not?" he said quickly. "You once had ambitions in that direction. Why not renew the ambitions?"

"And drop back from the mountains into the gutter?" Loder smiled and slowly shook his head.

"Better to live for one day than to exist for a hundred!" Chilcote's voice trembled with anxiety. "For the third time he extended his hand and touched other.

This time Loder did not shake off the detaining hand. He scarcely seemed to feel its pressure.

"Look here." Chilcote's fingers tight-ened. "A little while ago you said I had influence. Here you can step into a position built by influence. You might do all you once hoped to do".

Loder suddenly lifted his head. "Ab-surd!" he said. "Absurd! The suggestion was never carried through."

"Precisely why it will succeed. Peo-ple never suspect until they have a precedent. Will you consider it? At least consider it. Remember, for you it is a risk it is I who am running it. On your own showing you have no position to jeopardise."

The other laughed curtly.

"Better go tonight will you promise me to consider it?"

"No."

"Then you will send me your decision to-morrow. I won't take your answer now."

Loder freed his arm abruptly. "Why can't you be sane?"

Chilcote smiled nervously. "Because I know men and men's temptations. We are all very strong till the quick is touched. Then we all wince. It's simply with one man, conditions with another. In each case it's only a mat-ter of degree. Loder, I firmly believe in his antirical, unstrung way and held out his hand. "You have my address, I think. Are you going?"

Loder pressed the hand and dropped it. "Good night," he said mechanically. He crossed the room quietly and held the door open. "Goodby," he said again but at other times and tones.

As he crossed the threshold Chilcote paused, a wild fevor," he corrected with emphasis.

Until the last echo of his vigilant steps ebbe dwell every Loder stood with his hand on the door. Then closing it he turned and looked around the room. For a considerable space he stood there as if weighing the merits of each object. Then very slowly he sat down to one of the bookshelves, drew out Max's "Parliamentary Practice" and carrying it to the desk, readjusted the lamp.

CHAPTER VI.

ALL the next day Chilcote moved in a fever of excitement. He with hope one moment, cold with fear the next, he rushed with restless energy into every task that presented itself, only to drop it as suddenly. Twice during the morning he drove to the entrance of Clifford's inn, but on each occasion the courage failed him and he returned to Grosvenor square to learn that the expected message from Loder had come.

It was a morning condition of mind, and he was not in a condition to see more than an exaggeration of what his state had been for months and made but little allowance for it in his bearing or manner.

In the afternoon he took his place in the house, but, though it was his first appearance since his failure of two days ago, he drew but small personal notice. When he chose, his manner could repel advances with extreme effect, and of late he had used it to drive away from him.

"I believe I've encountered Pride surrounded by a great halo," he mused. "It is a pity that Pride's life would have passed on, but moving away from his party the old man no-ticed him. He was always courteously particular in his treatment of Chilcote, as the husband of his ward and godchild.

"Better, Chilcote," he said, holding out his hand. As the speed of the hour, rather formal tones, so characteristic of the old statesman, a hundred memo-ries rose to Chilcote's mind, a hundred hours distrustful in the living and un-bearable in the recollection, and with them the new flash of hope, the new possibility of freedom. In a sudden rush of confidence he turned to his leader.

"I believe I've found a remedy for my nerves," he said. "I—I believe I'm going to be a new man." He laughed the laugh of a boy in excitement.

"Pride pressed his fingers tight-

"That is right," he said. "That is right. I called at Grosvenor square this morn-ing, but I've told no one your illness of the other day was not serious. She was very busy this morning. She could only spare me a quarter of an hour. She is indefatigable over the social side of your prospects, Chilcote. You owe her a large debt. A popular wife means a great deal to a politician."

The steady eyes of his companion dis-turbed Chilcote.

He drew away his hand.

"Pride is working," he said vagrely.

Pride smiled. "That is right," he said again. "Admiration is too largely mixed with pity to be entirely sincere. And with a courteous excuse he re-joined his friends.

It was dinner time before Chilcote could desert the house, but the moment departure was possible he hurried to Grosvenor square.

As he entered the home the hall was empty. He swore irritably under his breath and pressed the nearest bell. Since his momentary exhilration Chilcote's presence had grown and ter-ribly fallen until now they hung at the lowest ebb.

He was in such an unconcealed impa-tience for an answer to his summons that he forgot that his man always at the head of the stairs.

"Come here!" he called, pleased to find some one upon whom to vent his irritation. "Has that wire come for me?"

"No, sir. I inquired five minutes back."

"Inquire again."

"Yes, sir." Allsopp disappeared.

A second later after his disappear-ance the bell of the hall door whinged briskly.

Chilcote started. All sounds outside, like all strange lights, affected him, ex-hal nervous. He drew back and seated himself with a short exclamation. At the same instant Allsopp reappeared. A Chilcote turned so him excitedly.

"What the devil's the meaning of this?" he said. "A battery of servants in the house and nobody to open the hall door."

Allsopp looked embarrassed. "Crap-ped, I beg to ere ye pardon, sir. He only left the hall to ask Jeffries"—

Chilcote turned. "Confound Crap-ped! Ass! Idiot! Blunderhead. Go and open the door yourself."

Allsopp hesitated, his dignity strug-gling with his obedience. As he wait-ed the bell sounded again.

"Did you hear me?" Chilcote said.

"Yes, sir." Allsopp crossed the hall. As the door was opened Chilcote passed his handkerchief from one hand to the other in the confusion of hope and fear, then as the sound of his own name in the shrill tones of a telegraph boy reached his ears he let the handkerchief drop to the ground.

Allsopp took the yellow envelope and carried it to his master.

"A telegram, sir," he said. "And the boy waiting for an answer." Dazed, he re-peated the phrase.

"Wait!" he turned aside with elaborate dignity.

Chilcote's hands were so unsteady that he had to insert the paper in the fingers of the slip of the envelope. Twice, however, he wrenched the covering apart and smoothed out the flimsy pink paper.

The message was very simple, con-sisting of but seven words.

Shall expect you at 11 tonight.

LODER.

He read it two or three times, then slowly, very slowly, he rose and, mechanically, and to his own ears the voice in his voice sounded harsh and unnatural.

Exactly as the clocks chimed 11 Chilcote turned the stairs to Loder's rooms. But this time there was more of haste than of uncertainty in his steps, and, reaching the landing, he crossed it in a couple of strides and knocked twice on the hard door.

It opened at once, and Loder stood before him.

The occasion was peculiar. For a moment neither spoke; each involun-tarily looked at the other with eyes and under changed conditions. Each had assumed a fresh standpoint in the other's thought. The prime as-tonishment, the half impersonal cu-riosity had passed, and with them the relationship, was cast aside, never to be renewed. In each the other saw himself—and something more.

As usual, Loder was the first to re-cover himself.

"I was expecting you," he said. "Won't you come in?"

The words were almost the same as his word of the night before, but his voice had a different ring, just as his face when he drew back into the hall had a different expression—a suggestion of a smile that, at first, had been lacking before. Chilcote caught the difference as he crossed the threshold, and for a bare second a flicker of something like jealousy touched him, but the sensation was fleeting.

"I have to thank you," he said, hold-ing out his hand. He was too well bred to show by a hint that he under-stood the drop in other's principles, but Loder broke down the artifice.

"Let's be straight with each other, since everybody else has to be deceiv-ed," he said, taking the other's hand. "I'm too willing to thank me for what you know it. It's a touch of the old Adam. You have given me back my self." He laughed, but below the laugh run a note of something like triumph—the curious triumph of a man who has known the tyranny of strength and suddenly appreciates the freedom of a weakness.

"You fully realise the thing you have proposed?" he added in a different tone. "It's not too late to retract even now."

Chilcote opened his lips, paused, then laughed in imitation of his companion, but the laugh sounded forced.

"My dear fellow," he said at last, "I never retract."

"Never?"

"Never."

"Then the bargain's sealed."

Loder walked slowly across the room and, taking up his position by the mas-telpiece, looked at his companion. The similarity between them as they faced each other seemed abnormal, defying the laws of chance verisimilitude. And yet, mysterious in nature even in her lapses, they were subtly, indefinitely different. Chilcote was Loder deprived of one es-sential; Loder, Chilcote with that es-sential bestowed. The difference lay neither in features, in coloring nor in height, but in that indefinable, subtle inner illumination that some call indi-viduality and others soul.

Something of this idea, mistaken and adapted to new surroundings, passed at Chilcote's mind in that moment of scrutiny, but he shrank from it upon-ed, ashamed.

"I—I came to discuss details," he said quickly, crossing the space that divided him from his host. "Shall we do so? Are you?" He paused un-easily.

"I'm entirely in your hands." Loder spoke with strange deference. Reclining on the table, he indicated a chair and drew another forward for himself.

Both men sat down.

Chilcote leaned forward, resting el-bows on the table. "There are so sev-eral things to consider," he began ner-vously, looking across at the other.

"Quite so." Loder glanced back sp-ontaneously at his companion as the-ses things the better part of last night. To begin with, I must study your hand-writing. I must learn to get it right, but it will take a month."

"A month!"

"Even, perhaps three weeks. We must make every sense of things."

Chilcote shifted his position.

"Three weeks!" he repeated. "Couldn't you?"

"No, I couldn't." Loder spoke an-grily. "Impatience is the weak point I put pen to paper; but, on the other hand, I might have to sign a check one day." He laughed. "Hitherto I never thought of that—that I might have to, and the sign a good check?"

"No. I confess that escaped me."

"You risk your fortune that you may keep the place in the house you?" Loder laughed again. "How do you know that I am not a blackguard?" he added. "How do you know that I won't clear out one day and leave you high and dry? What to prevent me?" Chilcote from realizing £40,000 or £50,000 and then making himself scarce?"

"You won't do that," Chilcote said, with certain dogmatism. "I tell you your weakness last night, and it wasn't money. Money isn't the rock you'll split over."

"Then you think I'll split upon some rock that is not beyond the question. To get to business again. You'll risk my studying your signature?"

Chilcote nodded.

"Right! Now item two." Loder counted on his fingers. "I must know the names and faces of your most in-timate friends as far as I can. Your woman friends do not concern me. The ones you will be adamant." He laughed at Chilcote's frown. "These are as es-sential—the backbone of the whole business."

"I have no friends. I don't trust the idea of friendship."

"Acquaintances, then."

Chilcote looked up sharply. "I think we score there," he said. "I have a reputation for acquaintanceship that will carry you anywhere. They tell me I am popular. Item three is more substan-tial man in the house as if he were gos-samer, though I may have inched with him the same day."

Loder smiled. "By Jove!" he ex-claimed. "I'm afraid I've been con-structing this before either of us was born. It develops ridiculously. I shall must know your colleagues, even if it's only to cut them. You'll have to take me to the House."

"Impossible!"

"Not at all!" Again the tone of au-thority fell to Loder. "I can pull my hat over my eyes and turn up my coat collar. Nobody will know me. We can choose the fall of the after-noon. I promise you 'twill be all right."

"Suppose the illness should lock you? It's a risk."

Loder laughed confidently. "Tush, man! Risk is the spice of life. I can see you at your post; and I must see the men you work with." He rose, stretched across the table and tapped his pipe from the rack. "When I go in I can a leaf or two of your cigars and ears," he added as he opened his tobacco jar.

He pipe filled, he resumed his seat, resting his elbows on the table in un-conscious imitation of Chilcote.

"Got a match?" he said laconically, holding out his hand.

In response Chilcote drew his match box from his pocket and struck a light. As their faces touched an exclamation escaped him.

"By Jove!" he said, with a fretful rattlure of impatience in his voice sur-prise. "I hadn't noticed that!" His eyes wrote fixed in amazed interest on Loder's extended hand.

Loder, following his glance, smiled. "Odd that we should both have over-looked it! It clean escaped my mind. Why rather more since? I'm afraid his hand till the light fell more fully on it. Above the second joint of the third finger there was a ring, the remainder of a wound that had once taken the place of flesh.

Chilcote leaned forward. "What did you come by it?" he asked.

The other shrugged his shoulders. "Oh, that's ancient history."

Chilcote's eyes were on the ground. "It's very awkward, very annoying!"

Loder, still looking at his hand, didn't seem to hear. "There's only one thing to be done," he said. "Each wear two rings on the third finger of the left hand. Two rings ought to cover it." He made a speculative measurement with the stem of his pipe.

Chilcote looked irritable and distrust-ful. "I detest rings. I never wear rings."

Loder raised his eyes calmly. "Neit-her do I," he said, "but there's no rea-son for bigotry."

But Chilcote's irritability was start-ed. He pushed back his chair. "I don't like the idea," he said.

Loder looked at him amusedly. "What a queer bargain you are!" he said. "You waive the danger of a pun, sigma your checks and shy at wearing a piece of jewelry. I'll have a fair share of in-dividuality to study."

Chilcote moved restlessly. "Every-body knows I detest jewelry."

"Everybody knows you are capri-cious. It's got to be the rings or noth-ing, as far as I make out."

Chilcote again altered his position, moved from the mantel-shelf, was after a struggle with himself, he looked up.

"I suppose you're right" he said. "Have it your own way." It was the first small, tangible concession to the stronger will.

Loder took his victory quietly. "Good" he said. "Then it's all straight sailing?"

"Except for the matter of the—the re-munoration." Chilcote hamarded the last word unevenly.

"There was a faint pause; then Loder laughed brusquely. "My pay?"

"The other was understood." "I didn't want to put it quite like that."

"But that was what you thought. Why are you never honest—even with yourself?"

Chilcote drew his chair closer to the table. He did not attend to the other's laugh. He was intent on making his ad-vantages of the situation. He realized sdly it the use he personved in. In Chronic Catarrh of the Nasal passages, it is well, while taking the "Golden Medical Dis-covery" to use a good nasal douche or in-jector, to cleanse the passages freely two or three times daily with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. This thorough cleanse of treatment generally cures the worst case.

In coughs and hoarseness caused by bron-chial irritation and lingering cold, use Dr. Medical Discovery as a gargle, then swal-low. Ingredients of Medical Discovery are so, especially in those cases, where the cough is caused by irritation and congestion of the bronchial membrane, it is better than cough syrup to use as good for acute coughs, ly-ing from sudden colds, not to mention, as it is proved to cure consumption in its advanced stages—no medicine will do that—but for all lesser throat and lung troubles, such as bron-chitis, tickling cough, hard, hard, tight cough, tion, it is the best medicine that can be taken.

"To the carver of John Chilcote!"

Chilcote drew a couple of tablolds from his pocket and dropped them into his glass as the other spoke. Loder back he laughed grovsly.

"Thanks. See to your own drink now. I can manage this." He took the glass unceremoniously, and, carefully guarding his glass from the light, poured in the water with excited haste.

"What shall we drink to?" he said.

Loder mechanically rolled his own drink and fitted the glass. "Oh, to the career of John Chilcote!" he answered. "For as long as it lasts, I mean."

There was something prophetic in the sound of the toast. But he shook the feeling off and held up his glass.

"To the career of John Chilcote!" he said with exaggerated laugh.

CHAPTER VII.

IT was a little less than three days from the time of Loder had drunk their toast and again they stood together in the hall.

His head was bent and his hand moved carefully as he traced line after line on a sheet of paper with the end of foolscap. Having covered the page with writing, he rose, moved to the center table and compared his task with an open letter that lay there. The comparison seemed to please him. He straightened his shoulders and threw back his head in an attitude of critical

SHEPHERD OF PEOPLE

(Kingston Whig)

The Archbishop of Montreal cannot be regarded as a religious zealot. He acts like a great leader, and does not hesitate to set his ban upon amusements which are not elevating in their character. Besides, he is not careful to note what others say or do. He studies each public issue as it arises.

When the city was affected by the temperance movement — and it was stimulated by an all too evident abuse of the license system — he did not hesitate to inveigh against it. When some of the theatres were inclined to give plays in which the morals of the people were not sufficiently studied, he pronounced his disapproval. Now he has forbidden the picture plays which have the call on popular regard.

The amusement managers have undertaken to defy him. It is useless. When the archbishop speaks it is with authority, and his people have too much respect for him to do aught that will displease him. The archbishop has given, indeed, a finishing touch to the rank heresy that when one has done his matins he is free to divert himself.

The church does not presume to make the diversions of Sunday palatable. It aims at making this a rest day, free of care and folly, at giving to the soul of man the uplift for pure devotion, and the only salvation is a freedom from every outward influence. The average Sunday theatre does not give effect to the service of the church.

SENTENCE SERMONS.

A high ideal is a help to high life. The ideal the bible places before us is the perfection of the character of Christ.

Men of the noblest dispositions think themselves happiest when others share their happiness with them. —Taylor.

I have often had occasion to observe that a warm blundering man does more for the world than a frigid wise man.—Richard Cecil.

Many, indeed, think of being happy with God in Heaven; but the being happy with God on earth never enters their thoughts.—John Wesley.

Everything hard or painful in a christian's life is another opportunity for him to get a new victory and become a little more of a man.

The simplest road to knowledge is always the surest.

Being, knowing, doing — are the three fundamentals of success.

It isn't hard to find trouble if a fellow goes on a hunt for it.

If your circumstances don't fit you, you fit the circumstances.

The measure of your capacity is the measure of your responsibility.

This old world is sad enough without having to hear the story of your woes.

If no heavy rain clouds ever drifted across your sky and shut out the sun for awhile, some day you will long for the splash of the rain in faces.

PREVALENCE OF PERJURY.

In an address on the evils of perjury, Bishop Worrell, of Halifax, recently made the following statement:

"A right conception of God and His word, and a due reverence for them, would make perjury absolutely unknown. The growth of perjury is a terrible thing, and there can be no doubt that it is growing. The other day Judge Riddell, of Toronto, stated that it was becoming a most serious problem in the conduct of the courts, and I have heard a well-known police magistrate of a large city in Ontario declare that it is impossible to believe people on their oaths. The statement made by a witness in a recent celebrated election trial that he advised his agents, when sworn, to kiss their thumbs instead of the book, and then they would not be guilty of perjury, shows the utterly unworthy idea such a man has of Him who reads the heart of the man, and judges not by the outside of the platter as to the cleanliness of it.

"The wholesome dread which the story of Ananias and Sapphira once exerted seems to have but little power to-day—especially in a liquor trial or a contested election. Affidavits are taken and oaths administered often in such an irreverent manner that the solemnity which is attached to them is lacking, and the awfulness of invoking the name of God in attestation of man's word is but little realized. There should either be special officers for the administration of oaths, or the farce that is now so often acted should be done away with. To swear a man upon a bible of which he has never read a word, of which he has heard but little, and in which he does not believe, or thinks he does not, can give no weight to his evidence. The apostolic condemnation of perjured persons in the same list as the most abandoned and wicked sinners has no effect upon him."

TALKS "INSURRECTION."

Rev. Geo. E. Reed, President of Dickinson College, things most young ministers are educated into mental lethargy. Their training is too much devoted to books and too little to men. "They talk about having studied this and that and taken post-graduate courses in sociology, and what not. All this is nonsense. What they should know is how to reach men and how to know them. Men, and not books, should be known, for it is to reach men that the gospel is preached." He thinks they also attempt too much. "The preacher nowadays is expected to be a book agent, money collector, church paper agent, head church bazaars and teas, dine out, and, in fact, do almost everything but what he should. He is expected to do so much that he should not that the minister hardly has an hour in the week to study the word." He favors a ministerial "insurrection" for the good of the profession.

Born in the church where for 40 years he has been minister, Canon William Hector Lyon, the blind vicar of Sherborne, England, has resigned.

The Woman's Society of Georgia Missions of the Christian Church has established ten churches in ten years in the mountains of the State.

The Evangelistic Committee of New York city during the summer held 1,626 meetings in tents and in the open air, the attendance being 472,606.

The Presbyterians in Corea last year had 628 places of worship, where now they have 767, each worker superintending from 20 to 30 congregations.

A new charter has been granted the Protestant Episcopal church of the diocese of Georgia, the domicile of the bishop being changed from Atlanta to Savannah.

Rev. Thomas Spurgeon, the famous English clergyman, is now in Venice, but is so much better that he will probably within the next year entirely regain his health.

The big Rescue Mission at Milwaukee is now out of debt, $2,700 collected in one day, when workers from all over the country aided in the work, having put it on its feet.

Experts have decided that the famous St. Paul's Cathedral in London is safe so long as the buildings around it are not disturbed, and thus ends a long controversy.

SLEEP BROKEN BY ITCHING ECZEMA

Skin of Whole Body Covered for a Year—Awful Itching Kept Sufferer Awake Half the Night—Tried All Kinds of Remedies but They Had No Effect.

CUTICURA REMEDIES A PERFECT SUCCESS

"I wish to let you know that I have used one set of Cuticura Remedies — one cake of Cuticura Soap, one box of Cuticura, but two vials of Cuticura Resolvent Pills — which cost me a dollar and twenty-five cents in all. For a year I have had what they call eczema. I had an itching all over my body, and when I would retire for the night it would keep me awake half the night, and the more I would scratch, the more it would itch. I tried all kinds of remedies, but could get no relief. A friend of mine told me to try the Cuticura Remedies which I did, and am very glad I tried them, for I was completely cured. If any of my friends should be troubled with the same disease, I will cheerfully recommend the Cuticura Remedies, and if I know any one who wants to know how I cured myself, I shall be glad to tell them. Walter W. Paglusch, 207 N. Robey St., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 8 and 10, 1906."

CUTICURA

The Great Skin Cure and Purest and Sweetest of Emollients.

Cuticura Ointment is, beyond question, the most successful curative for torturing, disfiguring humors of the skin and scalp, including loss of hair, yet compounded, in proof of which a single anointing with Cuticura Ointment, preceded by a hot bath with Cuticura Soap, and followed in the severer cases by a dose of Cuticura Resolvent (Liquid or Pills), is often sufficient to afford immediate relief in the most distressing forms of itching, burning, and scaly humors, eczemas, rashes, and irritations, permit rest and sleep, and point to a speedy cure when most, if not all, other remedies and even physicians fail.

Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Humor of Infants, Children, and Adults consists of Cuticura Soap to Cleanse the Skin, Cuticura Ointment to Heal the Skin, and Cuticura Resolvent (or in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, in vials of sixty) to Purify the Blood. WEDDING BELLS

Farnfield---Honeybourne.

The marriage was solemnized on Dec. 24th, in Toronto, of Miss Florence Honeybourne, formerly of this town, to Mr. Chas. Farnfield, of Allandale, by the Rev. Beverley Smith, of St. John's church, Toronto. The bride looked pretty in her travelling suit of brown broadcloth, with hat to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Farnfield have the best wishes of a circle of friends. The young couple will take up their residence in Allandale in the spring.

Rogers---Wells.

Port Hope Guide; On Christmas Day a quiet wedding took place in St. John's church, when the rector, Rev. E. Daniel, united in marriage Miss Edith R. Wells, of Port Hope, and Mr. Fred Rogers, of Lindsay. The bridesmaid was Miss Grace Roach, and the groomsman Mr. Walter Rogers. After partaking of lunch at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Wells, Durham-st., the happy couple left on the 4.30 train for Lindsay. After visiting for a few days in Lindsay and Belleville they will take up their residence in Port Hope for a time.

Sluggett---Geach.

A pretty, but quiet wedding, was solemnized on New Year's day at four o'clock, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Geach, of the Y. M. C. A., when their eldest daughter, Selina, was united in holy wedlock to Mr. Geo. A. Sluggett, of town. The Rev. H. L. Phelps officiated. To the strains of Medelssohn's wedding march, played by Mrs. (Rev.) Phelps, the bride entered the drawing room, which was tastefully decorated, and was given away by her father.

After the ceremony, the guests repaired to the dining room and partook of a dainty repast. The happy couple left on the eight o'clock train for points east. Many costly and useful presents were received.

McElroy---Schwardfager.

A pretty home wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parent, Mr. and Mrs. E. Schwardfager, 44 Elgin-st., on New Year's day, by Rev. J. Wallace, when their eldest daughter, Bertha, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Samuel McElroy, of Rainy River.

At the hour of three the bride entered the parlor on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Gertie Bate. The bride was becomingly attired in a pretty brown skirt, with white brocaded silk blouse and was attended by Miss Emma, sister of the groom, who wore a navy blue skirt and white silk blouse. Mr. Neil Schwardfager, brother of the bride, played the part of groomsman.

The groom's present to the bride was a black Persian lamb coat with mink trimmings, and muff to match, to the bridesmaid a gold bracelet, set with pearls, and a pearl tie pin to the groomsman. After the ceremony all retired to the diningroom, where a sumptuous repast awaited them, and all drank to the health of the bride and groom.

The happy couple left on the 6.23 train for Toronto and Winnipeg, after which they will reside in Rainy River. We wish them every success.

Kennedy---Gilson.

A very pretty wedding was celebraetd at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Gilson, Ops, on New Years day, when their only daughter, Cora Maud, was united in marriage to David Kennedy.

At five o'clock, to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Valarie Vickery, of Lindsay, the bride was escorted by her father under a beautiful arch of evergreens, flowers and bells. The impressive ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. McCulloch, of Omemee, in the presence of about seventy guests. The bride was handsomely attired in louisienne silk overlaid with point d' spirit, with bridal veil and orange blossoms, and carried a boquet of cream roses and ferns. She was attended by Miss Eva Kennedy, sister of the groom, who was attired in fancy mull trimmed with lace and chiffon, and carried a boquet of pink roses. Little Alma Ringland cousin of the bride, acted as flower girl, and looked sweet in embroidered muslin and lace over pale blue silk. The groom was supported by Mr. Jeff Ashmore.

After the congratulations a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served in the dining room, which was decorated with evergreen, flowers and bells. After an enjoyable evening was spent the happy couple were conveyed to Lindsay, next morning taking the train for Peterboro.

The esteem in which the bride was held was shown by the many useful and handsome presents of which she was the recipient.

Thompson---Copeland.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Copeland, "Fairview Farm," Mariposa, on New Year's day, when their second daughter, Esther Jane, was united in marriage to Mr. Bertram Thompson, of Valentia. Miss Edith Dundas, of Lindsay, played Mendelssohn's Wedding March, as the bride, who was given away by her father, entered the parlor at 2.30 o'clock, looking charming in a navy blue suit with white silk waist trimmed with chiffon and ribbon. She carried a bouquet of primroses and ferns, and wore the usual conventional veil caught up with smilax and carnations.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Alice, who wore a grey suit with cream silk waist over pale blue, trimmed with blue ribbon and carried a bouquet of pink roses and ferns, while Mr. Harry Thompson, brother of the groom, acted as best man and little Miss Sadie, sister of the bride, looked charming in a cream dress, acting as flower girl. Master Fred Stroud acted as page, carrying the ring in a basket of flowers.

After the ceremony, performed by the Rev. Mr. T. Brown, of Oakwood, the party proceeded to the dining room, where they sat down to a sumptuous repast.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold watch and to the bridesmaid a manicure set, and a ring to the flower girl.

The couple left on the six train for Toronto and points west. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson bore testimony of their good will, love and esteem, by the many handsome gifts and good wishes. About sixty guests were present, some from Peterboro, Lindsay, Linden Valley and Little Britain. After January 15 Mr. and Mrs. Thompson will reside at Washburn's Island. Many happy days.

Hogg---Haygarth.

A very quiet but impressive wedding took place in College-st. Methodist church, Toronto, on New Year's day at 3 p.m. The contracting parties were Mr. James Hillyard Hogg, and Miss Vivian Gertrude Haygarth, both of Toronto.

Miss Mabel Mitchell, of Lindsay, played the bridal chorus, as the bride, who was given away by her father, Mr. James Haygarth, of Abernathy, Sask., entered the church at 3 o'clock, looking charming in a dress of point d'esprit over white silk. She carried a large sheaf of white roses and lillies of the valley and wore the usual bridal veil caught up with a spray of lillies of the valley.

Miss Bella Hogg, sister of the groom, who assisted as bridesmaid, was attired in a dress of point d'esprit over pink silk, and carried a sheaf of pink roses, while Mr. E. Cunningham, cousin of the bride, acted as groomsman.

The bride's going-away suit was myrtle green chiffon broadcloth, with fur-lined coat to match, the gift of the groom and hat of white velvet trimmed with ribbon and white plumes. The happy couple left on the evening train for points west, and upon their return will reside at 347 Gladstone-ave., Toronto.

Rev. R. J. Fallis, of College-st. Methodist church, officiated, while the ushers were Messrs. Aberdeen, Cunningham and Hays. The bride has many friends in town who wish her every happiness.

Amputated His Own Finger.

Evening Post of Jan. 4th

Mr. Pat Leddy, who works for Mr. John Coughlin, a farmer near town in Ops, met with a rather unfortunate accident yesterday. He was cutting a stake for some purpose, and the instrument he was using slipped and cut the first finger from his left hand. He was driven to town to have the hand dressed.

If Christ Were Here.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review).

Would you find Jesus Christ at the ring, where crowds assemble to see two men hammer each other till the blood flows? Would you find Jesus Christ editing a paper that would give a full account of such a performance? Would Christ attend the card table, the whist tournament? Would he attend the opening ball at the Armories? These and many other questions were asked by a local minister in the course of a sermon on Sunday on "The Devil of Sport". They suggest other questions. Would Christ be found editing a modern church paper? Would he attend a modern prayer-meeting? What would be His attitude towards modern church institutions and modern systems of government? Towards the Lord's Day Alliance? Would He lead a modern army to battle? Would He be a modern patriot? Would He favor Japanese exclusion? Would He be a modern politician? And so on.

Constipation

Baked sweet apples, with some people, bring prompt relief for Constipation. With others, coarse all-wheat bread will have the same effect. Nature undoubtedly has a vegetable remedy to relieve every ailment known to man, if physicians can but find Nature's way to health. And this is strikingly true with regard to Constipation.

The bark of a certain tree in California—Cascara Sagrada—offers a most excellent aid to this end. But, combined with Egyptian Senna, Slippery Elm Bark, Solid Extract of Prunes, etc., this same Cascara bark is given its greatest possible power to correct constipation. A toothsome Candy Tablet, called Lax-ets, is now made at the Dr. Shoop Laboratories, from this ingenuous and most effective prescription. Its effect on Constipation, Biliousness, Sour Stomach, Bad Breath, Sallow Complexion, etc., is indeed prompt and satisfying.

No griping, no unpleasant after effects are experienced, and Lax-ets are put up in beautiful lithographed metal boxes at 5 cents and 25 cents per box.

A MOST SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

Toronto, Jan. 4th, 1908.—That the financial stringency has not retarded the progress of the strong Canadian Life Assurance Companies, is evidenced by the statement just issued by the Imperial Life Assurance Company of Canada. During the year 1907, this progressive institution increased its policies in force to over $21,300,000; its assets to over $3,880,000, and its cash income to $925,000. The new assurance applied for, and policies revived amounted to over $4,000,000. The average rate of interest earned on investments for the past year was 5.98 per cent. Perhaps the most noteworthy feature of the report is the fact that notwithstanding the large new business transacted during the year, the expenses show a decrease of no less than 2 per cent. The unexcelled record of the Imperial Life and its able and efficient management are receiving at the hands of the insuring public, the recognition they justly merit.

(Mr. G. B. Blackwell is the Imperial Life's District Agent at Lindsay. His business, we understand, for the past year was most satisfactory.—Ed. Post.)

ON THINGS IN GENERAL

By "The Stroller."

There is some pretty hot stuff in the shape of newspapers that come into our country from the other side. We see some of it scattered on the tables of our Public Library. When discussing a matter we like to do it quietly, and we have a serious objection to the other fellow getting a "brain storm" on, as it is apt to ruffle things somewhat. Some of the Socialistic papers seem to be in a continuous state of strain. It would appear to an outsider as if they were shouting "Wolf" all the time. We can imagine a subscriber who set out to read them through as they come in weekly, getting so wearied of the continuous strain that he would, in order to come back to normal, have to give up in disgust. There is one man they seem to enjoy lambasting on any and every occasion, and that man is Teddy Roosevelt. It does not seem to matter what he does or says, there is to them an evil motive in it all. If he says black is black, they have no hesitation in calling him a liar and saying it is white. Everything he does is for the interest of the plutocracy, and their being up in arms against him is only a sham.

About the queerest argument we ever heard was the one they put up on the question of bribery. It seems that some one, we forget just who, was offered a bribe of some kind, and spurned it with scorn. Had he been a Socialist that would have been right and proper, and he would have been a shining example, but as he was not, their argument was that he must have been bribable, or the bribe would not have been offered! They went on to say that a public man should be so upright, and well known as unpurchaseable, like Caesar's wife, above suspicion—that everyone would know it was useless to think of bribery in his case. This would be very good in theory, and we only wish it was actual in practice. As we have remarked before, bribery takes on several forms, and the really smart briber is the one who knows the bribable feature of each person he is after. It is not necessary to offer money in every case, in fact were it offered to most people it would be spurned with scorn. A pass on a railroad or steamboat is very apt to make the receiver look at all they do with a more rosy hue than if he paid for his ticket like the rest of us. A little fancied power, dished out sparingly, goes a long way towards holding the allegiance of some. In the old lands, titles are a source of bribery, even although they may entail a very large additional yearly expenditure on the part of the recipient in order to keep them up. An invitation to a function has been known to win votes. The man who said that every man had his price, was not far astray, the main thing being to find out what the proper coin was, or rather what its weak point was of the one sought to be purchased. We all have our weak points, but we do not think that we are wide of the mark when we say that the majority of our public men are unpurchaseable, in the sense sought to be insinuated by the paper of which we are speaking.

There are several turns the Socialists will have to take if they ever hope to carry their views in any christian country. This paper of which we speak, works its press seven days in the week, and yet talks about slavery in the mine and elsewhere. Is there any slavery or grind in existence that can beat seven days works in a week? Just try it for a year and see. Probably the brightest mind the Socialists have in Britain, Robert Blatchford, denies God, Christ, anything and everything, and further says that the christian religion is the worst foe to Socialism. Well, if it is, then there must be something pretty rank in Socialism, as he understands it. The trouble with this man, and men like him is, that they pick out the worst specimens of christianity and hold them up as the epitome of Christ's religion, and yet they are above quoting Christ's words—when it suits them. We believe there are lots of good planks in the Socialistic platform, but when we see any of them seeking to live out their religion—for it is a religion—the same as a true christian, probably their own mother does, we will commence to think they actually believe in what they say.

A great deal is being said now in favor of and against local option. It amuses us when we read the arguments put up by the antis in favor of the saloon. To-day the papers are full of warning from them, of the evils that happen to young and old from this vicious (?) system of local option. About the last man to forward the social, moral, or even material interests of any town, is the liquor man. His whole aim and object is to get money, and get it quick, and if he should seemingly be generous or liberal in any matter outside of his business, it is the case of throwing a sprat to catch a whale. There are certain businesses that are absolutely necessary to any community. There are the grocer, baker, butcher, clothier and other like merchants. There are others not so necessary, and yet, as we gather wealth and wish for comfort and taste, they become almost as necessary as the others. In this class we would put such trades as painters, paper hangers and artistic workers of any and every kind. The liquor interest is the one inoulous on any community. There is not only the money spent on the liquor itself, but there is the worse feature of incapacity for work, and worse, that follows in its train. We think we may dismiss the argument used that there is more liquor drunk where local option is in force than in the same place under license. If there were, why do the liquor men put up such a strenuous fight? Their aptitude does not seem reasonable, and as for there being more drunkards, etc., etc., when the license holders show that they are in favor of men leaving their bars sober, we will believe in their anxiety about the drunkenness in local option towns.

It would seem to be only reasonable to suppose that the less whiskey or beer a man drank, the more he would have to take home to his wife for necessaries, and the more would be distributed amongst the legitimate tradesmen. We will make the assertion and have no fear of it being contradicted, that the great bulk of the bad debts of the retail men of this town are owing by men who waste their substance in drink. Now, if there is $120,000 a year spent drink in Lindsay under license, and people who know tell us that that is a conservative estimate, would it not be a good move to cut off $100,000 of that, or $50,000, or even $20,000? On being asked how the liquor got into Owen Sound, which is under local option, the Mayor, who is a liquor man, said it was brought in in suit cases, in trunks, in baskets, and by friends from outside. Let anyone go down to the C.P.R. station any day and just glance at the piles of boxes of bottled beer, and the barrels of the same, being one or two days' supply, and imagine how many suit cases and trunks and trips would be necessary to bring that amount of stuff in on the sly and then bring his common sense to bear on the question and ask himself, would it not be greatly diminished? To use the vernacular, he could bet his boots it would be diminished, and that is just the point that is bothering Mr. Liquor-seller, and in spite of all his specious arguments to the contrary, he knows it. Of course, all will admit that, liquor will be sold under local option. As we said once before, the devil will see to that, the same as he sees to other laws being broken. There are laws on the statute book against theft, murder, perjury, and many other thinks, and there are always people breaking them, and ready to break them. We cannot expect any better treatment for local option.

If the people, however, are not prepared to back the law up and see that it is enforced, we had far better remain under license. We must confess that we do not like the stories we hear of the complacency of our police force on the subject. It seems, from the items we read occasionally, as if the object were to put the officer and the town to as little trouble as possible with drunks, and they are hustled into side streets and lanes to do as they please, instead of being put in the lock-up and fined or sent to jail. Whether it is that the officers are afraid of getting their nice clothes soiled, or that they are favorable to the wet goods section, is a question. One thing is certain—the matter is entirely in the hands of the people themselves. They will have a chance on Monday to say just what they want. If they want a clean living, temperance-in-all-things town, they can have it, and if they want things as they are, they can have that too. The people, after all, are the court of last resort.

It is reported that it cost his uncle Edward half a million dollars to entertain the Emperor Bill for two weeks. As a matter of fact, it did not cost him a cent. The money no doubt was paid out, but who really paid it or made it—we do not mean the actual money, but the wealth that it represents? All wealth is the production of labor of some kind, and furthermore there have to be people around to make it valuable. Robinson Crusoe, with a mountain of gold all to himself, would be no richer than a working man at a dollar a day. Even with a mountain of wheat, he would not be any better off, as far as being wealthy was concerned. In inhabited countries the producers make the wealth, and all wealth that is spent, such as the half million said to have been spent by Uncle Edward, has to be produced, first by someone, or ones, before it can be spent. Now we don't suppose anyone will assert that either uncle or nephew ever produced or created wealth of any kind at any stage of their existence, so that when it is asserted that it cost either one a million or a half a million to do anything the sying is a misnomer.

A millionaire, when he wants to pay for anything, has his secretary write out a cheque, which he signs. He sometimes does not do even that much, authorizing the secretary to sign it for him. In this way he never even handles the money, or cost of what he is paying for. True, in the earlier part of his career he may have been a producer, and actually added to the world's wealth, but, as a rule, millionaires spend money that is produced by others. The king, however, does not even do as much as the millionaire. It is very doubtful if he even knows how much this, that or the other thing costs. He expresses a preference for it, and the keeper of his privy purse comes along and pays for it, but the party who really and actually does the paying, is the farmer, the artisan, the miner, and anyone and everyone who contributes to the upkeep of the British throne. We do not want anyone to think we are decrying either the throne or the system of government, for we verily believe that we have the most democratic form of government under the sun, but it is just as well to give credit where credit is due, anda if, instead of saying it cost the king half a million, they had said it cost the people half a million, it would have been nearer the truth. It is very funny, and almost childish the way some of these chaps and their wives carry on. It is said that nephew Bill would change his clothes ten or twelve times a day, and so would Mrs. Bill. They must see more in changing clothes than we ever did, for many's the time we were "interviewed" by the pater for cleaning around the furnace, and using the buck-saw with our best clothes on, when the standing order was to change them. We know other boys just as hard to manage. Fancy what it must be to change ten or twelve times a day when it was so hard to change once.

Then these people must have everything new where they visit. The rooms they live in have to be repapered and re-decorated, although they may have been done within a year for some other nabob. Some people argue that that sort of thing is good fort rade. Those are akin to the people who argue that a fire is good for trade. Those are akin to the that it is a dead loss, and being such, someone has to pay for it, and the only one who really pays is the producer. However, Bill and the missus had a good time and they found the air delightful and the peope charming, and we sincerely hope they will go home with a better feeling towards Britain than they ever had before.

From all quarters of our land, as well as from the great Republic to the south of us, comes the cry that there are going to be many men out of work this winter, and as a consequence want will stalk through the land. Canada is a delightful country of which to be a citizen, but there are more comfortable places to be in, when out of work than Canada in winter time. That is the time when a man could wish himself in the Bahamas, or South Sea Islands, where clothes are unnecessary except as a mark of modesty, and eatables are within easy reach of everybody and are to be had for the mere work of pulling them off the tree. It costs something, however, to get there, and these unfortunates who are with us, have not the price, and so are compelled to remain where they are, and freeze and starve, unless work of some kind turns up before that wretched condition arrives.

The worst feature about the whole business, as far as we are concerned, is the large number of foreigners amongst us who are evidently of the opinion that they are entitled to a living, work or no work. The trouble is that they cannot speak English, and everything has to be done through an interpreter. The latest phase of the case is where 300 Bulgarians have congregated at Toronto and refused to go to work at railroad construction at $1.50 per day, which has been offered them. It seems that our new railroad is needing some hundreds of men, and is prepared to absorb them gradually and pay them $1.50 per day, which, considering the state of the times, is fairly good wages for that class of work. These Bulgarians have turned up their noses at this rate and hold out for $2.00. It does seem to us as if some of the methods pursued by our parents, when we were boys, and the stated quota of hard maple was not in sight, would not be out of place with these fellows, even if they are men. A few men of the build of that gentleman who regulates the traffic at the corner of King and Yonge-sts., with good rawhide whips, and a plain intimation to these people to either work or "git," might have a good effect on them and all like them.

The method suggested is drastic, and sounds like the dark ages, but what are you going to do? These men have got to be fed. If we give them work, or make work for them, we have that much less for our own people, and take the bite out of their mouths and that of their wives and children. If we feed them out of charity, the burden, in the shape of taxes, falls worst on the poor man, who has all he can do to pay his taxes when times are good, let alone when they are bad. That is one way a city grows when it gets over a certain limit. It does not make any difference whether times are good or bad, it increases its population at the expense of all the surrounding towns. In bad times the towns do not object to have the derelicts go, but in good times it is very aggravating to have our best, which are the ones that go there, gravitate towards the larger centres. We verily believe that this little flurry of poor times is the effect of a scare, but scare or no scare, it is now touching most men who employ labor pretty severely. There is no doubt that nature played tricks with our farmers this year that knocked most of them out in their calculations, but it will no doubt re-act for our good, because we were undoubtedly living at too fast a pace as a nation. This little pull-up will have a tendency to bring us to our senses, and when we get there, we can review the situation and correct the mistakes we periodically make, when times are too good.

Judge J. A. Barron And Consumption

Requested to Make Detailed Report of Anti-Tuberculous Convention.

The Toronto Mail and Empire pays Judge Barron a fine compliment in the following; "Thanks largely to the missionary campaign carried on by Judge Barron, Stratford seems minded to set an example to the other cities of Ontario by adopting a modern and scientific system for combating tuberculosis. At any rate the Mayor and aldermen requested the Judge to make a detailed report of the anti-tuberculosis convention held at Ottawa, and it is a fair inference that Stratford desires to guide itself according to the lines laid down by the experts who addressed the convention. Necessary as are scientific methods in communities like Stratford, they are ten times more necessary in Toronto, but Toronto lags far behind the leaders in spite of doctors in the City Council. It is to be hoped that the Council elected yesterday will develop enough initiative and persistence to carry through some of the measures that are needed from hygienic and sanitary points of view. Any alderman desirous of putting Toronto where she belongs as a leader in the world-wide warfare against the white plague, can equip himself for the work by looking over Judge Barron's report."

Some Work Which Will be Done on Trent Canal During Winter

The Lift Lock at Kirkfield Formally Taken Over—Stony Lake Claims for High Water Settled—New Dam at Gooderham.

During the winter considerable work will be carried out on the Trent Canal system, which will give employment to a number of men.

A new wooden dam will be built at Norland, seven miles up the Gull river from Coboconk; it will result in raising the water in the Gull river, and conserving the high level. The dam will replace an old one and will be seven feet high. The work will be carried out by Mr. George Littleton, under the direction of Overseer Samuel Clegg, and about fifteen men will be employed at it, winter long.

NEW GATES AT BUCKHORN

Cement, gravel, sand, timber and other supplies are being conveyed to Buckhorn, where new lock gates with the latest modern opening appliances will be installed. About 20 men will be employed and the work will be in charge of Mr. Alex. Richardson, under the direction of Mr. Clement Gordon, overseer.

DAM COMPLETED

The new dam at Gooderham on the Burnt river, was completed last week. It is a concrete structure on the site of the old wooden dam, but is considerably higher than the wooden one. The cost of the new structure is $3,500, and a fine job has been done, under Mr. Alex Richardson.

LIFT LOCK TAKEN OVER

Capt. J. B. McGrand was in Kirkfield New Year's day, where the lift lock was accepted from the contractors, the Dominion Bridge Co., as a finished work, and handed by them to the Government for the operation and control of the lift lock at Kirkfield will henceforth be under the direction of Mr. McGrand.

Mr. L. Sherwood was the engineer in charge of the work at Kirkfield under the direction of Mr. A. J. Grant, superintending engineer.

CLAIMS SETTLED

It is understood that the Stony Lake contractors, who have claims against the Department of railways and canals by reason of the high water, have been settled with, or at least a majority of them have. It is learned that about thirty have agreed to accept certain sums—in many instances smaller than the original claims put in—and the outcry from adjusting the damage done by high water was about $4,500. This is considered a very satisfactory settlement.

'Stroller' Stirs Up A Quebec Writer

Denies the Statement That Mass Was Offered for Bourassa's Success.

Several weeks ago "Stroller", in his column, had occasion to refer to the Bourassa-Turgeon election in Quebec, and quoted a newspaper item to the effect that the priest of a certain church has offered mass for Bourassa's success.

The statement has aroused the ire of a Protestant subscriber in Sherbrooke, Que. He writes as follows:

"Stroller" is quite a contributor, and some of his matter is quite interesting. I noticed recently a comment re Bourassa, ex-M.P., of Labelle. As you know, this the only by of the narrow-minded press of Ontario, particularly, to always mix the church up, to its disadvantage, in politics, patriotism, etc.

"Now, as regards Bourassa's recent contest, and grandiose speech, there was a lot of rot in the papers about priests saying mass for Bourassa's election, etc. etc. Toronto papers and others, of course made much of this, and based upon false opinions swallowed by 'Stroller' and others.

"As regards the Bourassa incident in the recent election and charges preferred against the church, the facts are these: The customs in this province are different in many ways from Ontario. The population is almost all Catholic, therefore there are Catholic churches everywhere. Now, one custom is, when sheriffs' sales, public sales, political meetings, or events of any kind, are to take place, they are always announced at the most convenient Catholic church in the immediate section. There is not a cent goes by but what these events take place all over, and Sunday is the great day of announcement, as then all the people come to mass, hence greater publicity. The service performed for Protestants as well as Catholics.

"In the Bourassa case, he did as any other official or politician would do, and once de-arranged a meeting, notified the priest of the parish, the announcement was made, and that was all there was to it.

"Of course, I remember at the time seeing on a Montreal paper how Bourassa had had a mass said, etc. The Western and Catholic papers copied it with big headings, but they took good care not to copy the statement given out under oath by Bourassa, and without refuting the charge re mass, etc., as the thing had become ridiculous. This was followed by correction either Bourassa or Turgeon had said in the church service."

Apart from his remarks of this kind, and an occasional hit at the Irish, "Stroller" comments are good. Bourassa, in this province, by both parties is considered a hot-head, but he is also a sincere and educated man, as has been proven."

Said Farewell to Popular Teacher

Linden Valley Friends Present Her With Writing Desk and Bookcase.

Evening Post of Jan. 3rd

Last Friday evening the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Rogers was the scene of an immense gathering, consisting of the parents and children of school section No. 5, Emily, who had met for the purpose of ending farewell to Miss Copplestone, who is severing her connection with the school, she having taught here for the past eight years. After a programme consisting of readings, recitations, dialogues, vocal and instrumental music. Mrs. R. Cullis stepped forward and read the following address, Miss G. Birchard making the presentation of a handsome polished oak writing desk and bookcase combined:

Dear Friend and Teacher,—We, your scholars and friends, have met here to-night to express to you our appreciation and gratitude for your untiring zeal as a teacher in endeavoring as in our studies, to implant in our hearts all good interests at heart. Every scholar collectively and individually, not only as a school, but individuals have sought out from your christian character we have learned lessons, the imprint of which will ever remain with us. We realize there is nothing that we can say or do that will convey to you our feelings of regret in bidding you farewell as our teacher and friend, but we would ask you to accept this bookcase as a slight recognition of our love, for you and trust you will ever appreciate, and hope it will be a reminder of the happy hours we have spent together.

Wishing you every much happiness in your new sphere of life, and may God's blessings ever rest upon you and your home is the prayer of your scholars and friends in Linden Valley.

Although taken by surprise, Miss Copleston made a suitable reply, thanking them for the gift and for all their kindnesses to her while in the section. The remarks expressed her satisfaction in the work she had done and in her methods of teaching. She also mentioned those who had graduated from her school spoke feelingly of their affection for her as a teacher.

After a dainty lunch was served, proposing the ladies, and the thanks of the party were presented to Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, they responded, "and you," and dispersed to their homes.

MEMORIES.

You die, old year! your sun is set;
Your knell tolls in the midnight sky;
Why linger o'er you with regret,
Why watch your passing with a sigh?

Your cover with your funeral pall
Dear joys that cannot come again;
You take fond hopes, dreams, pleasures all
But, oh, the memories that remain!

Newsy Letter From Raeburn, Manitoba

Country Roundabout Has Been Settled for About Thirty Years.

(To The Editor of The Post.)

Sir,—You will find enclosed $1.25 for The Post and Weekly Globe for 1908. The Post is a welcome visit every week—we like to get the news from Lindsay and country around.

Raeburn is about eighty miles from Winnipeg, on the main line of the C. N. R. The station is made up of one store, post office, grain elevator, and residing for loading grain, and a few houses, and some odd ties for a platform for passengers to get on and off the trains—a disgrace to any community. This part of Manitoba has been settled for thirty years. It is not a clean prairie, being mixed with scrub. The land is good—very heavy as Portage Plains or the Red River Valley; it is a good deal easier to work and grow a good crop the past season. The spring was very late and cold. The first wheat sown here was on the 12th of May, and after that we could work only half time for a week. The wheat in this part turned about 23 bushels per acre, oats and barley were a good crop. We had no hail or frost—it freezes up here on the 12th of November; no plowing after that date, but the weather has been fine. On the 26th inst. we had it 20 degs. below, that has been the coldest so far at present time. We have no snow of any account. Any teaming has to be on the way over the prairie, which is very easy for any some other time. Wishing you a happy New Year.

ALFRED LAKE.

Raeburn, Man., Dec. 29th.

They Honored Friend of Old

West Ops Citizen Presented With a Handsome Easy Chair.

On Christmas Eve the neighbors of John B. Graham, esq., assembled at his home, West Ops, to express their regret at his leaving his old home to take up residence in Lindsay.

Mr. Samuel Wright read the following address, and Mr. Gerbert Cawson presented Mr. Graham with a beautifully upholstered Morris chair.

Mr. John B. Graham, esq., Graham Settlement, Ops:

Dear Mr. Graham,—On behalf of your many neighbors, some of whom have been associated with you, Capt. Parkin, who is unable to express, you the deep feelings of regret experienced by us at your removal, from our midst to reside in Lindsay.

For three score years you have resided in the locality where you were born in your boyhood years, and matrimony you have ever been characterized by that vigor and strong manhood and adherence to principles which inherited from your splendid ancestors. You so generously assisted in moulding along right lines those with whom you have been associated. Never forsaken in sad good works, ever firm in your adherence to the right, always kindly considerate towards your neighbors, you have ever been a power in our midst, which cannot be filled. It is our sincere and earnest wish that your remaining days, and let us hope they may be many, may be passed in the enjoyment of that comfort and rest which your hard honest labor has richly earned. To assist towards that object we respectfully ask you to accept as a slight token of our regard for You, this easy chair. Permit us to hope that you may long be spared to enjoy pleasant hours therein.

On behalf of the neighbors and friends: 24th Dec. 1907.

Mr. Graham, though completely taken by surprise, made a very fitting reply, and expressed his pleasure at their kindness. After enjoying an oyster supper, they departed.

Badly Bitten By Vicious Bull-dog

Young Lad Attacked and Mangled Wednesday of Last Week.

Evening Post of Jan. 2.

Percy, the ten year old son of Mr. Jerry Sheridan, had a shocking experience last Tuesday, as a result of which he lies in bed under medical care, and may have to remain there for several weeks.

With a couple of companions Percy was passing down Hillcrest, about 8.50 o'clock, and when opposite Mr. Blundorff's residence they heard his holloing in the yard. Being afraid of him, the lads began to run, but the dog overtaken and pin Percy to the cost-rail, and he was thrown to the ground. Immediately the urchin began to worry the lad, who did engaged to his feet only to be again thrown, the dog having leaped for the feet and fastened his fangs in the lad's leg. Fortunately the second fall broke the heavy bull, and the lad, who seemed to have retained some presence of mind, by quiet, striving to protect his face from the raving dog beast. He was dreadfully bitten, and it help had not been summoned by his piercing shrieks, before the beast fastened upon his throat, a fatal tragedy might have been the result.

The lad was rescued by Mr. Frank Fortier and Mr. McLean, neighbors, who found it a difficult task to drive the dog away from his victim. The boy was driven home by Mrs. Fortier.

Chief Vincent is taking steps to have the dog destroyed. An action for damages may also follow.

The Gooderham Stabbing Affray

Injured Man Out of Hospital—Assailant to Ask for Speedy Trial.

Evening Post of Jan. 2.

Roland Madill, the young man who was stabbed in Gooderham on Christmas eve, has made a rapid recovery, the wound in the lung proving not nearly so serious as was at first thought, and he was able to leave hospital earlier than at first anticipated.

Jos. Morrison, who is said to have in common with Roland Madill, a bad drill, is still confined in Castle Jackson, but his solicitors, Messrs. McCullough & Wade, intend to prove for a speedy trial, before Judge Harding, and will ask that the accused be allowed out on bail in the interval.

Madill's wounds were inflicted with a common pocket knife, and he said, and words not at all dangerous. It looks as if the affair was not the culmination of a common quarrel engendered by Christmas cheer. Morrison had not escape unscathed—he says the marks of some severe handling.

Ice Skating vs. Roller Gliding

Capt. Jos. Parkin Again in Charge of Lindsay-st. Rink.

Evening Post of Jan. 2.

Manager Sheridan was busy to-day picking up the roller skates from the floor of the Midland, where he has another rink. Mr. Geo. Coombs started a roller rink in the Midland last night, and to-day had a thin coating of water on the rink so that so a day or two longer, before skates will be allowed on.

It is said by many, that Mr. Sheridan, who has the Lindsay rink under lease, has decided to shelve Capt. Joe. Parkin for the ice skating season, for the reason that the Midland rink will occupy his full time. Capt. Parkin, who was in charge last night, is experienced in the management of ice rinks. The cold relentlessness of Cupid, is proved, of course, be retained as manager.

FARM NOTES

THE SMALL YIELD COW.

Dairying in the United States is depressed by one element that must forever stand in the way of stock the dairyman from success. That element is the small-yield cow that costs $40 or $50 a year for keep, and returns her owner $25 to $35 for milk. Many a milk producer, with a herd of 30 such cows, representing an investment of $1000 or $1200, is losing money regularly, and must lose as long as he insists on operating with such cows. If he has invested his $1200 in, say, 12 cows that cost $100 apiece, and those cows will give him more milk than the 30 cows give him. He would save the feed of 18 cows, with all the hard labor that goes with the feed keep and he would see in the way to make money. There is in sight no change in farm and market conditions that promises ever to put a profit into dairying carried on with cows that average 1000 1000 quart of milk each per head per year, and producers may as well quit trying to make it pay. The proposition to make milk with such cows is an impossibility, because it is proved beyond all possibility of a doubt that they put more money into their milk than they can hope ever to get out of it when it is sold in the market. The student of milk production is surprised every day to observe that a large number of herds he will find, that averages less than 1200 quarts of milk per head per year. The owners of these herd say that they "cannot afford better cows". (The truth is that they cannot "afford" these cows. One correspondent says that last summer, in a tour of over 300 so-called 'dairy farms", he found less than 20 herds whose average yield was large enough to bring the cost of production inside of the net proceeds from their milk sold at the average price of the year. The twenty who owned those herds were making money. The other 180 owners were losing money on their small yield herds. The lesson is plain. The conclusion is inevitable.—New York Farmer.

THE DRAINING INCREASES.

The work that began two years ago in the Niagara District, of draining farmers in this draining of their lands has filled a decided vacuum. It was so well received in the district last winter, and now the work has proven to be so popular that there may be organized, shortly.

Mr. W. H. Day, B.A., who has the work in charge, says, in reviewing the work done:

"We have been surprised to learn that we have laid our drains of great use or farmers to the extent of fifteen farms during the present summer and that some fifty applications could not be granted.

Wherever the work of the department has been in operation has been the result, and in some cases more than one farm in the immediate neighborhood has taken up the work. It is a well-known fact that many farms are ruined sufficiently unproductive by the lack of drainage. The benefit of tile drains means all the difference between success and failure on many a farm. In many instances the land has paid for itself in one year, in the extra crop harvested from the ground.

The department have filled a want in many a farm. Their work costs the farmer only the actual cash outlay and their reports are accurate.

It is gratifying to the lovers of agricultural education that the attendance at Guelph this year is bigger than ever before, and that the classes numbered one hundred and fifty. The Macdonald Institute is full to overflowing.

PROFITS FROM ALFALFA

Here is what one farmer—Rude Aspler—did with thirteen acres of alfalfa in the B. C. Rock-field. The thirteen acres averaged five bushels to the acre, or a total of 65 bushels. This he sold at the farm for $1.50 per bushel, this he sold the hay for $50. Seed, at the rate of thirteen acres, or a little better than $13 an acre. This in itself is remarkable, but when it is remembered that the manager by Rude Asper, who admits that he is the poorest farmer in Okanagan County, is little less than ridiculous. If the entire 160 acres continued in this farm were sown in alfalfa and the same proportion of the crop would be $6,880—Thomas News.

STRONG DAHLIA ROOTS

Dahlia roots may be carried in a cellar much the same as potatoes, says Prof. Hutt. He is a good plan when dugout up the roots in the fall to leave a quantity of earth adhering to them, and to place the roots in a dry place where they will dry out gradually. If they are stored in a cellar with an earth floor, the roots will shrivel, and it is necessary to keep the cellars fresh, but if stored on a cement floor or in any place where they do not come into contact with the earth, this is a danger of the roots drying out too much. In such cases it may be necessary to moisten them once or twice during the winter. In storing roots of dahlias it is advisable to have the cellar so arranged that it can be ventilated from time to time. This not only ensures the keeping of the greater part of the tuber, but prevents conditions which favor the growth of moulds and fungus in the tubers. To prevent mould, it is a good plan to spray the walls and the interior of the cellar with lime whitewash.

Big Bill of Costs Faces the County

Equalization of the Assessment an Expensive Luxury.

His Honor Judge Harding has handed out his decision in the matter of the assessment of the various municipalities comprising the county. His Honor's report is a voluminous document. It is altogether too bad that the County could not have seen saved the expense resulted from this investigation. No detailed statement of the expense resulted therefrom is obtainable as yet, but competent authorities estimate the cost to the County Corporation at $4,000. Judge Harding's fee for hearing the investigation amounts to over $90; Messrs McDonald & Wade, solicitors for the County, will have their accounting upon approximately $1700, while the stenographer will will amount to about $500.

The Canadian Magazine.

It is gratifying to note that, while the Canadian Magazine, as a literary production, has for some time been holding its own with the highest class magazines, it is now showing a marked advance artistically. The Christmas number gave emphasis to this feature, and again the January number contains some particularly attractive illustrations. The number contains a very valuable and illuminating article, entitled "Metal Mining in Canada," by Ralph Stokes, and is illustrated by a number of reproductions by Dr. Louis Frechette, Virna Sheard, A. E. Lizotte, and other well known writers.

You want comfort and satisfaction of clean smooth shaves every morning.

THE MASTERY OF THE VAST PACIFIC OCEAN

Should the United States Government Abandon the Philippines to Japan Now in Order to Prevent the Possibility of Friction in the Future ?

Happily, the mischief-making report, started by the London Statist, and that the British Admiralty contemplated a change of plans in the matter of naval distribution in the Pacific, has been promptly and emphatically contradicted. Whatever might be the nature of such a move, it could not at the present juncture and with such a powerful press in the world is identified with, except by ignorance, or as a counter to the calling of the United States Pacific squadron. When the policy of naval concentration proved necessary, or recent rumours, not unlikely, the Great Britain. It was done in reliance on the sentiment principle that under no circumstances would war ever arise between her and the States. The efforts made to induce the United States to assume the rank of a first class naval power should not affect this principle, nor disturb confidence in it. The cruise of the United States fleet, however, has brought up the question of the fidelity of the Pacific, a phrase which gained currency a few years ago before the Russo-Japanese war changed the whole situation. It was claimed by the jingo writers in the regards that the Muscovite power was changed in spirit and destiny to dominate the Pacific. Destiny is a favorite word with these writers, and it is whatever pleases their imagination. Thus it is used by a writer in the New York Tribune, giving to the probability of war between the United States and Japan within ten or twelve years, we lose the United States double her present naval strength. The British alliance would be changed into a British anxiety to cultivate Japan as an friendship he regards as of the Mikado, so far as his designs on United States territory are concerned.

This representation of the Mikado held in leash by Great Britain is more amusing than alarming, as it shows how persistent in the wicked imagination is the idea that two opposite nationions or different colors must inevitably come to grips at end, but till they come to deadly grips. The Philippines have once a nightmare in the war prophecy over area that acquisition by the United States. The date set with the Anglo-Japanese alliance shall expire in a few years, the time when the struggle for the Empire of the Pacific will commence. By that time Japan will have magnifically strengthened her navy and probably have confirmed her hold upon China. The possession of the Philippines will then seem a necessity, to the development of Japanese imperial power. Geographically, it is said, the archipelago belongs to Japan, and, if the United States intends to retain the islands, she must be prepared to defend them. (There are many reasons, given by the Globe writer, why Japan should seek to pounce upon them. They would enormously strengthen her position, and it is really a question to be considered whether it would not be better to let her have them now than to force the situation a generation or a future war. We have never heard from any Japanese source that Japan coveted these islands, or greeted them to the United States. The whole story of her...

WAITING TO FIGHT FOR THEM

has its birth in the misgiving of Americans' whether under such circumstances they have hitherto proved a source of weakness rather than a "possession" at the Antipodes.

The real cause of trouble between Japan and the United States is the treatment of Japanese in America. A few years ago, Japan was subjected, and more in the minds of the Chinese people, who hear, in a much exaggerated form, of every slight upon the people in America. This also is cheerful panacea to the war prophecy of the partition of China can, as says, be exploited by the Mikado when the time comes for him to make a pounce upon the Philippines. The writer referred to has discovered another reason why it would be wise to abandon the Philippines to Japan. From those who could dominate Australia should British power be neither in the West Indies nor world conflict. The racial menace to Australia is a serious problem of the future. In fact, the acquisition of the Philippines would immensely advance Japan's ambition for world power and the supremacy of the Pacific. So much for this underlying idea that Japan is going to pounce on the three first-class world powers which sport on the Pacific should ever be her bitterest foes. The time past would suffice for the era when powers could not live each other without fighting, let the Pacific forever hold its name, and let the new era be

THE PACIFIC ERA.

There is at present, happily, the reason of any such prophecy. The three powers mentioned it will ever do anything else. The powers are all fully occupied with apart from any Christian obligation they all seek that nothing but manual ruin would result from a conflict. The Japan views the matter may be gathered from the way in which the Japanese press and public men have welcomed the idea of a visit from the United States squadron. The two great political leaders, Prince Ito and Count Okuma, have both bid welcome to Admiral Evan's fleet should it visit that country. No more representative invitation, apart from an official one, could be given, as Prince Ito is the real head of the Constitutional party, and Count Okuma of the Progressive and Opposition party. Viscount Hayashi, the Japanese Minister of Foreign Affairs, and other high officials, express the same desire, and ridicule the idea of there being any mistrust of the Japan of United States intentions. These statesmen unite in assuring the first a hearty welcome, and declare that its visit would be a means fraternity to cement and augment the oldtime intimate relations of the two countries. Such cordial assurances should give the final blow to the war scaremongers who were solely confined to this side of the Pacific.

COMMUNICATIONS

LET THE NATION OWN THE TRUSTS.

(To the Editor of The Post.)

Sir—The Stroller's remarks in Tuesday's issue will for enlightenment in fair play I ask you to give this your usual courtesy. If the column in question is an attack on Socialist newspapers and Socialists generally—one Rest. Blatchford in particular, I wish to take the personal attack first. Some years ago it was engaged as leader writer on the Sunday Chronicle. Having occasion to visit the slums of Manchester, he came in contact with a great humanitarian movement with its accompanying evils—destitution and misery. Like many another good Irish soldier, the Rev. Bruce Hard is one—have been compelled to give up their living through preaching Socialism, i.e., their desire to see God's will done on earth as it is in heaven.

It is now 14 years fully since I first met Blatchford, though I have watched whilst in touch with the movement, and I may say he has never yet ungentlemanly or unjust. Very likely the action of the church has helped him to form some idea of Christianism, but anyhow, his action when writing "God and My Neighbour", in allowing the jingo's full page of the paper for about six months, I think, is ample their side of the case and of his being a gentleman to stilt same, to me seems very broad-minded. He certainly is not what "The Stroller" describes—one who "denies anything and everything", and is fully worthy of the name of Man even though other Socialists, such as Canon Scott Holland, Adderley, Bishop of Stepney, Bishop of Birmingham, etc., are interested in christianity. To show that all Socialists do not deny God, permit me to say in "Christian Commonwealth" for 1907, the following appear speaking that week; Rev. R. J. Campbell, M. A.; Rev. John Glasse, M.A., D.D.; Rev. J. SHR Wilsong; Rev. Conrad Noel; the Bishop of Birmingham; Rev. J. Ernest Rattenbury; Rev. E. Gregory; Rev. Wm. Moll.

No, my strolling friend, there is no christian country. We will need to wait for the principle of christianity to our everyday life, not to put them to one side with our Sunday clothes. This will be done when we realize the Brotherhood of Man, and come it will "for a that."

God give us Men !

A time like this demands
Strong minds, true faith, upright hearts and ready hands.
Men whom the spoils of office will not buy.
Men who possess opinions and a will,
Men who have honor, Men who will not lie.
For whilst the world, with its thumb-worn creeds,
Wrangle in selfish strife,
Lo, freedom slept.

With compliments of the season, yours truly. NEIL LUND.

The Variations in Cream Tests And Use of the Cream Separator

Interesting Article by Mr. M. J. Lewis, Proprietor of Lindsay Creamery, Dealing With Difficulties Met With in Farm Dairies.

One of the most common causes for dissatisfaction in supplying cream to creameries is the complaint over the variations in the tests. This is especially true when each cans of cream is tested separately and is now considered the most method.

It is quite a puzzle to the operator to know why one hot week cream comes with cream separators to understand why this test varies, when the same separator, run by the same man, is used all the time, and the cows and feed are not changed.

The tests do vary, and, the tests does not indicate that careless treating is being done, as it is practically impossible to run a separator under farm conditions without having the cream vary in quality. Some days the cream test did not vary, but was always the same, it would look more suspicious than when it varies considerably at times.

It is an annoying to the operator and manager of the creameries as it is to the producers to see those tests do vary. Yet it is the rarer, and it is rarer still I wish to show the manner of causes for variations.

A change in the speed of running a separator at once changes the percent of butter fat in the cream. The faster the machine is operated the greater the amount of skim milk thrown out and the result is less butter fat in the cream. Slow speed gives a larger quantity of thinner cream.

The process of the separation of cream from milk is caused by centrifugal force. Cream, being lighter than skim milk, is thrown to the centre of the bowl by the speed of the machine revolving; consequently the greater the speed the bowl, the greater the quantity of skim milk, with less cream of a richer quality.

Many separators are used that feed the separator at the same rate on account of the Dominion Government regulations. The factory is not operated quite its full capacity, or at one time the milk tank is full, which makes the separator feed faster than at other times when tank is allowed to run low. This varies the quality of cream.

This is a very common cause of variations in cream. The amount of skim milk or other used in filling the bowl, and the amount of milk to be separated will vary the test from 60 to six per cent.

Also the quality of the milk, which may vary at any time from 4% to 6 per cent, caused by the cow or cows being excited in any way, or a sudden change in the weather, or, lack of food, wholesome water, or a warm feed, all these causes tend to change the quality of milk and consequently change the quality of cream from the separator.

Another cause which is well known to all users of separators is the adjustment of the separator. Yet this is by no means the common cause of tests varying.

A great number of farmers imagine the feed has a great deal to do with the quality of milk or cream. The quality of milk is not governed so much by the feed as it is by the breed, treatment or individuality of the cow.

Another reason for the variations of cream tests is the difficulty and impossible to run a separator under farm conditions without having the cream vary in quality. In fact, the cream test did not vary, but was always the same, it would look more suspicious than when it varies considerably at times.

It is an annoying to the operator and manager of the creameries as it is to the producers to see those tests do vary. Yet it is the rarer, and it is rarer still I wish to show the manner of causes for variations.

Mr. John Carew, the president of Lindsay Turf Club, and Mr. Geo. A. The I. O. F. Court No. 473 are holding a basket social in the old English church on Friday, Jan. 31st at Dunsford.

OMEMEE

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The village is very quiet. There is little grain, straw or wood coming in; only a few loads to Courtney's mill.

Lindsay races attracted quite a number from here, and no doubt, if our there will cause more talk about the boyles.

The many friends regret to hear of the sickness of Mr George Cahill, Mount Hope, who is favorably known here. Anaemia seems to be the difficult trouble for the doctors to contend against.

The annual meeting of the Presbyterian church was held yesterday with very favorable reports. Mr. H. Lamb, secretary-treasurer, and other officials and the pastor received hearty congratulations.

The new village and township councils met on Monday and shook hands and smiled, believing they are going to have a prosperous and satisfied government this year.

The farmers are to be congratulated on the success Monday evening, notwithstanding the bad roads and weather.

FENELON FALLS

(From Our Own Correspondent)

A severe snow storm visited this locality on Sunday last—a regular blizzard. The snow fell very thick and may for a couple of days. Two residential gentlemen who set out respectively for Bobcaygeon and Omemee, one in Somerville and the other at St. Peter's, Verulam, were forced to the wisdom of turning back when about two or three miles out of the village.

On Monday evening last the members of the Methodist Church Choir and Sunday School Band met at the house room of the church. Mr. A. W. Terrill performed the duties of chairman to an efficient manner. Across the chairman's address, the following programme, consisting of selections from Fenelon Falls was rendered: Instrumental, Miss M. Wilson; reading, "Life of Tomorrow" Miss Ethel Hoyle; Duet, "Sweet old Love", by young men; recitation, "The Blevens", Miss Nora Wilson; solo, "Behind the Bar" Dr. A. Wilson; reading, Lord of Burleigh," Miss Alison Kerr.

The Classes Worship, who are twenty town, were each presented with a fine bible, hymn book and siddiqe. Mr. Terrill presented the Choir League and Bible Class, take this opportunity of expressing to you, in their behalf, their appreciation and our gratitude for your valued services in the past. Your untiring zeal and energy, your confidence of the church. We now ask you to accept this bible and hymn book as a pledge of our love and appreciation of your faithful, earnest work in the church, and our sincere prayers that God's blessing may rest with you, and that you may be spared for many years to see these books as text books for southern Sask. Master's service." Signed, W. Northey, Dr. A. H. Wilson then gave an address. The pastor, Rev. W. M. Kerr, concluded with a short address, after which lunch was served.

Saturday last, in "Sporting Comment," has the following: "Canada to the fore once again! Baldwin Sasks in the reflected glory of Fenelon Falls, being the name by which the Ontario town is known, of hockey players and ski fists.

THEATRE IN FLAMES

Awful Holocaust Caused by Oil Lamps at Boyertown, Pa.

SCORES BURNED TO DEATH

Victims Number From 50 to 75—Usual Mad Rush Was Made For the Doors

—Dozens Jumped From Balcony Windows—Many Children Trampled on by Crowds—A Terrible Fight For Life.

Boyertown, Pa., Jan. 14—Between 50 and 75 persons were burned to death last night in a fire which completely destroyed Rhodes' Opera House in this place.

The opera house was crowded with the members of St. John's Lutheran Sunday School, who were attending a benefit given for the church.

While the show was in progress, a boy stumbled. The actors endeavored to quiet the audience, but in their anxiety to extinguish the flames and to avoid the awful stampede of the audience, they knocked over oil lamps which were used at the footlights were overturned, setting the place on fire.

The flames, fed by the oil, shot almost to the ceiling and there was a wild rush of the 700 persons to escape, from the burning building.

Scores of women and children were trampled in and several who escaped being burned to death died after being dragged from the opera house.

In many cases, it is said, entire families have been wiped out.

The scene which followed the explosion is indescribable.

Scores of persons who were in the balcony at the time of the explosion, jumped from the window and obtained serious injuries.

The fire caused the disaster the fire apparatus became disabled and the structure burned to ashes, the memory of the scathing flames.

The opera house was a vestige of the bodies of the unfortunates who were consumed by the smoke and scorched, ever will be found.

Local firemen hurried from Pottstown, but before the fire apparatus from that city reached this place, the flames had spent of the structure was a roaring furnace.

The screams of women and children heeded the warning of the cooler heads in the audience, and scores of the lives might have been avoided, but there was a mad rush for the main entrance which invariably follows at such a disaster.

The flames spread rapidly, and consumed the entire building, part of theatre.

Men, women and children rushed for the many exits and the weaker sex and the children were trampled and crushed in the panic to gain the street.

Medical Assistance Sent.

Assistance was at once asked of Reading and Philadelphia and special trains carrying nurses and doctors were hurried to the scene of the disaster.

Every home within a radius of half a dozen blocks of the opera house was made the temporary hospital, where the wounded were rushed by carriages and other means of conveyance.

Boyertown is a borough with a population of 4,000 and the fire occurred about midway between Pottstown and Reading.

The fire is not yet—midnight—under control, and it is thought it will not be communicated to other property, as the place is on a piece of ground by itself.

Hundreds of persons surrounded the burning structure, apparently unconscious of the pending danger from falling walls.

Many parents who had children in the opera house were panicky in their fear almost maddened by the awful sight.

Bigger Locks For Warships.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14—Secretary of the Navy Metcalf, writing to the House Presidents, recommending an increase of the width of the Panama locks from 110 feet, as at first contemplated, to 140 feet. The change would cost $10,000,000 additional, but meets the naval view as to the likelihood of larger battleships in the future.

Dutch Troops In Flight.

The Hague, Jan. 14.—Despatches received here from Dutch East Indian troops, after a severe fight on the Island of Java, with the rebel Chinese, have captured the rebel stronghold. Three hundred and forty natives are reported to have been killed, and many of the rebels have fled. The Dutch losses are insignificant.

Boy's Awful Death.

New York, Jan. 14—Harry DePreyes, a 15-year-old boy, suffered a horrible death in an elevator shaft of the Commercial Cable Building, 25 Broad street. INAUGURAL MEETING OF COUNCIL PLANS FOR NEW YEAR DISCUSSED

Several Large Deputations Heard The Vacancies on Boards Filled

East Warders Sought Representation on Court of Revision—Communications and Other Matters of Importance Dealt With at Opening Session.

Evening Post of Jan. 14

The inaugural meeting of the new Council was held on Monday at 11 o'clock. The following signed the declarations of qualification and office, and took their seats:

Mayor James B. Begg.
Reeve George A. Jordan.
Deputy-reeve J. G. Eyres.
Aldermen Geo. E. Ellis.
Aldermen W. H. Jordan.
Aldermen R. J. Campbell.
Aldermen Newton Smith.
Aldermen M. McGough.
Aldermen Heath Dobson.
Aldermen John Calvert.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS

Mayor Begg at the opening meeting in the new Council addressed his colleagues on their success at the polls, he believed also that the feeling was to be congratulated on the quality of the men chosen.

When receiving deputations and delegations full consideration should be given to all views advanced, but the requests and questions made should be dealt with in an unbiased way, and in the best interests of the town. Too much economy should not be attached to articles in the press, Chairman of committees should be selected with great care. If the members kept economy and the town's best interests always in view the Council would have a creditable record at the year's end.

THE RESPECTIVE CHAIRMEN

After the brief inaugural address from Mayor Begg, the following chairmen were appointed.

Moved by Reeve Jordan, seconded by Deputy-Reeve Eyres that Ald. Ellis be chairman of the Board of Health—Carried.

Moved by Ald. W. Jordan, seconded by Ald. Smith that Deputy-Reeve Eyres be chairman of Finance committee—Carried.

Moved by Reeve Jordan, seconded by Ald. Smith, that Ald. McGough be chairman of Police and Lighting committee—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Smith, seconded by Deputy-Reeve Eyres, that Ald. W. Jordan be chairman of the Town Property committee—Carried.

Moved by Deputy-Reeve Eyres, seconded by Ald. Jordan, that the chairmen of the different committees with the mayor, constitute the Court of Revision.—Carried.

Ald. Dobson, when the personnel of the Court of Revision was outlined, moved that a representative of the east ward be added—he didn't think it was fair to exclude that section. Ald. Calvert seconded the motion.

Mayor Begg explained that it was now too late to move in the matter, the committee had been named, he did not think the east ward would suffer in any way, because all the members were pledged to do the fair thing by everybody.

THANKS AND PROMISES.

Deputy-reeve Eyres thanked his colleagues for the compliment in the old position as chairman of Finance—he regarded their action as a mark of honor and trust, and it would encourage him in his desire to do the very best thing for the people he had been elected to serve. He would act at his best in a campaign speech, nor did he intend to make too many promises, but he would try honestly and persistently to make the finances of the town as good as possible, and he believed that in his efforts to do so he would have the active co-operation of the Council and other members. It was most important that the expenditure be kept down to the lowest possible figure, he didn't mean that they should do miserly—he recognized the truth of the old adage, "Pay a cent a cent the shoe was lost, and for want of a shoe the horse was lost." He was in favor of making a start this year if possible on the permanent improvement of our roadways, commencing at the Cedars, he would also like to see the town industrial classes afforded better protection against the elements, he considered it the town's duty to make really atrighter than many citizens supposed—in a few years money facilities will have been paid off, and we shall then be able to carry out many other improvements footing when enjoyed a much lower tax rate.

Ald. Smith said he would have preferred to be relieved from the chairman of the Board of Works—he felt he had done his share, and a younger had been brought to bear which resulted in his coming back. Last year he had spent his time well, and small as the amount was he had only exceeded it by some $45; this year he hoped he would do better more generously. He felt grateful to the people of the town for returning him at the head of the poll.

Ald. McGough said he was grateful to his fellow citizens for re-electing him, and to his fellow members for restoring him to his old position of chairman of the Police and Lighting committee. A number of petitions for electric lights had come before last year's Council and had been referred to the new body—these would have to receive their careful consideration. He would like the Council to go around in a body some night and look and examine the lights carefully. Many streets are in bad shape, and he would like the Board of Works to give them a good turn this year — if expended as carefully as last year's appropriation it would be a good investment.

Ald. W. Jordan felt grateful for the confidence expressed in his ability to act as chairman of the chairman of Town Property. He hoped there would be a little more left for that body — he intended to see that that department gets well repaired and in good condition. Much Fire should be held within bounds and not be permitted to depend on requisitions from the heads of other committees.

Ald. Ellis made a brief but timely reference to the importance of co-operation, which he hoped would be given to the chairmen of the different committees.

Ald. Smith said he was pleased with the appointment of the Ald. Calvert and Dobson as chairmen of the Court of Revision, and felt confident. Council then adjourned till 7.30.

EVENING SESSION

Two Large Deputations Heard—Other Business Dealt With.

Council reconvened at 7.30 sharp, Mayor Begg in the chair and all members present.

The communication was read from Messrs. Fleury and Lindsay, asking for a grant and for engagement, that position.

Mr. J. D. Barry was heard in opposition to the grant, he considered the request for a grant and use of the Council chamber. Chickenpox was prevalent.

From Ontario Municipal Association, relative to contests against its grants for engagement of Mr. Ross of the Ontario statutes, re liability for accidents on highways. A petition from Mr. Ross was read in support of his application, and will be forwarded to Mr. S. J. Fox, M.P.P.

From the Manager Bank of Montreal, with reference to an excess amount of $100 under discounts—Finance committee.

From J. F. Donald, secretary Board of Trade, asking the Council to take a mission relative to separation from the County. All were agreed the town was paying too much for its share, and the matter had been referred by the full Board to the Committee of Ways and Means for consideration. It was most important that the expenditure be kept down to the lowest possible figure, and if we didn't mean that they should go miserly — he recognized the truth of the old adage, "For want of a nail the shoe was lost, and for want of a shoe the horse was lost." He was in favor of making a start this year if possible on the permanent improvement of our roadways, commencing at the Cedars, he would also like to see the town industrial classes afforded better protection against the elements, he considered it the town's duty to make really atrighter than many citizens supposed—in a few years money facilities will have been paid off, and we shall then be able to carry out many other improvements footing when enjoyed a much lower tax rate.

Ald. Ellis said he would have preferred to be relieved from the chairman of the Board of Works—he felt he had done his share, and a younger had been brought to bear which resulted in his coming back. Last year he had spent his time well, and small as the amount was he had only exceeded it by some $45; this year he hoped he would do better more generously. He felt grateful to the people of the town for returning him at the head of the poll.

Ald. McGough said he was grateful to his fellow citizens for re-electing him, and to his fellow members for restoring him to his old position of chairman of the Police and Lighting committee. A number of petitions for electric lights had come before last year's Council and had been referred to the new body—these would have to receive their careful consideration. He would like the Council to go around in a body some night and look and examine the lights carefully. Many streets are in bad shape, and he would like the Board of Works to give them a good turn this year — if expended as carefully as last year's appropriation it would be a good investment.

Ald. W. Jordan felt grateful for the confidence expressed in his ability to act as chairman of the chairman of Town Property. He hoped there would be a little more left for that body — he intended to see that that department gets well repaired and in good condition. Much Fire should be held within bounds and not be permitted to depend on requisitions from the heads of other committees.

Ald. Smith made a brief but timely reference to the importance of co-operation, which he hoped would be given to the chairmen of the different committees during the year.

Ald. Campbell said a few well-chosen words to the new Council.

Reeve Jordan said his friends had given him strong backing in his election, and he had been a strong movement against him on the part of others. Those who were so interested in his office had been served a little in the fates which he hoped they would remember. The chairmen of committees had spoken well, and if they followed out their profession in the spirit they intended, and their expenditures all would go well.

Aldermen Calvert and Dobson also spoke briefly. Council then adjourned till 7.30.

Several Large Deputations Heard—Other Business Dealt With.

Council reconvened at 7.30 sharp, Mayor Begg in the chair and all members present.

The communication was read from Messrs. Fleury and Lindsay, asking for a grant and for engagement, that position.

Mr. J. D. Barry was heard in opposition to the grant, he considered the request for a grant and use of the Council chamber. Chickenpox was prevalent.

From Ontario Municipal Association, relative to contests against its grants for engagement of Mr. Ross of the Ontario statutes, re liability for accidents on highways. A petition from Mr. Ross was read in support of his application, and will be forwarded to Mr. S. J. Fox, M.P.P.

From the Manager Bank of Montreal, with reference to an excess amount of $100 under discounts—Finance committee.

From J. F. Donald, secretary Board of Trade, asking the Council to take a mission relative to separation from the County. All were agreed the town was paying too much for its share, and the matter had been referred by the full Board to the Committee of Ways and Means for consideration. HAMILTON-TORONTO RECORD

Claude Graves of the L. C. A. C., is billed to attempt the Hamilton-Toronto record to-morrow if the snow holds off. He will start on his 42 mile journey at 10 o'clock, from the City Hall, Hamilton, and expects to make the distance under five hours.

It is expected that in the next future New York will have an opportunity to see the famous English distance runner, Wilson, whose specialty is road running.

Last April, on the Middlesex road, in England, he covered ten miles in the phenomenal time of fifty-seven minutes flat, this being considered the fastest road run ever made.

Plans at present are to produce Wilson at the Palace hall in New York, where a series of long-distance pedestrian races are being featured. It is to be hoped for the sake of sport that the English road runner will prove of sufficient caliber to give his famous competitor, "Al" Shrubb, something perpetually in the way of a race in case the two should be matched.

Up to date Shrubb has never, in the opinion of experts, shown anything that denoted the limit of his powers, in this country, at least. World's records are up his sleeve to make and break at will.

Hockey.

STRATFORD VS BERLIN.

The first O.H.A. senior game of the season at Berlin between Berlin and Stratford resulted in a victory for Stratford to the tune of 10 to 4. Hockey the game commenced Berlin proved Edendale, of Stratford, the top laced professional hockey at Bigton last winter. Fourteen minutes after the game commenced Referee Carey Fraser was taken seriously ill and had to leave the ice. At the end of 26 minutes Irwin Bernhardt, of Preston, was agreed upon. The game was then put off indefinite imposed. Stratford played a two-man combination which worked well.

LOOK STRONG

Stratford Beralds Lindsay intermediate have apparently a good team this year. They have defeated Cobourg in Cobourg and Peterboro in Peterboro, and it takes pretty fast hockey players to trim either Cobourg or Peterboro on their own ice.

Orillia has dropped their intermediate team out of the O. H. A. but will keep their juniors at work.

Three Lindsay boys—Roy Henders, Billy Bain and "Pacer" McDougall—are playing hockey with Parkhill this season.

Three Lindsay boys—Roy Henders, Billy Bain and "Pacer" McDougall—are playing hockey with Parkhill this season.

The second game for the Stanley Cup between the Ottawa Vees and Montreal Wanderers proved a cinch for the latter, score 13-1.

Odds and Ends of Sport.

A DESERVED HIT

Stratford Beacon: Toronto is great on public display. If gave Hanlan—who has been good and well, was a sportsman rather than a sport, in that he never sold a race—a great public funeral, but when he was alive refused him a harbormastership. A little more appreciation of live heroes and less display over dead ones would be more in keeping with a city which sets itself up as an example to the whole province.

LIPTON'S $10,000 CUP

Lipton has offered a cup, valued at $10,000, to the Brooklyn Yacht Club for a race to Bermuda next year. Lipton announces that as he is building the largest 40s cutter for racing on the other side, he will race here in 1908.

TEN PIN ROLLERS

A team of world leaters from New York will visit the tournament in Kincardine, Feb. 8 to 22. The team will be as follows: Lee B. Jones, captain, average for 187 games 203; Johnny Voorhein, the greatest roller in the States; John Koster, former national champion; Charles Barber, champion of Philadelphia, and Billy Weisgarth.

There is to be a big snowshoe meet in Quebec in the course of a month or weeks. Every snowshoer who is an amateur in good standing can take part.

In Winnipeg Saturday night Ralph Reilly, a local champion, defeated Tom Donnelly, of Toronto, in a two mile race in one week. Young Hearn, another local speed artist, covered 220 yards in 29 2-5 seconds.

Dolmith is having a 600 foot ski hill built by the Northland C. C. It is to be very steep, and, when fully completed will be about 75 feet in width. Half of the hill will be used for skiing and the other half will be devoted to the toboggan enthusiasts.

Lindsay Look Like Champions--- Won Their Three Outside Games

The Boys are Showing Improved Form Every Time They Appear on Ice and the Team That Sets Out to Beat Them Must be Stars.

LINDSAY 8—COBOURG 2

Evening Post of Jan. 9

The play was furiously fast, and the showing made by our boys, who have only had one practice, was astonishing. Last year's Midgets were everywhere in evidence. Randall has changed for the better—he only fooled in the goaldom some last night; however, he says that's the last time this year, and it was accordingly. Gow got his goals, and 'Sully' had two nets, too.

On Cobourg's side the game was characterized by continual rough play, Crosson, Bentley and Patton being in this mood. The crowd acted as duff Handcock for handing out Cobourg penalties, but they did not succeed in any marked extent till the second half, when, to keep things going at all, he had to overlook many off-side plays on Shell's part, and Bailey, who had been trying his best to administer knockout drops to the Sugars, went off suddenly about half time, completely used up from making himself into a battering ram. Cole was Cobourg's star man. Bentley is easily the star of Cobourg, and without him the play lacked ginger. Crosson is big and dirty, cross-hocking being his part, and when put on the fence for the dirtiest of it, verged on spite on the referee in terms not befitting a member of the O.H.A. Executive. He is not in Kerby's class at all, neither can their point or cover face the starter in the game race with Newton or Sully. Their line, however, are candy kids, and play most of their game. Bentley especially being fast and heady (red heady, too).

Crosson scored the home team's first goal from a wrap-shot. Bailey "Minie" didn't get his blinkers on in time; however, he wasn't shooting too far for the rest of the game, and only one other got past him. Tommy Lane did well, but was rather light for his poundage, and had to include a good many hard knocks. Bailey played a goose of a game, and made a few boners, which he received a few love taps. Cole played a careful game and come out without a scratch; he is strong, speedy and a hot shot, but is not aggressive enough.

Frank Handcock is the star in the business. He does not practise Wilshire's evening up system of first one side and then the other, and seeing to please someone to get a recommend for another game, but makes the players play, regardless of the rules, and hits the penalties fall where they are deserved, even if it takes every man off one side. If there were a few more Handcocks in the O.H.A. it would be better for all concerned.

LINDSAY 6—PETERBORO 1.

Evening Post of Jan. 11

It only happens once in 14 years, or so, so it came as a surprise even to those expected to see the game. Cromble would say, when Lindsay defeated Peterboro last night right at their own Dalhousie by the score of 6-1. Bolly Glover's bunch were pretty fast, and at times showed good form to do the trick, and the score is a fair indication of the play.

Bolly got off with a goal in about five minutes, and alternated with Peter till half-time, when it was 2 all. After proceeding play Lindsay scored two but their lead was brought down one almost immediately, and Peterboro tied the game up the last goal, which went into the nets about 3 minutes before time.

Peterboro got several penalties, but the game was not rough. Cole had a small mixup and received 3 minutes, and was the only Lindsay man on the fence. He and Randall played a wonderful game. He (after surprising his many friends by quietly dropping back when punched in the head in the second half. During which he him, got 5 minutes. If Randall keeps up his good start, he will be a great improvement on the Randall of last year. Lane played a good steady game, but missed a few good shots. "Minie" was all to the good in goal, and had lots of work to do. Keel and his usual curiosities rush working to perfection. "he simply couldn't be caught. "Sully" broke up rush after rush and it was young to his good work at point that Peter could not reach the net. Bolly Stoddard was all that Lindsay people wanted to see on the ice this winter to guarantee a successful team. Last night all the other players were a smile when Bolly got on the ice—they seemed to think nothing was impossible when he was in it. He played like a leaper. His rushes were a sight, and 3 of the tallies received Stoddard goal and one a.

A GENEROUS ADMISSION

Peterboro Review, Saturday: The Lindsay Midgets can play hockey. They demonstrated that last night when they defeated the Peterboro Strathconas in the opening game of the season by a score of 8-1. Time because the seven that won from the Strathconas comes from Melville so no reason why their pair of rushers ity should not be recognized. The Midgets have a cracking good defence, and a forward line that is fast, both individually and in the matter of combination. The Lindsay team from the point up, are for the most part, dangerous shots. Combining this with speed and good judgment, the wearers of the blue and white present a line-up that is at once formidable and dashing. They gave a clean article of hockey last night and a clean article of hockey to the pure with the big mule street.

LINDSAY 9—WHITBY 2

Evening Post of Jan. 14

The Lindsay intermediates journeyed to the lakeshore town last night and added another victory to their record, defeating Whitby by a score of 9 goals to 2 in one of the hardest fought games played there for a long time.

Referee Hancock of Toronto, twice the puck stamp at 8.20 and took down started at 8.30 the puck jump and to end rushes were made by both teams. Lindsay made the first for Lindsay from a long left, shortly afterwards doing the trick again. This made the home team sit up and by got busy and corde their lines goal. A little later Bailly scored for Lindsay, making the score 3 to 1. Whitby scored Mighty 2. Whitby 2.

On resuming play in the second half, Lindsay started to make things interesting, Bailly scoring 3 in succession and Sullivan 1, before Whitby made their 2nd goal. This ended the scoring for a short time. Whitby commenced to show signs of fatigue, the Sugog bunch, but on a grand rush by Keyl, another goal was added, making the score 9 to 2 in Lindsay's favor. At this stage play was fast and fast, the puck being in both teams. Shortly before time, by combination work Reilly added Lindsay's last goal, making the final score 9 to 3.

For Lindsay every man played the game of his life, checking and shooting at every opportunity. The star man of the Whitby team was Blanchard; he is a good skater and fast skater.

Lindsay line-up; Goal, Newton; point, Keyl; cover-point, Sullivan; centre, Lane; rover, Cote; L wing, Randall, r. wing, Reilly.

Good News for Ontario Growers

Sale of Blended Flours is Tending to Enhance the Price of Wheat.

There is every indication that the price for Ontario wheat will steadily advance. The introduction of blended flours has not been to compete against wheat Ontario blended flours have been placed on sale—in Toronto, Montreal and the Maritime Sections, New Brunswick, Cape Breton and Prince Edward Island. They have recaptured the market from "Western hard patent flours" to a considerable extent, and the good work goes on.

The only drawback to a more sweeping victory is a lack of wheat. Elevator flours are popularly Ontario fall wheat with a little Manitoba low wheat to add the necessary amount of gluten and strength. This combination makes the "big" loaf of bread of the Western flours—and, at the same time, has the delicate flavor of our best Ontario flours.

With the sale of these blended flours constantly increasing, it would mean that there was good money for our farmers in Ontario wheat. Moreover, it is the soundest kind of business sense for every farmer, stockman and dairyman in the province to buy blended flours. There are enough wheat fields in Ontario and agricultural population to keep the mills busy the year round. And if the sale of every blended sack says that only blended flours were bought for home baking, there would be an enormous increase in the sale of blended flours, and a corresponding increase in the demand for Ontario wheat. Our farmers would then make the money instead of the wheat growers of milters out west.

Our stockmen and dairymen will share in the good fortune, too. With our millers having a good run every day, there will be an abundance of bran and shorts. Instead of paying about twice as much as last year for stuffs are worth prices would come back to normal and there would be money in dairying and stockraising. As it is, the farmers and millers out West seem to be getting all the profit, for, of course, our dairymen and others using large quantities of bran and shorts have to pay the freight on such stuffs from Manitoba and Alberta. Perhaps not directly, but in the end.

THE NEW COUNCIL.

There was a good attendance of ratepayers at the opening meeting of the Council Monday night and all must have carried away a favorable impression of the business methods of Mayor Bradley and his colleagues. The matters coming before them were handled with good judgment and expedition. If this record is maintained at future meetings, and have faithful and able members relegated to the proper place, there will be a commendable saving in time and better business habits will be inculcated along the line and become participated in every department of town affairs.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Montreal Herald, The New York World demands the abolition of the New York Stock Exchange. Whether the World is prepared to provide a substitute institution where the buying and selling of stocks can be carried on in all innocence and in a free idea of gambling will nevermore, its demand will be worthy of prompt attention.

Dr. Goldwin Smith in the Weekly Sun deplores that there are only eighteen real cultivating farmers in the House of Commons. One reason for this, which will hardly be deplored by the farmers by that politics would interfere with the much more remunerative pursuit of farming. Plenty of the lawyers who decorate the benches of Parliament are there because there is not work enough for them in the practice of law, and that there is no overcrowding in agriculture in Canada.

General manager Charles M. Hays says the Grand Trunk is now busy managing the business it has in hand in Canada to trouble about any aggressive schemes in the United States as a connecting link between the Boston and Maine at Troy, and the owen system at Ogdensburg. It is wise in leaving the American roads to manage their own affairs. Even the London Times when it attempts to teach the London parliament how to conduct their business, did just fare well. Everybody is his own matters and the shoemaker to his last, is not a bad rule of conduct.

Brockville has an epidemic of smallpox, and the people have been shut closed in order to have all the people vaccinated. The Brockville Times has this timely comment:

"The prevalence of smallpox in Ontario is a disgraceful blotch on the back of general vaccination. Most people have become careless about this preventive measure while others have been reading anti-vaccination literature and have become afraid of it. The bold fact is that the Anti-Vaccination is insisted upon smallpox is either prevented or stamped out if it is neglected smallpox becomes epidemic."

A writer in the Winnipeg Free Press points out that returns of the harvest in Great Britain show wheat yields of 33.97 bushels an acre, the average for ten years being 31.15 bushels an acre, in the Canadian west with new soil, the average is under 23 bushels, and in some important grain-growing districts on this continent it falls to 12 bushels an acre. The writer thinks that it must be well to import some of the British farmers who make such crops to show how the work is accomplished. The point is well enough taken. The Englishman is content to grow and slow chiefly by people who do not know much about him, or about any other people.

A few cloth has been formed in Salt Lake City called the Optimistic Club of America. Its philosophy is as follows:

The man who never makes any mistakes never makes anything else.

Before money was invented some people were happy.

A shade tree is as though you meant it, one smile.

Do hurry your sorrows, the world hath its share. Just smile.

When in doubt take Optimism.

Nobody can really harm you but yourself.

You are under a real obligation to every man you meet.

Hard luck stories are like overdue notes.

In the realm of birds, the lark is the optimist, the crow is the pessimist. Why be a crow?

During the panic in the United States boardings of currency reached the enormous amount of $216,000,000, second up to a month ago made by the National City Bank of New York. Now, that the panic is over the tide has turned and the savings bank of New York especially are doing an enormous business. In the eight business days since the beginning of the New Year the deposits had reached $30,000,000. Almost all the savings banks are now paying 4 per cent. interest, and persons of moderate means having investments in industrial and stock corporations paying that amount of interest or less, or no dividend, have sold their holdings and put the proceeds in savings banks. We may now conclude that we have heard the last of the financial panic of 1907.

Mr. F. S. Jarvis, manager of the Bank of Commerce at Galt, has a high opinion of the school bank, and he speaks from experience. Writing in the Western Canada Review, he says of it:

"With a quarter bank you neglect no business, but school children are benefited by teaching the theory and practice perfectly, and also do a lot of good to a lot of people generally in the town. I took in through the schools in eight years, without much trouble, over $7,000, and they have now handed over to the Penny bank over $4,000. You cannot but feel the good that all this has done in the years to these children; the denials, the knowledge of money and money's worth which is gained, the helps over sickness, the supplying of money for Christmas holidays and for starting in life. Only recently a young girl took out enough money to buy a sewing machine, cash price, and she never missed the money, what she was saving it."

It is so comical to hear people, as they did, fear we would make losers. Well, we have not, and surely it would be a good job to err on, in this country. Take it up. Your town would be a very anything so good some off in a long time. Thrift-teaching is the basis of everything towards our comfort and happiness in this world, better than education in books. You don't hear a teacher complain that they all enthuse. The ratio is that two-thirds of the children become depositors. We had about 300 in deed depositors out of twelve hundred children."

To Safeguard The Passengers

Railway Board Issues Several Drastic Orders for Railways to Observe.

Ottawa, Jan. 13 — (Special.)—The board of railway commissioners for Canada has promulgated a series of orders for the safety of passengers travelling on railways within the board's jurisdiction.

The first order is that every passenger car must be equipped with a fire extinguisher in each end of the car. The extinguisher must be of the official approved pattern and be inspected and recharged once every six months.

Another requirement is that vestibules must be closed and locked on the passing of every train, if possible. There shall be an inspector for every 100 miles of track, and an inspector is provided with a track lorry, or, if not, then there shall be an inspector for every two and a half miles. This inspection shall be from date May to September inclusive.

Also it is provided that there shall be a barrier of some sort on each side of a trestle and the ground beneath shall be kept free from leaves.

REMNANT SALE.

Departments are undergoing their semi-annual cleaning up, and all remnants and broken lots are brought to the front. We are going to give you a whole week of remnants, and low prices will be the order of the sale. Beginning Saturday, 11th, we continue until Saturday, Jan. 25th.

DUNDAS & HAVELLES Ltd.

The Weight of Bread.

Kingston Whig-Standard makers had a defence. It was that bread made early in the morning, and then a batch of other compositions, cooked in twelve hours, dry out and become light. The by-law made no allowance for this, and it was specified that the loaf being underweight exposed the maker to a penalty, and this penalty the magistrate imposed in several cases. There is a remedy. It was referred to by the magistrate, namely, that "the staff of life" is 24 hours in sold at so much per pound. This would mean that a baker would never be underweight, and never be subject to seizure.

Will be Farmers' Week in Lindsay Stock and Seed Grain Judging

Free Five Days' Course, Jan. 28th to Feb. 1st, by Prof. G. E. Day, Prof. C. A. Zavitz, E. C. Drury and Dr. Reed, Assisted by Local Breeders.

Is there any inducement to attend that Course? Shall I benefit in any way by attending the five days' course in Lindsay? Will it pay me to go? These are the questions which many busy farmers are now considering.

The Hon. John Dryden, of Brooklin, writing of the short course of Ontario Guelph, states that the answer is emphatically "Yes." Short courses will "add interest and zest to all the operations on the farm and where the full advantage is gained will add materially to the annual income of the student."

"In a week or a short course a man may now learn more about live stock and grain growing than could he in any way gathered thirty years ago in half a lifetime." Thus Mr. John Campbell, of Woodville, sums up the advantages of a short course.

The course in Lindsay, will be a particularly interesting one, as live stock and grain will be specialed. These considering the course are men who are experienced, and competent and commodious buildings have been secured. The seed and grain judging will be held in the Court House from 9 to 10:30 each morning; then the class will adjourn to the Academy of Music, where animals will be brought out on the stage and the students, one or different at a time, will judge and judge these animals.

The seed judging will be conducted by Professor C. A. Zavitz. Each person will be given samples to judge, and will judge for himself wheat, barley, oats, peas, grass and clover seeds, and the seeds of various fodder crops. Lectures will also be given on the best varieties for use in this district, the best methods of cultivation, and on the purity, the germination, the selection, and the improvement of seed. The seeds of the most troublesome weeds of Ontario will be identified, and methods of eradication will be discussed.

The stock judging will be in charge of Professor Day. From 10:30 to 5 o'clock of each day will be spent in judging and studying horses, cattle, sheep and swine. Practical instruction is the object throughout, and at each class there is attendance will be encouraged to ask questions and to take part in discussions.

This course is intended for farmers and its open to men from any farm of all types. There is absolutely no charge, and this year there is no application nor examination as required for entrance. The accommodation for the stock judging will, however, probably be taxed to the utmost, and those coming first will of course have the preference. Farmers, young and old should begin now to plan to take full advantage of this course, which will be at Opera hall in Lindsay, at 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning, Jan. 28th.

For detailed programmes of the course write to P. H. Reed, Lindsay.

Best Names Not in Society Column

Ottawa Clergyman Tells Society People a Few Unpleasant Things.

Rev. Dr. Henderson, Ottawa, pastor of the Dominion Square Methodist church, in the course of his sermon Sunday night took a few raps at Ottawa's high society.

"There are two classes of people in this country who are not civilized," said Dr. Henderson, "the Indians Indians in the west, who live like ground hogs or the chipmunks, and the extreme society people who live like humble-bees or butterflies. The best society of Ottawa does not have its names appearing in the society columns of the newspapers."

Dr. Henderson declared that it was outside a preacher's province to denounce those who danced or went to the theatre, but those who devoted their time to such amusements were usually the least educated in their heads and brains.

WEDDING BELLS

Dowson---Aylesworth.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Aylesworth, Brock, on New Year's day, when their only daughter, Irva M., was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Cliford Dowson, of Fingerboard. At three o'clock, to the strains of the wedding march, played bu Miss Martha Dowson, sister of the groom, the bride entered the parlor leaning on the arm of her father, under an arch of evergreens decorated with bells and holly.

The impressive ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Keith, of Wick, in the presence of about sixty guests. The bride was beautifully gowned in a gowl of cream silk crepe-dechine with yolk of embroidered chiffon and cream satin ribbon. She wore the veil, caught with bridal roses and lillies of the valley, and carried a boquet of cream roses. The bride was attended by Miss Maggie McTaggart, of Sonya, who was gowned in a dress of white silk colienne, with yolk of allover lace and trimmed with white satin ribbon, and carried a boquet of pink roses. Miss Stella Lee, of Lindsay, cousin of the bride, acted as ring bearer, carrying the ring in a basket of flowers, and looked sweet in a dress of cream silk. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. John Dowson, of Belleville, and Master Ore Shunk, of Seagrave. After congratulations a sumptuous wedding supper was served in the dining room, which was beautifully decorated with evergreens and holly and flowers. The groom's present to the bride was a beautiful gold bracelet; to the bridesmaid a handsome brooch set with turquoises; to the ring bearer a souvenir pin, to the groomsman a scarf pin set with pearls.

The bride's travelling suit was of blue English Venetian and hat to match. The happy couple left on the seven train for Belleville and eastern points. The esteem in which the bride was held was shown by the many, useful and handsome presents of which she was the recipient.

Uncleanness in the Dairy.

(Toronto Star.)

Only one-half of the patrons of cheese factories in Eastern Ontario have proper appliances for cooling milk before delivery. Ninety per cent of the cheese delivered in Montreal last year was not clean in flavor. During 1907 no less than 149 convictions for adulteration were recorded against those engaged in supplying milk from which Eastern Ontario cheese is made.

These were the three most striking statements made in the report presented at the Eastern Ontario dairy convention held at Picton last week. The two first clearly indicate that, despite all the educational effort of past years, much yet remains to be accomplished before our dairy industry reaches the standard of efficiency it should attain. Still more deplorable is the evidence brought out as to the number of dishonest patrons. True, less than 150 convictions among 36,000 individuals is not a very high percentage, but it is higher than it should be. The patron of a cheese factory who waters or skims his milk endeavors to obtain something at the expense of his neighbors who are co-operating with him in the business of that factory. He might just as honestly go to his neighbor's field and steal his sheep, or enter the barn and take away part of the contents of the granary.

It is quite evident that more education is required in the work of production, but there is need also of the preaching of plain, old-fashioned honesty, and in this work the church and the school should assist the effort made by dairy instructors.

He Lost His Heart And Won a Bride

Came to the City on a Visit and Fell in Love With Miss McFarlane.

Toronto Star; About November 18 last, Mr. C. E. Amos, of Cornith, near St. Thomas, a telegrapher by profession, came to Toronto to attend a meeting of the Council of the G. T. R. operators, of which he is a member, without the least idea of what was going to happen to him. He put up at the Palmer house, and the very first meal he took there brought things to a crisis. The meal itself was an excellent one, but it was the young lady in charge of the dining room who took his breath away.

Apparently quite oblivious to the impression she was making, but doubtlessly shyly observant of the havoc which was being created in Mr. Amos' affections, Miss Flossie McFarlane, the young lady in question, went cheerfully about her business, and if she put just a little more syrup in his flapjack than usual it was entirely accidental. Whether the menu included a rarebit or not has not been disclosed, but anyhow Mr. Amos had visions, and dreamed dreams and within a week had placed his hand at Miss McFarlane's disposal, his heart in reality having been at her feet from the first time he saw her. The fair lady proved to be in a receptive mood and the little romance culminated in a wedding in the Parkdale Presbyterian church at 9.30 last night. The happy couple have gone east to Kirkfield, the bride's home, for the honeymoon. The deepest interest has been taken in the match by the boarders at the Palmer, with whom Miss McFarlane was an acknowledged favorite.

Getting After Railroad Men.

The managements of the Louisville & Nashville and Chesapeake and Ohio railroads are employing detectives armed with cameras to "snap-shot" employees found drinking in saloons. The camera squad has been working for some months along the two lines and has obtained convincing evidence that a large percentage of train crews have been drinking on and off duty.

Be Kind to the Old.

(Bellman.)

Edward King, bishop of Lincoln, who is now nearly 80, was once taking an airing at the seaside when he found some difficulty in arising from his chair. Seeing his predicament a young fisher-girl hastened to his assistance and helped his lordship to his feet. Dr. King was profuse in his thanks, but the girl, who had no idea of his identity, begged him not to mention it. "That's all right," said she with a laugh, "I'm used to it. I've often had to take father home when he's a good deal drunker than you."

THE LOCAL OPTION VOTING.

The advocates of local option have good reason to be satisfied with the results of the voting, says The Toronto Star. It was not a sweeping victory; there were reverses in some places, and in others the three-fifths clause operated against the friends of local prohibition. But the movement is making steady progress from year to year. Every year the area in which licenses are not issued is enlarged; and it appears that once the licenses are abolished the prohibition stands. In five cases this year there was an attempt to repeal the by-law, and in four cases the attempt failed.

While the three-fifths majority clause seems to operate unfairly against the local optionists, in other respects they have the advantage on their side. They are always working along lines of least resistance. On the day after the polling the friends of local option can scan the results and select their fighting ground for the year, avoiding the places where a fight would be hopeless and selecting those where there is hope. They can always keep abreast of public opinion, or a little in advance of it, and there is no doubt that public opinion is working surely and steadily against the use of intoxicants.

In the old days the controversy was conducted in a haze of sentiment and illusion. It was popularly supposed that beer was a food, as well as drink, that rum and wine and whiskey were sources of physical strength and mental inspiration. These notions are now laughed at by hard-headed men who would have paid little heed to the fervid exhortations of temperance orators. Literature is no longer under the glamor of wine. "Joseph Vance," one of the masterpieces of modern fiction, is a temperance story, more effective than "Ten Nights in a Bar-room." The strength of the local option movement lies in the fact that it is moving forward in company with public opinion, social custom, and the needs of business.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The North Ontario Liberal convention will be held at Beaverton on Friday, Jan. 17th.

Kingston Whig: If the election act is to be amended at all it should be made so drastic that the pot-house politician will go out of business as a matter of choice.

—The temperance members of the Toronto City Council are taking the initiative in the matter of the reduction of liquor licenses issued in the city, and will move to have sixty-three cut off.

Orillia Times: The three-fifths section of the liquor license act must be repealed before many towns can carry local option. It is too great a handicap in towns and cities. The idea that a liquor man's vote should count for more than a temperance man's vote is repulsive, the people will not stand for it very long. Sooner or later the Government will have to change the law to a simple majority vote, which is more in accordance with British fair play.

Peterborough Examiner: When Hon. Mr. Fielding introduced his first tariff bill, Sir Charles Tupper (then the political oracle of the Conservative party) foretold complete disaster, the ruin of all manufacturing industries, and a general commercial collapse. Fortunately, he was not a true prophet. Toronto is a good Tory city, but it has failed to justify Sir Charles' prophecy. The Customs collections for the year 1907, while more than a million and a half in excess of last year, are $7,849,939 in excess, or three times greater than they were ten years ago—last year $11,6771,267, as against $3,821,328 in 1907. The growth of Toronto, thus indicated, is but a type of the prosperity and expansion which have effected the whole Dominion.

Two more Dominion by-elections take place on Wednesday next, Jan. 15th—one in Stanstead, Que., and the other in South Huron. Stanstead has been a Tory riding for years, but the prospects are that it will remain with its new found friends, the Liberals.

"Why Not Sanctify The Liquor Seller?"

"Nemo" Replies to "Stroller's" Criticisms and Makes Several Telling Hits—Carnegie More Helpful to Society Than John D. Rockefeller.

"Nemo is evidently not in accord "with our Maker; Nemo and his Socialist friends think that it can be "worked from the outside. We dont "—that is all the difference between "us—merely a question of method." So says Stroller when writing of present social economic conditions. I would draw Stroller's attention to the fact that this plan of his is no method at all, but simply a motive, and it matters not how pure the motive or how good the individual, without a method nothing can be accomplished. Stroller's plan is, "Sanctify the individual and all will be well with the social order." Suppose that we should adopt his scheme and rescind all legal law against bigamy, murder, theft, embezzlement and graft, and depend entirely on this something that he advocates, and what would happen? If he has got a SURE CURE, why not apply it in the case of liquor selling and gambling? Why not sanctify the liquor seller, instead of invoking the aid of legal machinery in the shape of local option or prohibition? Sanctification through the gospel was the strongest argument advanced by the supporters of chattel slavery before the American civil war; their great panacea for the evils of slavery was a change of heart for master and slave, and many Abolitionist preachers of that same gospel were denounced as agitators, cranks and disturbers of the peace and were ousted from their pulpits both in the North and South, simply because they claimed that the only remedy for this great wrong of chattel slavery as for all other wrongs, was eradiction. Rev A. M. Stirton on this question says in part: "The economic laws by "which wealth rapidly gravitates in- "to fewer and fewer hands, being ma- "thematical, would still prevail if the "earth was peopled by archangels." And were the holiest motives universal, the selection of a true method for applying these motives to social problems would demand just as much consideration as it does to-day.

It is very unfair to members of the capitalist class to intimate that the social iniquities of which every thinking man complains are due to their personal depravity, and this we do intimate when we propose individual regeneration as the sole remedy for the evils of centralized wealth. Some of these capitalists may be bad men, but many of them are not; many of them, too, like Rockefeller and Baer, are earnest adherents of this same evangelical religion, which is proposed as a remedy for all social disorders. It must be remembered, too, that among the capitalist class the professors of religion are in no way conspicuous for good works above those who make no such profession. Who, for example would claim that Rockefeller is more helpful, socially, than Carnegie? Yet, Rockefeller is a devout Baptist, while Carnegie is commonly reported to be an avowed infidel. But what reason is there to hope that even these motives will be forthcoming on any large scale from the organized church life of the present day? Is it not true that quite a bit of our current religion has now no altruistic value whatever, being confined to the individual's selfish effort to flee from the wrath to come. Stroller's plan has been in operation for hundreds of years, and does he contend that there are no sanctified individuals at present, will he claim, or admit that there are no results from all those centuries of work, and if there are sanctified ones, and if he still claims that they are the remedy, then why are the ethics and teachings of the lowly Carpenter not applied? In the Hungarian Parliament a bill has just been introduced that provides that employers will be allowed to inflict corporal punishment upon laborers under the age of eighteen; if the laborer leaves the farm without permission or fails to perform the Sunday duties required by his master he may be fined or imprisoned. "Striking," or refusing to work, is punishable by a fine of twenty-five dollars, or prison for ten days, and as his maximum wage is not more than fifty dollars a year, it will be an easy matter to keep him a serf all his life. In Russia, where the head of the nation is the head of the church, and where to say that this head is not sanctified means imprisonment or death, the daily occurrences in that nation are too horrible to relate. In Great Britain, the greatest and most enlightened of all existing Empires, a country where millions of copies of the bible are printed, sold and given away, and where there must be many sanctified people, thirteen millions, or one-third, of all that nation, in the most prosperous times, are always existing on or under the poverty line.

There the few practically own everything, and the many own nothing, and where they have taught the poor that their afflictions are divine, and that if they kick against these wrongs, providence will see to it that they are consigned to a place where the price of coal will not be a burning question with them. And can there be anything said in favor of our own immediate part of the earth, where similar economic conditions prevail to a greater or less extent? Stroller, although doing his level best to uphold and apologize for, practically condemns the whole system when he says: "Nemo ask- "ed why were we not demanding "from the party in power the carry- "ing out of the planks we advocate," and Stroller exclaims, "what in the "world have we been doing these "many moons! We know that we "have Sir Wilfrid ear, but he is only "one of two hundred and ten." Stroller also mentions the case of a premier of another political faith who, he says, is only one of ninety. That is to say (under present conditions) whether a premier be honest or dishonest, or whether he be saint or sinner, unless a majority, even of his own party, support him, he can do nothing. This is the best that can happen, provided premiers are honest, and there have been dishonest premiers Stroller has proven (at least to his own satisfaction), and we have only to take evidence from the opposite political party to prove that Stroller's idol is still worse. As Emmerson puts it, "No bond, no fellow feeling, no enthusiasm; these are not men, but hungers, thirsts, fevers and appetites walking." The speed of a fleet is the speed of its slowest ship, and the proof of success or failure, of any social economic system is its worst human product. Look around and see what we have got! Surely Stroller will not contend that there are no sanctified individuals in these two great denominations of the church, the Anglican and Roman Catholic, or the Orange organization, yet to make a point in one of these articles, he showed that, for self interest, and to perpetuate economic wrongs against the people, they have all in the past, on election days, joined issues and marched shoulder to shoulder to the polls, and in that same article he sums up the whole thing in a nutshell and makes out and establishes a clear case for the Socialists when he says: "For our part, we never could see what a man's religion had to do with his qualifications as a servant to the people." That (under present conditions) is our claim. Socialism simply seeks to liberate the economic slave and to establish a just industrial system which shall apply to every man, woman and child, no matter what his creed, color, nationality or previous condition, and I take it that from now on Stroller and his friends will eagerly subscribe to the tenets of Socialism.—Yours truly, "NEMO."

COMMUNICATIONS

"STROLLER'S" WISDOM.

(To the Editor of The Post.)

Sir,—Inasmuch as "Stroller" hath taken in hand to set forth, in your issue of Dec. 31st, a declaration of objections to Socialism, which most surely are not believed by many amongst us, even as he delivered them unto us which from the beginning were eye-witnesses and ministers of Socialism, it seemeth good to me also, having had some experience in the world, to write, in order, most excellent Post, that thou mightest know the certainty of those things wherein thou hast been instructed.

Our friend starts out with the declaration that there is some pretty hot stuff in the shape of newspapers coming to Canada from the other side, and scattered around Lindsay. Quite true, when people are oppressed they will endeavor to throw off the yoke of the oppressor—that is human nature, and eternal vigilance is the price of liberty. We can dispense with the arguments that he has drawn from [illegible] ation about people getting tired of the continuous mental strain. Our friend has discovered that the Socialists are politically opposed to the party now in power in the States; quite true — they are owned and run by the capitalistic party, and when that party rules the common people suffer in various ways, and every turn of the wrench the clamour amongst the people becomes greater. As to his charge of inconsistency, it is too absurd for a moment's consideration. As long as the head of the nation rules in the interest of the trusts the Socialists will oppose that party, be it of whatever political stripe it may.

Then he goes on to say that he has discovered that the Socialists have strange ideas of bribery the very fact that people offer bribes shows that the system is wrong, and it has become so common that few public men are independent. The briber and the bribed are about as honorable as a thief, and the one that receives the goods knowing them to be stolen when he receives them.' What Socialists object to is that under our system that thieving and bribery should be possible, and it will flourish as long as the profit-making system lasts. When men are out for profit—and it is impossible to be otherwise under a system of private ownership and personal profit — it is impossible for them to be independent, hence they are purchaseable and unscrupulous when they see that success lies in a certain line, and will resort to any scheme to forward their desires. Our friend admits that bribery takes on several forms, and the smart briber understands his business. Now, in this matter he, as in many other cases, points out the evil, but forgets to point out the remedy; after this, when he points out wrongs, as he did with reference to the injustive of the wage-slave in the departmental stores, he should take time to point out the remedy.

In several of his letters 'Stroller' has dwelt on the idea that Socialists are inconsistent when talking of Socialism and christianity; very frequently he has said, "when it suits them they will quote the sayings of Christ by the yard, but it is questionable if they believe a word of it." By what process of reasoning has he arrived at such a remarkable conclusion? As usual he leaves his readers in the dark! Socialists point to good men and great teachers in all ages who have striven to elevate mankind and make the world better by their teachings, and are willing to put their teachings into practical use when the aim and object of such teachings are to lift the downtrodden and oppressed and place every person in the enjoyment of their full rights. But the climax of absurdity was reached when our [illegible] caviller makes his onslaught on Robert Blatchford, an eminent English writer, and tries to cast odium on the Socialistic movement by attacking Blatchford's religious opinions. Does not our friend know—and we believe he must know—that in England, where Blatchford lives and has spent his life [illegible] tion of the white slave—that the clerical party and the capitalistic party were always united to hold the masses of the people in abject submission to their wishes. When we read of the struggles of men like Baxter, Pym and Hampden, and see the means that were used by the ruling powers, and administered by such men as Judge Jefferies and the Star Chamberites, is it any wonder that bold men speak out and deny such abominable tyrants the right to rule? True, those are things that are past, and the tyrants have been shorn of their power to a great extent, but the spirit that was predominant then lives still. We saw only a few years ago, when the tithes were abolished in Ireland under the Gladstone Government, that the Church party and the money classes were hand-in-hand against the common people. It it any wonder, when such things are carried on in the name of christianity, that men would say that christianity is the worst foe to Socialism? We have only to [illegible] history of the struggles of William Lloyd Garrison, [illegible] in their efforts (afterwards successful) to liberate the chettel slave in the United States prior to 1860, to learn that one great obstacle they had to overcome was the Christian church which stood shoulder to shoulder with the [illegible] talistic) party. If our friend is doubtful of this, fortunately they placed themselves on record, and he can be referred to them.

If there are Atheists, who is to blame? Who but the mercenary tyrants of our souls who, while disgusting us with their knavery, cause some to deny the God such monsters dishonor. Men who have fattened on the substance of the people, cry out to us to be persuaded that the powers that are ordained are of God. —Yours, etc., FARMER.

Modern Medicines.

No sane mother would wish herself treated under the conditions of medicine or surgery of half a century ago. Why then should she give her little one the old-fashioned medicines of half a century ago, which more likely than not contain poisonous opiates that cannot cure the child, but merely drugs it into temporary insensibility. Baby's Own Tablets is a modern medicine prepared with all the skill of modern medical science. And the mother who gives this medicine to her child has the guarantee of a Government analyst that it does not contain one particle of opiate or poisonous soothing stuff. This medicine cures all the minor ailments of little ones, and makes baby a healthy, laughing, happy child. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

New Large Steamer.

The Northern Navigation Co., which has declared an 8 per cent. dividend on capital stock of $840,-000, has made a new 10-year contract with the Grand Trunk and the Grand Trunk Pacific to handle the lake business of those lines. For the increased traffic the company will build a 5,000-ton vessel, which will be the largest passenger ship on the upper lakes. The vessel will be built at Collingwood, and the company's officials state that she will be the fastest, as well as the largest vessel in the north. The possession of the new vessel, with the arrangement which the company has effected with its railroad connections, should insure a steady increase in profits for years.

satisfaction. So absorbed was he that when a step sounded on the stairs outside he did not notice it, and only raised his head when the door was thrown open unceremoniously. Even then his interest was momentary.

"Hello!" he said, his eyes returning to their scrutiny of his task.

Chilcote shut the door and came hastily across the room. He looked ill and harassed. As he reached Loder he put out his hand nervously and touched his arm.

Loder looked up. "What is it?" he asked. "Any new development?"

Chilcote tried to smile. "Yes," he said huskily. "It's come."

Loder freed his arm. "What? The end of the world?"

"No. The end of me." The words came jerkily, the strain that had enforced them showing in every syllable.

Still Loder was uncomprehending. He could not or would not understand.

Again Chilcote caught and jerked at his sleeve. "Don't you see? Can't you see?"

"No."

Chilcote dropped the sleeve and passed his handkerchief across his forehead. "It's come," he repeated. "Don't you understand? I want you." He drew away, then stepped back again anxiously. "I know I'm taking you unawares," he said. "But it's not my fault. On my soul, it's not! The thing seems to spring at me and grip me"— He stopped, sinking weakly into a chair.

For a moment Loder stood erect and immovable. Then, almost with reluctance, his glance turned to the figure beside him.

"You want me to take your place tonight, without preparation?" His voice was distinct and firm, but it was free from contempt.

"Yes; yes, I do." Chilcote spoke without looking up.

"That you may spend the night in morphia—this and other nights?"

Chilcote lifted a flushed, unsettled face. "You have no right to preach. You accepted the bargain."

Loder raised his head quickly. "I never"— he began. Then both his face and voice altered. "You are quite right," he said coldly. "You won't have to complain again."

Chilcote stirred uncomfortably. "My dear chap," he said, "I meant no offense. It's merely"—

"Your nerves. I know. But come to business. What am I to do?"

Chilcote rose excitedly. "Yes, business. Let's come to business. It's rough on you, taking you short like this. But you have an erratic person to deal with. I've had a horrible day—a horrible day." His face had paled again, and in the green lamplight it possessed a grayish hue. Involuntarily Loder turned away.

Chilcote watched him as he passed to the desk and began mechanically sorting papers. "A horrible day," he repeated, "so bad that I daren't face the night. You have read De Quincey?" he asked, with a sudden change of tone.

"Yes."

"Then read him again and you'll understand. I have all the horrors without any art. I have no 'ladies of sorrow,' but I have worse monsters than his 'crocodile.'" He laughed unpleas-

Loder turned. "Why, in the devil's name"— he began; then again he halted. Something in Chilcote's drawn, excited face checked him. The strange sense of predestination that we sometimes see in the eyes of another struck cold upon him, chilling his last attempt at remonstrance. "What do you want me to do?" he substituted in an ordinary voice.

The words steadied Chilcote. He laughed a little. The laugh was still shaky, but it was pitched in a lower key.

"You—you're quite right to pull me up. We have no time to waste. It must be 1 o'clock." He pulled out his watch, then walked to the window and stood looking down into the shadowy court. "How quiet you are here!" he said. Then abruptly a new thought struck him, and he wheeled back into the room. "Loder," he said quickly—"Loder, I have an idea! While you are me, why shouldn't I be you? Why shouldn't I be John Loder instead of the vagrant we contemplated? It covers everything; it explains everything. It's magnificent! I'm amazed we never thought of it before."

Loder was still beside the desk. "I thought of it," he said without looking back.

"And didn't suggest it?"

"No."

"Why?"

Loder said nothing, and the other colored.

"Jealous of your reputation?" he said satirically.

"I have none to be jealous of."

Chilcote laughed disagreeably. "Then you aren't so far gone in philosophy as I thought. You have a niche in your own good opinion."

Again Loder was silent; then he smiled. "You have an oddly correct perception at times," he said. "I suppose I have had a lame sort of pride in keeping my name clean, but pride like that is out of fashion, and I've got to float with the tide." He laughed a short laugh that Chilcote had heard once or twice before, and, crossing the room, he stood beside his visitor. "After all," he said, "what business have I with pride, straight or lame? Have my identity, if you want it. When all defenses have been broken down one barrier won't save the town." Laughing again, he laid his hand on the other's arm. "Come," he said, "give your orders. I capitulate."

An hour later the two men passed from Loder's bedroom, where the final arrangements had been completed, back into the sitting room. Loder came first in faultless evening dress. His hair was carefully brushed, the clothes he wore fitted him perfectly. To any glance, critical or casual, he was the man who had mounted the stairs and entered the rooms earlier in the evening. Chilcote's manner of walking and poise of the head seemed to have descended upon him with Chilcote's clothes. He came into the room hastily and passed to the desk.

"I have no private papers," he said, "so I have nothing to lock up. Everything can stand as it is. A woman named Robins comes in the mornings to clean up and light the fire; otherwise you must shift for yourself. Nobody will disturb you. Quiet, dead quiet, is about the one thing you can count on."

Chilcote, half halting in the doorway, made an attempt to laugh. Of the two he was noticeably the more embarrassed. In Loder's well worn, well brushed tweed suit he felt stranded on his own personality, bereft for the moment of the familiar accessories that helped to cloak deficiencies and keep the wheel of conventionality comfortably rolling. He stood unpleasantly conscious of himself, unable to shape his sensations even in thought. He glanced at the fire, at the table, finally at the chair on which he had thrown his overcoat before entering the bedroom. At the sight of the coat his gaze brightened, the aimlessness forsook him, and he gave an exclamation of relief.

"By Jove!" he said. "I clean forgot."

"What?" Loder looked round.

"The rings." He crossed to the coat and thrust his hand into the pocket. "The duplicates arrived only this afternoon—the nick of time, eh?" He spoke fast, his fingers searching busily. Occupation of any kind came as a boon.

Loder slowly followed him, and as the box was brought to light he leaned forward interestedly.

"As I told you, one is the copy of an old signet ring, the other a plain band—a plain gold band like a wedding ring." Chilcote laughed as he placed the four rings side by side on his palm. "I could think of nothing else that would be wide and not ostentatious. You know how I detest display."

Loder touched the rings. "You have good taste," he said. "Let's see if they serve their purpose." He picked them up and carried them to the lamp.

Chilcote followed him. "That was an ugly wound," he said, his curiosity reawakening as Loder extended his finger. "How did you come by it?"

The other smiled. "It's a memento," he said.

"Of bravery?"

"No; quite the reverse." He looked again at his hand, then glanced back at Chilcote. "No," he repeated, with an unusual impulse of confidence. "It serves to remind me that I am not exempt—that I have been fooled like other men."

"That implies a woman?"

"Yes." Again Loder looked at the scar on his finger. "I seldom recall the thing, it's so absolutely past. But I rather like to remember it tonight. I rather want you to know that I've been through the fire. It's a sort of guarantee."

Chilcote made a hasty gesture, but the other interrupted it.

"Oh, I know you trust me. But you're giving me a risky post. I want you to see that women are out of my line—quite out of it."

"But, my dear chap"—

Loder went on without heeding. "This thing happened eight years ago at Santasalare," he said, "a little place between Luna and Pistoria—a mere handful of houses wedged between two hills; a regular relic of old Italy crumbling away under flowers and sunshine, with nothing to suggest the present century except the occasional passing of a train round the base of one of the hills. I had literally stumbled upon the place on a long tramp south from Switzerland and had been tempted into a stay at the little inn. The night after my arrival something unusual occurred. There was an accident to the train at the point where it skirted the village.

"There was a small excitement. All the inhabitants were anxious to help, and I took my share. As a matter of fact, the smash was not disastrous; the passengers were hurt and frightened, but nobody was killed."

He paused and looked at his companion; but, seeing him interested, went on.

"Among these passengers was an English lady. Of all concerned in the business, she was the least upset. When I came upon her she was sitting on the shattered door of one of the carriages calmly arranging her hat. On seeing me she looked up with the most charming smile imaginable.

"'I have just been waiting for somebody like you,' she said. 'My stupid maid has got herself smashed up somewhere in the second class carriages, and I have nobody to help me find my dog.'

"Of course, that first speech ought to have enlightened me, but it didn't. I only saw the smile and heard the voice. I knew nothing of whether they were deep or shallow. So I found the maid and found the dog. The first expressed gratitude, the other didn't. I extricated him with enormous difficulty from the wreck of the luggage van, and this was how he marked his appreciation." He held out his hand and nodded toward the scar.

Chilcote glanced up. "So that's the explanation?"

"Yes. I tried to conceal the thing when I restored the dog, but I was bleeding abominably and I failed. Then the whole business was changed. It was I who needed seeing to, my new friend insisted; I who should be looked after and not she. She forgot the dog in the newer interest of my wounded finger. The maid, who was practically unhurt, was sent on to engage rooms at the little inn, and she and I followed slowly.

"That walk impressed me. There was an attractive mistiness of atmosphere in the warm night, a sensation more than attractive in being made much of by a woman of one's own class and country after five years' wandering."

He laughed with a touch of irony.

"But I won't take up your time with details. You know the progress of an ordinary love affair. Throw in a few more flowers and a little more sunshine than is usual, a man who is practically a hermit and a woman who knows the world by heart and you have the whole thing.

"She insisted on staying in Santasalare for three days in order to keep my finger bandaged. She ended by staying three weeks in the hope of smashing up my life.

"On coming to the hotel she had given no name, and in our first explanations to each other she led me to conclude her an unmarried girl. It was at the end of the three weeks that I learned that she was not a free agent, as I had innocently imagined, but possessed a husband whom she had left ill with malaria at Florence or Rome.

"The news disconcerted me, and I took no pains to hide it. After that the end came abruptly. In her eyes I had become a fool with middle class principles; in my eyes— But there is no need for that. She left Santasalare the same night in a great confusion of trunks and hatboxes, and next morning I strapped on my knapsack and turned my face to the south."

"And women don't count ever after?" Chilcote smiled, beguiled out of himself.

Loder laughed. "That's what I've been trying to convey. Once bitten, twice shy!" He laughed again and slipped the two rings over his finger with an air of finality.

"Now, shall I start? This is the latchkey?" He drew a key from the pocket of Chilcote's evening clothes. "When I get to Grosvenor square I am to find your house, go straight in, mount the stairs and there on my right hand will be the door of your—I mean my own—private rooms. I think I've got it by heart. I feel inspired. I feel that I can't go wrong." He handed the two remaining rings to Chilcote and picked up the overcoat.

"I'll stick on till I get a wire," he said. "Then I'll come back and we'll reverse again." He slipped on the coat and moved back toward the table. Now that the decisive moment had come it embarrassed him. Scarcely knowing how to bring it to an end, he held out his hand.

Chilcote took it, paling a little. "'Twill be all right!" he said, with a sudden return of nervousness. "'Twill be all right! And I've made it plain about—about the remuneration? A hundred a week, besides all expenses."

Loder smiled again. "My pay? Oh, yes, you've made it clear as day. Shall we say good night now?"

"Yes. Good night."

There was a strange, distant note in Chilcote's voice, but the other did not pretend to hear it. He pressed the hand he was holding, though the cold dampness of it repelled him.

"Good night," he said again.

"Good night."

They stood for a moment awkwardly looking at each other, then Loder quietly disengaged his hand, crossed the room and passed through the door.

Chilcote, left standing alone in the middle of the room, listened while the last sound of the other's footsteps was audible on the uncarpeted stairs. Then, with a furtive, hurried gesture, he caught up the green shaded lamp and passed into Loder's bedroom.

CHAPTER VIII.

To all men come portentous moments, difficult moments, triumphant moments. Loder had had his examples of all three, but no moment in his career ever equaled in strangeness of sensation that in which, dressed in another man's clothes, he fitted the latchkey for the first time into the door of the other man's house.

The act was quietly done. The key fitted the lock smoothly, and his fingers turned it without hesitation, though his heart, usually extremely steady, beat sharply for a second. The hall loomed massive and somber, despite the modernity of electric lights. It was darkly and expensively decorated in black and brown; a frieze of wrought bronze, representing peacocks with outspread tails, ornamented the walls; the banisters were of heavy ironwork, and the somewhat formidable fireplace was of the same dark metal.

Loder looked about him, then advanced, his heart again beating quickly as his hand touched the cold banister and he began his ascent of the stairs. But at each step his confidence strengthened, his feet became more firm until, at the head of the stairs, as if to disprove his assurance, his pulses played him false once more, this time to a more serious tune. From the farther end of a well lighted corridor a maid was coming straight in his direction.

For one short second all things seemed to whiz about him; the certainty of detection overpowered his mind. The indisputable knowledge that he was John Loder and no other, despite all armor of effrontery and dress, so dominated him that all other considerations shrank before it. It wanted but one word, one simple word of denunciation, and the whole scheme was shattered. In the dismay of the moment he almost wished that the word might be spoken and the suspense ended.

But the maid came on in silence, and so incredible was the silence that Loder moved onward too. He came within a yard of her, and still she did not speak. Then, as he passed her, she drew back respectfully against the wall.

The strain, so astonishingly short, had been immense, but with its slackening came a strong reaction. The expected humiliation seethed suddenly to a desire to dare fate. Pausing quickly, he turned and called the woman back.

The spot where he had halted was vividly bright, the ceiling light being directly above his head, and as she came toward him he raised his face deliberately and waited.

She looked at him without surprise or interest. "Yes, sir?" she said.

"Is your mistress in?" he asked. He could think of no other question, but it served his purpose as a test of his voice.

Still the woman showed no surprise. "She's not in, sir," she answered. "But she's expected in half an hour."

"In half an hour? All right. That's all I wanted." With a movement of decision Loder walked back to the stair head, turned to the right and opened the door of Chilcote's rooms.

The door opened on a short, wide passage. On one side stood the study, on the other the bed, bath and dressing rooms. With a blind sense of knowledge and unfamiliarity, bred of much description on Chilcote's part, he put his hand on the study door and, still exalted by the omen of his first success, turned the handle.

Inside the room there was firelight and lamplight and a studious air of peace. The realization of this and a slow incredulity at Chilcote's voluntary renunciation were his first impressions. Then his attention was needed for more imminent things.

As he entered the new secretary was returning a volume to its place on the book shelves. At sight of him he pushed it hastily into position and turned round.

"I was making a few notes on the political position of Khorasan," he said, glancing with slight apprehensiveness at the other's face. He was a small, shy man, with few social attainments, but an extraordinary amount of learning—the antithesis of the alert Blessington, whom he had replaced.

Loder bore his scrutiny without flinching. Indeed, it struck him suddenly that there was a fund of interest, almost of excitement, in the encountering of each new pair of eyes. At the thought he moved forward to the desk.

"Thank you, Greening," he said. "A very useful bit of work."

The secretary glanced up, slightly puzzled. His endurance had been severely taxed in the fourteen days that he had filled his new post.

"I'm glad you think so, sir," he said, hesitatingly. "You rather poohpooed the matter this morning, if you remember."

Loder was taking off his coat, but stopped in the operation.

"This morning?" he said. "Oh, did I? Did I?" Then struck by the opportunity the words gave him he turned toward the secretary. "You've got to get used to me, Greening," he said. "You haven't quite grasped me yet, I can see. I'm a man of moods, you know. Up to the present you've seen my slack side, my jarred side, but I have quite another when I care to show it. I'm a sort of Jekyll and Hyde affair." Again he laughed, and Greening echoed the sound diffidently. Chilcote had evidently discouraged familiarity.

Loder eyed him with abrupt understanding. He recognized the loneliness in the anxious, conciliatory manner.

"You're tired," he said kindly. "Go to bed. I've got some thinking to do. Good night." He held out his hand.

Greening took it, still half distrustful of this fresh side to so complex a man.

"Good night, sir," he said. "Tomorrow, if you approve, I shall go on with my notes. I hope you will have a restful night."

For a second Loder's eyebrows went up, but he recovered himself instantly.

"Ah, thanks, Greening," he said. "That's— I think your hope will be fulfilled."

He watched the little secretary move softly and apologetically to the door, then he walked to the fire and, resting his elbows on the mantelpiece, he took his face in his hands.

For a space he stood absolutely quiet, then his hands dropped to his sides, and he turned slowly round. In that short space he had balanced things and found his bearings. The slight nervousness shown in his brusque sentences and overconfident manner faded out, and he faced facts steadily.

With the return of his calmness he took a long survey of the room. His glance brightened appreciatively as it traveled from the walls lined with well bound books to the lamps modulated to the proper light; from the lamps to the desk fitted with every requirement. Nothing was lacking. All he had once possessed, all he had since dreamed of, was here, but on a greater scale. To enjoy the luxuries of life a man must go long without them. Loder had lived severely—so severely that until three weeks ago he had believed himself exempt from the temptations of humanity. Then the voice of the world had spoken, and within him another voice had answered with a tone so clamorous and insistent that it had outcried his surprised and incredulous

The Split Log Drag Again Commended

Deputy Minister of Public Works for Ontario Says "Good Thing."

In a recent interview Mr. A. W. Campbell, Deputy Minister of Public Works spoke strongly in favor of the split log drag for the maintenance of earth roads. He said;

"The question of road improvement which was placed upon the program at the Winter Fair held at Guelph," attracted more than usual attention, inasmuch as the care and maintenance of earth roads as well as the construction of stone roads, was fully gone into.

"During the last couple of years much interest in the care of earth roads has been created by the introduction of what is commonly known as the 'split-log drag.'

"Mr. D. King, of Missouri, who claims to be the original designer of the drag, addressed the meeting at considerable length, pointing out how the drag should be constructed and operated in order to reach the best results.

"Owing to the scarcity of gravel stone or suitable road-making material in several counties in Ontario, the split-log drag is looked upon as being an economic means of keeping ordinary earth roads in as good condition as can be hoped for until the people are in a position to enter upon a more substantial construction."

"What is your impression of the merits of the split-log-drag?"

"I had an exceptional opportunity during the past summer of viewing the work of the split-log-drag while acting as judge in the prize competition offered by The Farmers' Advocate. Entries were made from every part of the province. Drags were constructed principally after the same plan, but differing somewhat in detail, and every user endeavored to reach the best results, with the conclusion that the machine was being operated upon all kinds of soil and under various conditions.

"I unhesitatingly pronounce the split-log-drag as an exceedingly useful implement in the care and maintenance of all kinds of roads, but with special reference to earth roads.

"Every township council should have at least a dozen of these drags made for use throughout the township, and in fact every road division should be sufficiently interested in the care of its road to make a drag and see that it is operated whenever necessary during the season."

"Will the use of the split-log-drag do away with the necessity of using gravel and stone?" asked the reporter.

"Gravel and stone are absolutely necessary on roads subjected to much traffic, and no amount of care given to the earth road will make it sufficient to stand the traffic during the wet season. The drag is only designed as an instrument useful in the maintenance of all roads, and the care of earth roads, while the people are reaching these with a surfacing of gravel or stone.

"Where gravel or stone are placed on the road and a roller is not used in the consolidation of the material the split-log-drag is useful for scraping in the loose material until the traffic has compacked it."

FARM NOTES

THE DAIRY COW.

Some timely pointers were given by Henry Glendenning, of Manilla, in his address at Glenvale, on the profitable feeding of the dairy cow. He contended that the farmers should keep a cow that had the propensity of turning feed into milk. Very few cows ran both ways, to beef and milk. A special purpose cow was wanted. The Ontario farmers had been very fortunate in having favorable seasons for crop growing until last year. They got careless; the past season was dry and taught them a lesson to provide a supplement for short pastures. In his opinion the best food to supplement grass was a summer silo filled the previous day with well matured corn. It was easily fed, digested and palatable to the cows. The ideal food for a cow was grass. It required very little energy on the part of the animal to digest it, therefore the conditions throughout the year for feeding should be similar to June Silage was succulent containing eighty pounds of water to one hundred pounds of feed. June grass contained 34.9 pounds of dry material and the remainder was water. A good food for the production of milk should contain a lot of protein. Corn silage, if fed exclusively, did not give very much milk because it was low in protein, consequently something else had to be fed in order to put curd in the milk. Wheat bran contained a lot of protein, and was an excellent food, but there was no profit in feeding it now owing to the high prices prevailing. The farmers of Eastern Ontario had made a mistake in dairying. They milked their own cows seven months during the year and boarded them the remaining five. If dairying was carried on three hundred and sixty-five days during the year, the cows would do better. Cows milked ten months during the year were better fed, and when allowed to go dry two months gained in flesh and were in good condition to start work again. Milk could be produced cheaper in winter than in summer, but the farmers could not do it, with corn alone. Alfalfa hay should be fed along with corn. Alfalfa contained nearly as much protein as wheat bran and could be produced cheaper than any other crop on the farm."

DESICCATED EGGS.

In his recent report in the trade and commerce reports for Canada, J. S. Larke, of Sydney, N. S. W., speaks of a process for desiccating eggs devised in Melbourne, and carried out in Sydney. For this process, high claims are made. It has been thus described;

"Desiccated eggs are not substitutes for eggs, but newly-laid eggs treated by a process by which only the shell and water contents of the egg are removed, and the whole substance of the egg, yolk and albumen, converted into powder. The eggs first pass through a dark room, being carried on a perforated rolling table over a fifty candle-power light. Any eggs not perfectly fresh, or dirty in any way, are at once detected and put on one side. The sound eggs are carried along and go into a centrifugal separator, revolving at a tremendous rate. Here the eggs are smashed, and the shells separated from the liquid matter, which flows into a small tank, and is then pumped up to another tank, where a preservative is added. Below this tank, in a very hot room, with a temperature of 120 to 130 degrees, there are great cylinders, or drums, slowly revolving at the rate of 1 to 2 1-2 minutes. The liquid egg substance goes from the tank into troughs below these cylinders, and as they revolve become attached to them. By the time a cylinder has completed its revolution the coating has dried, and a further coating adheres. Ultimately this coating comes off in flaky pieces, which are ground into a powder. This powder will, it is claimed to have been proved, keep for years, and only requires the addition of milk or water, when the powdered eggs will reconstitute, and be ready for use for any purpose the same as a newly-laid egg. The powder is rich and attractive looking, and is reported by the government analysts of New South Wales and Victoria to contain no chemical preservative. No part of the egg, except the water, has been removed.

"It must, however, be added that the process is not yet perfected," says the correspondent. "The inventor has some difficulties still to overcome before it can be a commercial success; one of which is the reduction of the dried egg to powder. It is hoped that this and other obstacles to success will shortly be overcome. If so, the appliance should receive consideration in Canada, where a cheap process of preserving eggs would be most useful."

THERE IS A REMEDY.

The manufacturers of farm implements should take more care to have them as safe to operate as possible. The many accidents that occur on the farm are in a large measure due to the poor protection and unhandy appliances used on these machines. It ought to be easy to turn out a straw cutter, which would make it impossible for a man to lose fingers or hand. The recent accident to N. J. Chapman in Pickering proved the uselessness of these reverse levers. The fitting of the levers into notches and their consequent catching is worse, than useless. A man thinks he can operate and fails to take other means of protection until too late. Let the farmers refuse to buy machines that are not properly protected.

THE SHORTHORN MILKER

A feature of the trade in milch cows at the Chicago Stock Yards and in all the region tributary to that market, is the demand for large cows of the milking Shorthorn type. These cows, showing plenty of size, are eagerly bought at long prices by dealers from New York and Pennsylvania. Newly-calved, or well along in calf, such cows elicit the strongest competition. The dealers explain the demand for them by saying that, as the eastern dairyman no longer makes any attempt to rear his own heifers into profit, he must have something that will yield a remunerative flow of milk for a time, and then fatten readily into beef that brings a good price. This combination is found in the Shorthorn type of cow, which is bringing as much as any other sort of distinctive dairy breeding.

LOW GRADE CHEESE.

George A. Barr, of the staff of the Dominion dairy commission, and official referee in Montreal, stated before the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association at Picton on Thursday that Canada's reputation for high-grade cheese was being damaged through immense quantities of second and third grade product being placed on the market. Only two per cent. of all cheese shipments examined by him at Montreal were, he said, of first grade. The excess of lower-grade cheese was due to the great number of small factories, which, being in close competition, were unable to pay for expert cheesemakers.

G. G. Publow, chief instructor and sanitary inspector, Kingston, in reading his annual report, recommended that specialmen be detailed by the government to prosecute dairymen found to be adulterating milk.

CAMPAIGN FOR CLEAN GROCERIES.

About Bargain Peas.

The Woman's Home Companion is making a campaign for clean groceries that is attracting attention all over the country. Many grocers are now placing advertisements in their local newspapers calling attention to the fact that they are clean grocers. Here is the result of one of the hundreds of interesting experiments that have been conducted by the editors of the Woman's Home Companion. It shows that a "bargain" is not always a bargain;

"A store whose untidy appearance is often overlooked because of its 'sales,' advertised a special in peas, two cans of A1 peas for twenty-five cents. The labels of these cans were non-committal as to the name and fame of the canning agents—a point on which you cannot be too careful to make sure that you have the guarantee of a standard firm. At a tidy store a can of the same size prepared by a well-known house was bought at the standard price for that brand, fourteen cents, and the two cans were compared. The 'bargain peas' smelled almost rancid when the can was opened, so the juice was poured off and the peas carefully rinsed. Then the cause of the strong flavor was discovered. The peas were of various sizes, a full dozen of very large, hard yellow peas were discovered. The peas from the clean store were subjected to the same rinsing process, and were found to be of uniform size, a trifle larger than the French pea."

Number of Deer Killed.

Returns of the number of carcasses of deer reported killed in the various grounds of Ontario by the express companies have been received by Mr. Edwin Tinsley, Superintendent of Game and Fisheries. In all the companies handled 4,856 deer as compared with 3,310 last season. Before the close of the hunting season the Dominion Express company transported the heads of 117 moose. These figures by no means represent the number of deer killed and moose in 1907, for they do not include the animals killed by settlers or hunters living near the haunts of the game.

Met With Accident While Skating.

Saturday evening about 9 o'clock while a young lady of about twelve years, Miss Jessie Mapes, daughter of Mr. Ben Mapes, was skating on the small rink adjacent to the Public Library, she stumbled in some way and fell heavily with her feet caught together. The manner and force of the fall broke her right leg between the ankle and knee. Comrades carried her into a nearby house, when a doctor was called and she was then removed to her home in town, where her leg was set. To-day she is doing well, but will not be able to skate again this winter.

By "The Stroller."

A great deal has been said for growing towns to have a hundred thousand, and this, or a five hundred thousand this—some number away beyond what they at present are. It is all right to have a certain amount of ambition, but when we are compelled to live a life of feverish anxiety in order to reach that goal, it is very doubtful if it is worth the price. One of the sanest principle laid down in the good book is that "godliness with contentment is great gain," and if merchants, towns and even countries would adopt the principle, how all might enjoy the good things provided for us by a bountiful Providence, with a better deal than we now do. A merchant, for instance, has a comfortable business, and he gets in his time nicely. He has plenty of leisure to attend properly to his family, his church, and his share of duty of the community in which he dwells. His wealth grows, not with leaps and bounds, but steadily; some years it may not grow at all, but all through it he enjoys life, and there is none of that feverish anxiety to get on so that distinguishes some of our race. Suddenly the demon of ambition gets a hold on him. Trouble is now, he loses in getting along faster than him, or his wife's sister's John is going along. He loses sleep, and of course they must go too. The whole arrangement is changed. He has to get up an hour earlier in the morning, as has his clerks; he is late or coming home at night, the wife or goes back to work or brings his work home. He has no time now for church matters, or town meetings or anything except directors' meetings at five pm. Instead of being home with his family, he is at home with whom he comes in contact, he gets grouchy, and his own clerks steer clear of him whenever they can. Is a life like that worth living? What is the net gain or loss? He probably leaves a fortune big enough for ten ordinary people; when he comes to pass in his cheques, and his pay is hardly sold before his heirs, whom he neglected in life, are foolishly squandering the money he was so anxious to gather. Cui.

The same principle applies to towns and cities. Why should it be necessary for a town to keep itself, or some of itself, in a constant state of turmoil, trying to grow larger? What is there in bigness, anyhow? The last place to get that 100,000 idea into its head is Calgary, and they are going to turn the heads of a few of its people crazy before they do it. We do not know how it is in the other cities of Calgary and Edmonton, and other inland places, will just take a glance across the mountains and see what is situated, they will see that, with the exception of towns situated on navigable waters, or at the junction of two or three very peculiar in their favor, all the towns reach a certain limit, and then virtually stop. The reason is not far to seek. Another town just as favorably situated, starts in 50 or 100 miles away, and naturally draws the trade of the surrounding country to itself, and then starts in the chase of other nearer towns from growing. In our own country, we have the big twin cities, one at the head of navigation, Winnipeg and Vancouver, that have practically no limit to their growth. The first will go to reach its limit, will go Winnipeg; the others will have no limit. All towns west of Winnipeg and the Coast must be limited by the extent of the country tributary to them. Towns will be built, and towns of the first class, such as Brandon, Saskatoon, Moose Jaw, Calgary and Edmonton, and any of them may reach 50,000 in our time, let alone pass it, we will be very much surprised, not to say delighted. Calgary will have Edmonton, Red Deer and other towns to battle with; Lethbridge and Macleod to the south; and Macleod and to the east, all feeling our for trade, and contributing to make a big town west. Coming closer to home, we believe Toronto is going to be the city of Canada, the Dominion is in its favor, and as even now, seemingly, driving the cream of everything to itself. Still it will not do us any harm to have a 50 or 100 M city. It may shake some sleepy people up who need it.

Our readers will have noticed the different interviews that have been given recently by prominent men regarding the "next" route, that seems to be on the tapis just at present. It is doubtful if anyone, outside of the Grand Trunk Pacific people know for a certainty the points to be touched by the boats on the Atlantic. The Toronto Globe, to one version, as to the position the Grand Trunk will occupy in the procession, and we have seen it stated that one of their prominent men — a bishop and an M.P.—interviewing our Premier and speaking at Canadian clubs, showing forth the advantages of Black Sod Bay, the M.P. going so far as to say the subsidy will be boosted if Black Sod is made port of call. Sir Thos. O'Shaughnessy, Mackenzie and Mann would lead one to believe he would favor Ireland, as, very distinctly that Ireland is not in it, and we guess that gallant Knight is probably better aware of what is necessary and what is likely to be done, than anyone who has yet spoken. If the whole idea was to have an short ocean voyage as possible, the Black Sod-Halifax route, or similar route, would be the ideal one, but that is only one feature of the situation. Those boats want to get as near the centres of population as possible, not only for passengers, but for freight, which is an item that must necessarily be considered, in making a line of steamships. Steamers, Were the freight item eliminated, and the boats to depend entirely on their passenger earnings, they would have to be so abnormally increased as to make the rates almost prohibitive, even to the wealthy. Then we know that freight, especially fresh freight, go across the ocean, cannot afford to pay for too much handling. The bulk of it would be for England and Scotland, and with the Black Sod route adopted, it would mean a transhipment extra, or a very lengthy journey, for the latter, and the latter would be perfectly feasible, neither the tunnel nor ferries are there now, so it would mean an extra transshipment. Those who are least affected by such things tell us that the cost of unloading from one to ear is almost as much as the whole cost of carriage across the Atlantic.

As far as America is concerned, the heart of the British Isles is Liverpool, and it is altogether likely that that will remain the objective point of all ocean steamers until better means are devised. Should one be sent in use for crossing from Ireland to either England or Scotland, for the other hand, looking at it from Ireland's standpoint, it would seem to us that if a ferry, such as we have on the Detroit river, or on the Lake Michigan, were put in service between Dublin and Holyhead, or by way of Dublin to the two great adjacent points, there would be no reason why the traffic, both in passengers, and mails, would not go across Ireland to any point in the kingdom, without transferring. There is one feature of it that it seems to us would be worth taking into consideration by those who would like to see Ireland into line with the other parts of the confederacy, and that is the influence for good the Black Sod Bay route would have in modifying the unhappy conditions that have so long existed. We think that that feature of it is worth serious consideration.

Some weeks ago we took up the question of business depression, amongst a certain class of merchants, as instanced by the improper policies of orders issued, which had caused off a lost, and other reasons. Since that time the evil seems to be spreading, and we have heard of very strong article written by a merchant, on what he calls the unwarranted action of the railways in lumber. It appears that the poor lumber dealer is now threatened by any manufacturer we have yet heard of. He actually has orders cancelled on account of the depression, and the consignee knowing it, and in politely suggesting that no dispute the claim to pay the freight charges. Now, it does not make a very bright man to perceive that a case of lumber worth $20 at the mill, or a brick, cannot be moved around very cheaply. The essence of the matter is enough, the lumber dealer claim, it costs him more than the original value of the goods. Another very serious matter is the dumping of goods which brothers McGraw and Anderson have to take into account, in the fight in making our calls. If the consignor is three days small away, that is the best case, brothers he can do the first thing, and it beats the Dutch how those charges do accumulate.

What would our unbiased reader give a transaction like that? It is a case of unadulterated robbery. The order was given at straight, accepted and shipped in good faith, and yet the goods received reason for not accepted, the shipment is refused. We fancy any honest-minded person would say that regulations, was dishonest, and we quite agree with them, and yet that sort of thing is being done every day in Canada, and we do doubt Lindsay has its share of that class of merchants. Their argument is that they have been done down, therefore they have a right to carry out their pet idea, and if the manufacturer, on the other hand, cannot be so shabby everything that is unmoulds, and his consignee, he considers he has the right to cancel an order never has, and never will exist, unless specifically ordered, and he has the right to say courtesy on the part of the seller, who is so afraid of losing a customer, that he permits him to do so, and lose with business principles.

That, however, even if granted, does not give the dishonest merchant from the shoulders of the retailer. Unless the matter of concern that we have spoken of is thoroughly cured, there has never been a time when the ordinary manufacturer has been indifferent to sales paid the net fruits of their attitude are cancellations when there is a likelihood of a drop in prices. The manufacturer, on the other hand, is bound to carry out his contracts, both up and down, and he has to do so, in the last, if he contracts for what, he does not, or whatever it is, he dare not, for credit's sake, try to slip any cancellation, and if he contracts to sell, he dare not try to get out of filling his orders, no matter where the price goes. And he does not, or at least he thinks he dare not, force his customers to fulfil their contracts the price as he has to fulfil his own, for fear of losing their trade. Why this should be we never could thoroughly understand. Why the dividing line in commercial honesty should pts some where between the retailer and wholesaler and manufacturer, we pond our ken.

Where, we ask, is it, for the sake of common honesty we could almost vote in favor of continuance, for there is some justice in what Ireland is to be commended, and that is that everyone has to live up to their contracts just as it stood charge in a wave of depression and uncertainty that is spreading over our land. We feel certain that if at least one of us had that after the breathing spell it will give us, we will all be the better for it. We feel satisfied that a great many cancellations are made thoughtlessly, not there, but there, and they many made, with malice aforethought. We don't believe in a revenge that would injure a man that who has once given an order, he should regard his word as good as his bond, and if he thinks he has ordered too soon, or too much, the outside he should do is to ask for a postponement of the shipment, and if he is honest he will get it along as soon as he wants it. If the prices goes down, and although he is not entitled to it, any house will give him the reduction, if they only get a chance.

MR. SMALE'S DEATH.

(Toronto News.)

By the death of Mr. F. J. Smale, Toronto loses a man who was sound by income one of the leading citizens of the community. He had the true scientific spirit. He had a distinguished career in Trinity College, one of the talented and influential leaders of the graduates of the University of Toronto. For years he had great weight in the councils of Victoria University. Upon university policy generally he exercised a force of influence than was generally known. He was a man of strong, but very limited circle. As a lecturer in chemistry at the university he was thoroughly successful. He possessed great aptitude and capacity for business. As assistant general-manager of the William Davies Company, this capacity was exhibited in remarkable degree, and a great value was set upon his services. He was deeply interested in the fortunes of the Technical School and all worthy public institutions commanded his interest and support. He had genuine public spirit, a powerful and practical mind, and strong prejudice secured his judgment or vitiated his interests. He was open-handed, deeply interested in the welfare of his fellows, and, unconsciously realizing the obligation of his services to the church to which he belonged, he was a persuasive and effective speaker. He was a consistent and absolutely faithful to his settled convictions. Strong man as he was, he was not unyielding, he was not prone not to any temporizing or yielding disposition, but to his entire fairness of mind and conscientiousness, he was just as he approached the time that he felt he would have more leisure for Mrs. Grimmins, of Lindsay, "Sir" upon him, which has ended in his death. With his decease a most valuable life has been taken, and it is an unusually poorer than it was permitted to live fully while he lived, because of his noble spirit, and devotion to duties. Now and hence, he is a loss, and a great loss, to those who serious must for his very generous loss which they have sustained.

OBITUARY.

Richard Butler, Eldon.

The many friends of Mr. Richard Butler, sr., of Lorneville, will be shocked to learn of his sudden death shortly after 9 o'clock last night. He was one of the largest and strongest men in the country, but was only known about Eldon as a farmer, but after many years invested in hotel property in Lindsay, which was his home, where he professed him. A few years ago, however, he sold out and returned to the farm, where he died.

Mr. John Lethbridge, the Well-known Railway Conductor, Dead.

Mr. John Lethbridge, probably one of the oldest and best known railway conductors in Ontario, died at his home in Midland on Jan. 10th. Mr. Lethbridge was conductor of the first train running on the old Midland railway from Port Hope to Lindsay, but on the opening of the narrow gauge railroad, Toronto & Nipissing, from Toronto to Lindsay, he for some years had charge of a passenger train from Lorneville. Later on the construction of the Midland by G. T. R. he was engaged on the run from Bleekwater to Midland, where he made his home. He was a genial large-hearted man, and his pleasant smile and cheery manner made for him a best of friends wherever his travelling pouble to whom he was always "Jack." Of late years he has been a great sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism, which ultimately shacked him. He was 63 years of age and leaves a widow, three sons and three daughters to mourn his loss.

Mrs. B. Sloan, Formerly of Ops, Killed in C.P.R. Main Line Wreck.

It was with extreme regret that a large circle of friends living in Lindsay and Mariposa learned of the death of Mrs. B. Sloan, who was killed in the recent C. P. R. wreck west of Sudbury. The late Mrs. Sloan was born in the township of Ops about 58 years ago, and was the eldest of a family of twelve children. In 1896 she, with her family, moved to the West to seek an independent home, leaving one daughter in Lindsay, in the person of Mrs. R. Johnston, who resides on Russell street, and a number of sisters. Those whose names can be ascertained are Mrs. D. Grimmins and Mrs. R. Johnston, both of in Lindsay, and Mrs. Robert Nance, of Fowlers' (Corners), Mrs. Jos. Carter, of Maylock, Mrs. Frank Allen, of South Harvey, and also an aged mother, who resides with her daughter, Mrs. Grimmins, of Lindsay. The sons leaves in the West a household of young children to mourn the loss of a loving mother and wife.

The body will be laid to rest in Lindsay cemetery, where it will be a sad for the last tears. Much sympathy is extended to all the sorrowing friends in their sudden bereavement.

Seen Them Before.

They were about to entertain a few friends, and her husband suddenly found himself with the unusual experience that she appeared. When he had taken up the last one she said to herself, somewhat amazed:

"Why, dear, do you hide the umbrellas like this? Are you afraid our guests will steal them?"

"No," said he, "I'm afraid they will recognize them."

Warships or Railroads and School Houses.

(Toronto Star)

The cost of a modern battleship is $16,000,000. That is equal to the expenditure incurred in constructing 100 miles of railway in Ontario. Canadian Pacific has strung out from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Even a million boat destroyer costs as a cheapest of war vessels, costs as much as 100 up-to-date rural school houses.

A warship is a constant bill of expense, and at the end of ten years is reduced to scrap iron value. A railway is a creator of wealth, while the value of a school is measured by knowledge that is more than wealth. The financing of battle ships is of war; of railways of national development, as represented in railway building, and increasing knowledge, following upon educational improvement, make for peace.

Canada will do well to turn a deaf ear to those who are clamoring for naval armaments and to continue devoting her energies to the things that make for human progress.

A FINE NEW YEAR'S GIFT.

(From the Montreal Daily Witness)

One of the best New Year's gifts that Canada can receive is the announcement that the Canadian Pacific railway has increased its capital by $28,820,000. At the head office of the Canadian Pacific are not only, many of the leading men of the country, but, because of the vast enterprises they have undertaken for the future events. In such circumstances, the words of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, President of the company, speaking for the board of directors are most inspiring. The directors are confident that Canada will continue to progress, and that the growth of any temporary set back resulting from the financial difficulties in other parts of the world, it will proceed without cessation in the course adopted some years ago, of adding to the railway's facilities in every direction, so as to be prepared to cope with the very largely increased traffic sure to be thrown on your road. Such language is indeed inspiring, and will restore confidence and buoyancy to those who have lost faith in Canada. It is mainly possible for us to the immediate future, even if we as Canada was concerned. As the Winnipeg has practically retrieved and has shown abundantly by its earnings figures, there never has been any reason to fear any general or prolonged contraction of business in this country, and the action of the Canadian Pacific Railway tends to show that by the springtime every trace of it will be in full swing again. The railway, at least, is in a position to thank at this time for the expression of its well-founded confidence that not only covers this country, but extends to Europe, where capital is in abundance outside of Canada are held indeed, and confident that its securities will find an avenue ready to market, at this time is the most cheering financial feature of many months.

GENERAL CHURCH NOTES

There are 370 congregations continuing to the German Home Mission Board's work in this country.

The Baptists of Fort Worth, Tex., and vicinity are trying to raise $100,000 for the Bonham Orphan Home.

There were 4,000 fewer children baptized in the Episcopal Church for the year just than in the previous twelve months.

The Universities Mission to Central Africa, which owed its inception to Livingstone's appeal, has just celebrated its fiftieth anniversary.

The ancient parish church of Norton, Cuckney, in Nottinghamshire, England, has been restored, through the generosity of the Duke of Portland.

The missionary spirit has been so aroused among the Zulus that they have agreed to support their kinsmen as a working a worker to the Swazieland.

The annual meeting of the teachers and officers of the Cunningham Methodist Sunday school will be held in the church parlor at 7 o'clock sharp.

In connection with many large business houses in London, Unions for Prayer have been formed, one insurance company having over 400 of the office staff as members.

The Methodist Foreign Mission Board closes its financial year with a deficit of about $85,000, due principally to changes in the administration of the funds of the church.

From 597 to the present day England has produced but 14 of the 15 sees of the Roman Catholic church, and only one of them, Nicholas Breakspear, rose to the highest office of the church.

There were some novel proceedings at the dedication of St. Michael's Mission Church at Coventry, England, the services being followed by a gymnastic exhibition, which included leaping over a horse.

Father Bernard Vaughan, one of the most notable of the Catholic priests of Great Britain, recently composed after preaching a larger congring, but a few days later was again at his strenuous work.

An innovation has been started by the rector vicar of Epsom, England, whose parish is building a new church, in getting all the workmen together every Saturday morning for a 15-minute service.

The Mormons claim that the membership of their church in Germany is growing constantly, but falling off rapidly in England, having reached high water mark in 1849, since which time it has fed steadily.

Each Episcopal communicant during the past year gave $20.32 to mission work, an amount larger by 88 cents than any other religious body in this country, the Presbyterians following with a contribution of $15.70.

According to statistics gathered by the Mission-field of England, the membership of the various sections of the church throughout the world totals 8,448,064, this number including probationers, as against 87,909,749 twenty years ago.

The first step toward arranging for the nineteenth International Eucharistic Congress, which is to be held in Westminster Cathedral, London, next September, have been taken. The Archbishop of Westminster having named the committee.

The Federation Council of Church of Christ in South Dakota has declared in pronounced terms against bringing to life a superabundance of churches where none of the societies can gain a healthy growth.

New proof of the forces physical force involved at work among the "submerged" of London is given by the recent Apostle of Jerr. Claude H. Eliot and Rev. J. H. Ware, two of the best-known East End workers, both of whom are in the prime of life. Mr. Ware having been a famous Oxford athlete.

Charity of speech is as divine a thing as charity of action. We judge no one harshly, to misconceive no man's motives, to believe things as they seem to be until proved otherwise, to temper judgment with mercy—nearly this is quite as good as to build a hospital, under the most glorious of all leaders.

Baptists in Hungary, which has proved a very fertile field for that denomination, now number over 16,000, but a difference of opinion over seeking the patronage of the State has led to threatened split in which eminent men are now trying to settle before the meeting of the World's Church Congress next year.

The shamrock issued by the Lutheran General Council places the membership of this denomination in the country at about 15,000 over 2,000,000, while the year book, more recently issued by the Synod of Ohio, make it about 50,000 short of that number.

One of the Sunday school unions in England has undertaken to take up a new line of work in maintaining an employed harvest home for poor and ailing girls, the intention being to place them with persons who will have an eye to their church welfare as well as giving them work.

There is no profession in Great Britain that is so heavily taxed for the support of the ecclesiastic, the table of fees and the payments, which are respectively fixed by law and custom, are, at present, being a source of unending complaint that has led now to an effort to secure a reduction.

St. Paul's Episcopal church at Roosevelt, L. I., has been bequeathed a very handsome piece of ground for an altar cloth by a woman who wished to show her appreciation of the kindness of the church while she was ill in a hospital.

Prior to setting sale from New York harbor to the Arctic regions, Commander Robert E. Peary was interviewed concerning the support for Roosevelt, and among other questions put to him was one as to his views about alcoholic drinks?" The answer came decisively, "No man can drink alcoholic liquor who goes to the north. It would mean death to the man and a menace to the expedition."

PREVALENCE OF PROFANITY

His Lordship Bishop Worrell, of Salisbury, England, recently delivered an address at Halifax on profaning which has been attracting great attention in the country at large. He said:

"The growth of profanity is one of the greatest evils of the present day. The vain use of God's name, Father, Son and Holy Ghost is terribly common. The profane man insults the air, he fouls his tongue, he fouls our streets, and he gains nothing by it. He shows no respect for himself or for others. Were you to hear this or that one, you would doubt your sanity, or damn your friend or damn yourself, lest you evil thought what it means to be damned. If you do not believe in future reward or punishment, if you are being an idle and meaningless expression and making yourself as an insincere and witless man? If you do believe that there is some time when you must answer for your deeds, if you have listened to experience and seen how true it is that your sin will find you out, you surely could not mean you wish such a fate for some one. The starving maniac, or the helpless invalid, the ruined gambler, or the tortured prisoner, these are some who have been damned here and now, whatever may be the future for them. Would you go to the hospital, the asylum, the prison, and jeer at them? Then let us wish full force of the responsibility of life avoid such mockery. They endure enough, they injure all and benefit none."

SEX MORALITY

There is every indication, says the Lutheran Observer, to introduce the teaching of sex morality into the public schools of the United States, or at least into the schools of the higher grades. Its desirability, from the standpoint of the physician, there no one will question. Its practicability is another matter. Its advocates point to the manifest results of the teaching in the schools the physiological effects of which are undoubtedly increasing the number of men under thirty-five who see these things, and the vicious character of the teaching habit. They point, too, to the opposition which this teaching encounters in the world of education when first it was begun, and the claim is made that if widespread evil is avoided or checked it will be by the systematic training in the public schools on these moral lesson upon which rest all human progress, human virtue and human character."

DEADLY VICE OF GOSSIP.

Gossip is very easily learned, very hard to yield to the temptation to gossip, to indulge in unkind, thoughtless statements about our neighbor. It is a habit that grows. A man's character, a woman's fair name, are things too precious to be thoughtlessly committed to the power of a fire which can utterly destroy them, but can never give them back the pabsaging. Are we any the better or happier for gossiping? Has anyone every spoken of us behind our backs? Has it ever taken out of school, by spreading unkind rumors of a man or woman? Have we ever seen a person that the very people to whom we tell tales despise us, they don't think we are good, agreeable people at all. Have we ever never a gossip and who had any real friend. Where you meet a man or woman you have nothing better to say, tell them this is what or fine day and yes on. Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth — and the tongue is a fire. Let us resolve that the fire can consume, it cannot restore ashes, nor even undo the mischief it has done.

Let us remember that loyalty to Christ demands of us that we resource the devil and all his works and pomps and vanities, including the perversion of the human tongue. We are this world for a few years to do God's work and not the devil's.

FICTION AND OTHER EVILS.

The prevailing sins of our times was the subject of a recent sermon by Rev. Mr. Wallace, of Woodstock. The people—the rich and the middle-ter, do not educate themselves by studiedly serious reading, and they are not the people who read reviews and books by Fraser and Ralph Connor, and other models of the present day. The people who read Scott, Dickens, Thackeray, Shakespeare or even the book of books, the bible. This is very much to be regretted.

The real, deep, serious instincts of life are unappreciated at the present time and the sensational and superficial parade prevail. These are the manifestations of the child in the service. Pretensions are full of claims; merit is silent."

Omnivorous is an enormous preponderance of fiction in the public libraries and the prevalence of the cigarette habit among the young, and the eating of candies and the chewing of gum all the time. The minister next spoke of the best remedies for stopping that at present money was vulgarly paraded. The sport of referees and the sport of yachting are not sanctioned in wealth. Money rapidly earned inclines the owner to ostentatious display. As we progress, he said, we will acquire this correct spirit and serenity. The fashion of our books, he declared, should be less thought of than the pencil marks that show that they have been made use of. No society will be complete unless it based entirely upon riches. It is intellectuality, refinement and culture that will last.

ONE FACE.

(Charles Kingsley.)

When all the world is young, lad,
And all the trees are green;
And every goose a swan, lad,
And every lass a queen;
Then hey for boot and horse, lad,
And round the world away;
Young blood must have its course, lad,
And every day has its fun, lad,
And every dog his day.

When all the world is old, lad,
And all the trees are brown;
And all the sports is stale, lad,
And all the wheels run down;
Creep home and take your place there,
The spent and maimed among;
God grant you find one face there
You loved when all was young.

BELIEVES LIFE SAVED BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"I have been treated by doctors for eczema on my leg. They did their best, but it was worse. My doctor advised me to have my leg cut off, and I would try the Cuticura remedies first. He said, "Try them if you like, but I do not think they will do any good." At this time my leg was poised from the knee down, and I had to walk on crutches. I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment, and a bottle of Cuticura Pills. After the first two treatments the swelling went down, and in two months my leg was healed and I throw aim cares on. The doctor could not believe his own eyes when he saw the Cuticura had cured me and said that he would use for his own eczema. I used two cakes of Cuticura Soap, three boxes of Ointment, and two bottles of Pills. I have now been cured over seven years, and but for the Cuticura remedies I might have lost my life. I have lots of grandchildren, and I always recommend the Cuticura to my people when I express things to my house every day. Distribution of Fresh Seed Grain

It Will be Made From the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa.

By instruction of the Hon. the Minister of Agriculture, a distribution is being made this season of small plots of superior varieties of grains and potatoes to Canadian farmers for the improvement of seed. The stock for distribution has been secured mainly from the Experimental Farms at Indian Head, Sask., and Brandon, Man. The samples consist of oats, spring wheat, barley, Indian corn, for ensilage only, and potatoes. The quantity of oats sent is 4 pounds, and of wheat or barley 3 pounds, sufficient in each case to sow one-twentieth of an acre. The samples of Indian corn and potatoes weigh 3 pounds each. A quantity of each of the following varieties has been secured for this distribution:

OATS — Banner, White-wake, White Giant, Danish Island, Thousand Dollar, Imperial Russian, Siberian varieties. Black oats are not recommended for general cultivation in a few samples, however, are available, which can be sent if specially asked for.

WHEAT — Red Fife, hardiness; Preston, Pringle's Champion, and Huron early bearded sorts; Red and Stanley, early beardless varieties.

BARLEY — Six-rowed, Mensury Odessa, Mansfield and Claude, Trowroed, Standwell, Invincible, Canadian Thorpe and Sidney.

INDIAN CORN, for ensilage — Flavy sorts, Angel of Midnight, Compton's Early and Leaming; later varieties, Selected Leaming, Early Mastodon and White Cap Yellow Dent.

POTATOES — Early varieties, Early White Pearl and Rideau Ecem; Medium to late varieties, Carman No. 1, and Late Puritan. These latter varieties are as a rule more productive than the earlier kinds.

Only one sample can be sent to each applicant, hence if an individual receives a sample of oats he cannot also receive one of wheat, barley, Indian corn or potatoes. Lots of more than one individual or applications for more than one sample for one household, cannot be entertained. The samples will be sent free of charge through the mail.

Applications should be addressed to William Saunders, Director of Experimental Farms, Ottawa, and may be sent in any time before the 15th of February, after which date the lists will be closed, so that the samples asked for may be sent out in good time for sowing. Applications should mention the variety they desire with a second sort as an alternative. Applications will be filled in the order in which they are received, so long as the supply of each lasts. Farmers are advised to apply early, so as to afford possible disappointment. Those applying for Indian corn or potatoes, should bear in mind that the corn is not usually fairly ripe until April and that potatoes cannot be mailed from here until all danger from frost in transit is over.

No postage is required on mail matter addressed to the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

How to Secure Efficient Farm Aid

Salvation Army Scheme of Immigration Discloses the Means.

During the past four years, The Salvation Army has succeeded in bringing to Canada a good class of Farm laborers and domestic servants.

Notwithstanding the protest made in some sections of the country, that there is a surplus of labor, the Army Officials find there, is still a great demand for agricultural industrious, and they have found it necessary to charter several ocean liners to supply the need. The call for farm labourers, comes from all parts of the Dominion, and now that the Ontario Government has decided not to continue supplying farm help, and as it is likely that immigration to Canada will not commence until late in April, the demand for settlers coming out under The Army scheme will be very great. The first chartered ship will be the Kensington, sailing from Liverpool, February 20th, for British Columbia points, followed by the Southwark, on March 5th, for Ontario points; the Ionian, from Glasgow, and the "Kensington," from Liverpool, on March 19th.

Farmers who have not made application for help for the coming season, are advised to write for application forms and further particulars to Lieut.-Colonel Howell, 20 Albert-st., Toronto, Ont. The class of immigrants supplied by the Army has given great satisfaction throughout the country, and the experience they have had in the past years in this direction, will evidently qualify them for selecting suitable farm help this season.

Board of Water Commissioners Think Town is Getting Too Much

Water Takers are Paying for Services Enjoyed by Non-Users, in the Way of Street Watering and Supply for Schools.

Evening Post of Jan 14

The first meeting of the Water Commissioners was held yesterday afternoon at four o'clock, in the waterworks office on William St. Those present were Messrs. Flavelle, Brady, Bogue, Sinclair, Secretary Ray and Superintendent Hammond.

Mr. J. D. Flavelle was elected chairman for 1908. The minutes of the last meeting of 1907 were then read and confirmed.

SUNDRY MATTERS

Secretary Ray then brought before the Commissioners the case of Mr. Thos. McConnell. Mr. McConnell did not want to go to the expense of changing his piping, so that Mr. McCoy would be using of a separate meter, but suggested putting a meter on Mr. Morgan's yard sufficient to meet the amount of Mr. Morgan's water from the amount that passed through his Mr. McCoy's meter. The Commissioners decided this was one the thing to do, and concluded that if Mr. McConnell was a large user, they would bear the expense themselves. The Commissioners decided to see it properly carried out.

Moved by Mr. Brady, seconded by Mayor Bogue, that the Commissioners authorize the Dominion Bank to permit an overdraft of $2,000 at 6 1-2 per cent. interest for 1908.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Sinclair, seconded by Mr. Brady, that Treasurer Doyle be authorized to pay Dr $2000 for the year 1908 be renewed.—Carried.

The motion by Mr. Brady, seconded by Mayor Bogue, that the following accounts be passed was carried;

1907 accounts—
Thos. McConnell, refund on water	$ 2.80
Pat Welch, inspecting supper Sergt.	0.25
H Boynton, coal	9.21
Rider & Kitchener, use of sidewalk	3.75
Thos Bryant	1.18
1908 accounts—
W. Lownsbrough, duty	1.50
Well office tea and stamps	0.50
Can. Express Co.	0.40
Jas. McCoy, salary	15.75
G.N.W. Telegraph Co.	.35
Wilson & Wilson	2.10
A. L. Campbell, salary	8.25

Weir & Co.	0.10
Light, Heat & Power Co.	2.47
Jos. Maunder & Son	0.50
Newark & Davis	0.50

Mr. Flavelle then spoke on the advisability of putting a meter on the Dundas & Flavelle sighhouse, and advocated keeping an extra meter on hand so that the meter building on the flat rate could be tested. The Commissioners thought it advisable to act on Mr. Flavelle's suggestion.

—How about those good resolutions? Are you hanging onto them?

—Sec.-Treas Ray then stated that in 1906 there was 5,000 more water used than in 1906, and there was also $1000 more revenue.

SET JULY AND TAKE NOTICE

Mr. Flavelle again brought up his scheme of having the water free for a paying proposition. He contended that the town should pay for watering the streets and should tax the property owners along the watered streets accordingly. He did not think it fair that water users only, scattered as they are all over the town, should pay for watering the streets of the general public. The town should also pay for the water used at the schools, as the public as a whole are getting the benefit of it, while the few water-takers pay for it higher rates. The Commissioners would have $4000 of a revenue if they did not have to spend it for extensions and additions to the capital account. Why should the Commissioners be the only ones to provide and pay for the future, when debentures can be issued payable by the people of the future? In two and a half years the Commissioners will have to pay an instalment of debentures, and owing to sinking all the surplus in extensions and capital expenditure, they will not have a fund built up to provide against the future. Mr. Flavelle asked the Commissioners to take this point into consideration for the next meeting.

MAP OF THE SYSTEM

Superintendent Hammond then referred to the matter of having a new linen map of the town made, with the waterworks and extensions on it. The last map was fifteen years old and long out of date. Blue prints could be had for $10 and he was instructed to have one made at once.

Moved by Mr. Brady, seconded by Mayor Bogue, and carried, that Chas. Pegel be taken on as assistant caretaker at the pumphouse.

The meeting then adjourned.

Playing Ball in 'Sunny Alberta'

Interesting Letter From a Former Resident of Lindsay.

Our readers will recall with some pleasure the name of Mr. Stuart Sonnes, son of Mr. A. A. J. Sonnes, town, who has gone in the West for several years.

Olds, Alta., Jan. 2nd, '08.

(To the Editor of The Post.)

Sir,—I forward a copy of the Christmas number of the "Olds Gazette", which will tell you a little about the busy town of the great West. I have been intending writing you a number of times, but somehow business has kept in and I have had to lay my writing aside. In regards to business, owing to the stringency in the money markets, things have been rather quiet, although real estate has been good, so you will see through your perusal of the Christmas number, the largest deal has been made in the past year, $20,000.00 having just been put through.

In reference to the weather, it has been good, omitting the bad spell we had in November and December, which did damage to a lesser or greater extent in different parts of Alberta, but not much, only when we had about six inches of snow, we have had ideal weather; from Sept. 12th up to a month ago, we have never seen or known over six or ten days in that time when we did not see the sun shine, and real "Sunny Alberta" weather. We have had Chinooks all fall up to present, which keep the snow mature naturally, so we have seen it much below zero as yet, in fact, for the present time, it is just keeping around freezing point.

HOCKEY ON NEW YEAR'S DAY

Yesterday our hockey team went to Carstairs to play a league game, and Olds was well represented; between 75 and 100 took in the sport, it going by train, the game ended 8 to 7 in favor of Olds. We have a team we ought to be proud of, as most of our men are Canadians, the only player being Thomas Dorsey, who is an old resident of Bocegigeon and Dunneford, and who, prior to coming out here, was living on the Fox farm outside of Lindsay.

We have practically no snow; wagons are all the go now, and in Calgary they had a snowball game yesterday, Canadian Pat Mac vs. American Pat Mac. I shall enclose a report taken from the Calgary paper of the game.

Mr. Brown, a prominent man of Edmonton, was visiting this West, spoke very highly of this country, and stated it was only in its infancy and would become one of the best provinces in Calgary of Edmonton. He also says that if Ontario people were aware of the fact that wealth of Alberta, in there or four years Ontario would be deserted. We are not only blessed with good crops, but we have only to sink a few miles to get to a coal mine which is very large. One mine in Edmonton was sold to a large American syndicate, who claim they can supply coal for years to come. Edmonton is quite right over a coal bed.

Wishing you a very happy and prosperous New Year, also my old friends, I remain, yours, etc.,

STANLEY A. SONNES.

Canada's Forests A World Factor

The Only Country Possessing a Surplus —Necessity of Reforestration.

Timber has been and will be, so long as man requires houses to shelter him, implements which in way ves for agricultural purposes, one of the great needs of the world. In countries where the forests have been cut, they have become a great part of Europe, and they are no longer capable of supplying the needs of the inhabitants, efforts have been made to take stock of the worlds timber supply to ascertain to know when exactly the deficiency is to be supplied. As a European writer has said, "It is probable that the United States alone, with 215 millions of inhabitants of Europe, constituting the nations where commerce and industry have attained the greatest power do not now possess more than the manufacturing purposes in the forests of the territories which they occupy."

Nor is the supply of Canada's timber so forbidding as it would seem, is able to furnish more than its own needs. Neither from Africa nor South America can an adequate supply be obtained. Australia can furnish little, if any, timber, and Asia in great excess of production can only serve in number. Here in Europe—Austria-Hungary, Russia, Sweden, Finland and Russia, and two Scandinavian countries, Norway and Canada. The increase of population and the development of industries in Austria-Hungary, in Russia and in the United States will soon reduce them to the level of Germany, Great Britain, Sweden, Finland and Canada are the only countries that have a certain future as timber producers.

In the Dominion of Canada the forest area has been estimated at as high as 800 million acres, but large extents have been cured over and cutaway, and the remaining area is so small that it half that area is really covered by forest. The Canadian forests will be however producing a great deal more timber by yearly growth than is yearly taken from the forests, if they are up, propertly there would always be a sufficient supply; but fires are destroying considerable timber every year, and, as the forests of Europe and the United States become depleted, the quantities required for trade will increase every year. To meet this demand will require more than the natural growth, and unless that which is being cut away.

Pink Pills Will Cure Rheumatism

Every Form of the Disease Yields to This Blood Building Remedy.

It is easy to make the statement that a medicine will cure rheumatism, but the Rheumatic sufferer must have more than mere statements. He must have proof. Mrs. Alfred Proof, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure all forms of rheumatism? Here is the proof. Rheumatism is caused by thin blood. Every dose of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make new, rich, red blood. The new blood drives out the poisonous acid tissues the aching joints, and rheumatism is vanished. Hundreds have testified to the truth of these statements and to the further fact that they have proof. Hold Meetings, of St. Jerome, Que., says: For many years I was a victim of inflammatory rheumatism, and was awollen and the pain so agonizing that I was confined to my bed. I tried remedy after remedy but nothing gave me relief and I began to despair of ever being cured. At last I was persuaded to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In less than a month I was able to be about and do my condition. I continued the Pills for three months and at the end of the time I was cured. I feel perfectly well, very pain and ache had left me and I felt as happy and free from pain as a completely cured and once more able to go about my work with ease. I owe my health to Dr. Williams' Pills and the pain so agonizing that I was confined to my bed. I tried remedy after remedy but nothing gave me relief and I began to despair of ever being cured. At last I was persuaded to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In less than a month I was able to be about and do my condition. I continued the Pills for three months and at the end of the time I was cured. I feel perfectly well, very pain and ache had left me and I felt as happy and free from pain as a completely cured and once more able to go about my work with ease. I owe my health to Dr. Williams' Pills and I am worth all the praise I can give them."

Thousands write giving praise as strong proof of the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—not only as a cure for rheumatism but for a cure for all the ailments finding their root in a thin, watery condition of the blood, palpitation indigestion, kidney troubles, backache and backache, disorders of a private nature. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MERRY WEDDING BELLS.

Schwardfager—Cassie.

A pretty wedding was celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Milne, 57 Lydia-st., Winnipeg, when their eldest Miss Annie May Cassie, was married to the Rev. Edward Schwardfager, of Winnipeg. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. Phillips, of St. Paul's church. The bride entered the parlor on the arm of her uncle, Mr. Robert Milne, to the strains of the pipes, and was attended by her cousin, Miss Emily Milne who wore a white Gibson silk and carried a white Irish lace. Mr. Allan Semke acted as groomsman.

Immediately after the ceremony, a dainty repast was partaken of, and the Rev. Mr. Stewart proposed a toast to the bride, which was heartily responded to. The bride was the recipient of many useful presents, among which was a handsome set sent from the T. Eaton Co. and a handsome carving set from her friends at the shop.

Mr. and Mrs. Schwardfager left on the morning train to spend their honeymoon and visit their homes in the east, after which they will reside in Winnipeg. We wish them every happiness.

Wilfred Laurier Boblin.

(From the Saturday Night.)

Probably very few people are aware of the fact that Mr. Boblin, one of the active Conservative Premier, Hon. R. P. Roblin, was in his early days two enthusiastic Liberals, and he was elected to the Legislature of Manitoba as a Liberal member, joining the ranks of the Government party through a disagreement with Greenaway as to policy.

That he was evidently a great admirer of Sir Wilfrid Laurier is shown by the fact that his eldest son bears the Christian name of Wilfrid Laurier Roblin. However, the name is shortened to Wilfrid Laurier, and Wilfrid Laurier Roblin is popularly known as "Fred."

Newspapers and Magazines.

The Musical Times for January for January begins well with a handsome and showy cover, designing by James Cadenhead, and the rest of the first number from the standpoint of illustrations. In addition to Flagg's well known illustrations, there is a page reproduction of W. Balfour Ker's painting, "Forgotten." It represents a weary girl, leaning the house and burn in the distance, and the old family home standing dreary and lone in the background, the ivy on the falling snow—forgotten.

Among the fiction is an important installment of the serial story "Sister Phelps" great novel, "Through Life Us Dee Part"; "The Adjusted Honeymoon," by Jos. A. Worcester; "Cause in Consequence," by Mary Wilkins; Hastings; "Rose Mary," a Quaker story by Ethel Dreman Gilchrist, and "The Lamps of Psyche," by Zona Gale, author of the now popular novel, "Miss Lulu Bett," and many others.

The interesting feature of this issue of the Companion is a new department entitled "Teens and Twenties", conducted by Lucy Norman, the horticultural authority. Samuel Armstrong Hamilton, contributes a valuable article on "Plants for the Winter Window." Anna Moore Richardson's department for The Girl Who Cares Her Own Living is as valuable as ever, and in Miss Norton's Home Page.

Victories for Local Option.

The latest returns of the voting on local option give thirty-six victories to the prohibitionists. Thirty municipalities for the first time appear in the dry column, and in six local option municipalities the Act was sustained. So far as heard from the vote will aggregate over the polls cast in the total number of Ontario municipalities under local option. The vote in Ontario shows the places the optionists failed to secure a majority, and in the twenty-four others the necessary three-fifths vote was not secured.

Invite the Public to Call.

"I would not own a business that I could not advertise," remarked a merchant at a recent Board of Trade banquet in a western town. This is the right sentiment, the proper spirit, and if all retailers would take the same view, their log would so unmistakably improved. Those who advertises and does it well, who specializes in this department, as he does in all others, is the man who survives in days of stress and keen competition, who is ever searching and enlarging his premises and keeping pace with the times.

Mr. A. Gilchrist arrived from the West, having been on the train that was derailed near Chapleau. Out this way friends are pleased to see him.

Mr. and Mrs. Jay, of Midland, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wood last week.

Mr. Andrew Spence, of Kirkfield, visited in our community last week.

Mr. Dan. McMillan, of Beaverton, visited at Mr. McKay's last week.

A baby girl arrived at Dr. Dill's last week, consequently he feels very proud.

HARTLEY.

(Special to The Post.)

Miss Minnie Campbell, who has been on a visit with friends in the west, has returned.

Mr. J. M. Spence, an old Hartley boy, who went West some years ago, and has done well, is home visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Spence.

Mr. Angus McFadyen is making preparation to erect a fine residence in the spring.

The local option campaign has just been brought to a successful issue in this township. The law comes in force on May 1st next. The people of the community are highly delighted. Of course it was expected, and the liquor men and their friends cannot look for much sympathy from the people of this district. It is now fifteen years since liquor was sold here, and during that time the improvements which have been made by the farmers, and the morals of the rising generation, is sufficient evidence that the barroom is not only unnecessary, but a hindrance to the success of any place, and we hope that before long the bar will be banished and we will have a total prohibition in this fair province of ours.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Gilchrist, of Souris, Man., are visiting friends here.

CAMERAY

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Mr. Frank Riches, who has spent the past summer in the N. W. T., returned home again on Monday last.

Owing to the great storm on Sunday the churches were very slimly attended.

Mr. James Wells has started his saw mill and is doing a rushing business.

Our temperance house is again closed. Lack of accommodation makes it very inconvenient for the travelling public.

The anniversary services in connection with the Methodist church will be held on Sunday and Monday, 19th and 20th. On Sunday the Rev. R. A. Woodville, will preach at 10.30 and 7 o'clock on the Monday. A supper will be served, followed by a good program. The talent will be all new to Cameray audiences, and should draw a big crowd. Everybody come and have a good time.

PENIEL

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Bro. Dr. Hamilton, of Toronto, will conduct the missionary service in our church on Sunday next, Jan. 19th. We are anticipating an enjoyable service.

Mr. Norman Coolidge, of Manitoba, is spending the winter at his father's, Mr. Gilbert Coolidge's.

Masters John and George Hardy are attending the continuation class in Cannington.

Mr. Elmer and Miss Maud Jones, spent Sunday last at Omemee.

Little Miss Pearl McIlarge is on the sick list.

Miss Alice Osborne has returned from a visit to her uncle, Mr. Rich. Osborne, of Toronto.

Our Epworth Leaguers are looking forward to meeting the returned missionary from Japan, Rev. Emerson, at the convention to be held in Lindsay next week.

The rink is patronized by young and old, some not having had skates on before for 10 or 15 years. The interest taken reflects credit on the managers for the general good order kept.

JANETVILLE

(Special to The Post.)

Our new sawmill is again in operation and is in better shape than before the fire. Mr. Burns is getting plenty of custom sawing and is prepared to cut all that can be sent his way. He is very grateful to those who so generously helped him to rebuild the mill.

Hockey Match at Little Britain Sunderland Team Defeated 7-0

Game Becoming Popular in the Country—Victors in Above Match May Join Town League and Make Things Interesting.

Our town was greatly excited during the progress of the hockey match between Sunderland and the home team last Monday afternoon. The day was all that could be desired, from the spectators' point of view. A large crowd assembled at the rink to witness the game. This speaks well for the managers of the rink, as they are doing all in their power to give good accommodation and good sport.

The ice was rather soft, owing to the warm weather; still, frequent bursts of speed were taken by the players. The Sunderland team are better this year than last, but were compelled to play a strictly defence game. They bunched in front of the net till hardly an inch of space was left unguarded. The superior work of Joyal, in goal for Sunderland, was the cause of the visitors escaping as easily as they did; rather than Rice, they were outplayed from point to centre. Had the ice been as keen as last winter, no doubt the score would have reached a high mark. "Slick" Hestley and Loy Rogers, on the defense, played sterling hockey all through the game, and were at times equal of the game the crowd were cheering wildly. After several minutes' play half time was called, with the score standing 4-0 in favor of Little Britain.

The second half saw the visitors refreshed after their rest, but it was no use, as the home team were in good condition. Lavery, of Sunderland, made a rush, but was stopped by "Slick" Hestley, who passed the puck to Yerex; then a series of passes was indulged in by Martin, Yerex and McherrIl, and again Lavery came down the ice with a rush, until Rogers stopped him, and by playing the boards passed it to "Pigg" Hestley, and just nine minutes after the second half started he landed the puck in the net. Martin was likewise engaged to capture and did good work, and in just four minutes more made the net sag with another to put nine minutes and a half McherrIl finished second. Sunderland several times tried a rush, but could not make it, and the game ended 7-0 in favor of Little Britain.

There were six penalties administered in the first half and five in the second, both teams breaking even in this respect. The line-up was:

Epworth Leaguers Gather To Discuss Church Work

Over Two Hundred Delegates Take Part in Stirring Meetings for the Promotion of Church Work—Two Superior Addresses Heard on Tuesday.

Evening Post of Jan. 22.

The second session of the Epworth League convention was held in the Cambridge-st. Methodist church last evening. The large edifice was crowded to the doors with Leaguers and their friends, and a more interesting and animated gathering of young people would be hard to find. For those unacquainted with the work of this organization we quote Bishop Fowler's explanatory remarks: The Epworth League is the volunteer army where raw recruits are much drilled into soldiers of marching, are mustered into regular soldiers and veterans who ask not for the reward of merit, but for chance to meet them. The League, with its 1,650,000 members, is to the church what the hind legs are to a kangaroo. They make the kangaroo jump; but remember always it is the kangaroo that jumps. The League makes the church go; but it is the church that goes."

The meeting was opened by Rev. Dr. Bishop with prayer. Mr. Wm. Flavelle, on behalf of the Trustee Board of the church, then tendered the convention the use of the church property for their services, and the hospitality of the congregation, through their work in Lindsay.

Reeve Geo. Jordan, in the unavoidable absence of Mayor Begg, on behalf of the Town Council tendered the visitors the freedom of the town during their stay, and in a very appropriate speech wished them success in their work and a very pleasant visit while guests in our town.

Mr. Wm. Johnson, of Belleville, accepted the welcome to the League, on behalf of the convention.

The choir of young men, numbering about 20, under the direction of Mr. Forsyth, the organist, sang several selections with a vim and enthusiasm that was infectious and assisted greatly in maintaining interest of the meeting. A quartette of young men also gave a number that was very well received.

President Rev. S. F. Dixon, occupied the chair, and made an excellent chairman.

Tuesday's Speakers.

AN INTERESTING ADDRESS

Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, of Belleville, was the first speaker. He said he would speak from the different links which made up his chain. The first, the cradle roll, was not a difficult link to forge, and yet it was one that was then easily directed. Next the infant class, another link easily forged. The intermediate class next; at this ages they were most difficult to mould, as they were so full of life that it was hard to concentrate them, but the importance of keeping up their interest was most essential. The next link was the class class—possibly the most important of all, as that part of the chain now so easily broken which links the child into soul company. He had been very successful in this department, as over 1,800 young men had passed through his visible class in the last few years. He had found the average young man doubtful, hesitating and ambitious, all of which qualities were blessings in themselves if properly guided. The speaker had found that it was not well to notice the unfaithfulness and sensitiveness, but draw them out in other lines. Mr. O'Flynn's talk covered many points of use to teachers and those interested in young men and their welfare.

AN ELOQUENT ADDRESS.

Rev. R. W. Gordon, B. A., gave an address, taking as his theme, "I write unto you as men." There were two kinds of aristocracy—that of wealth, with its smoking chimneys and factories, its luxuries and ease, and that of nobility, with its generous blood and bright prospects. No young man admires Napoleon Bonaparte, a man, but did not represent the ideal manhood. Athletics were good, and tended to develop the perfect man, but were not intended to be followed as a business, simply as a pastime. He advised the young man to strike for all he was worth and put all his strength into for that which is good; do well the small things. The energy and gentleman's speech was one of the best thoughts and addresses that has ever been given in town. He seemed to be in touch with the convention, and had the language and analogies to impress his address. We regret that we are unable to give an extended report of his address.

(Concluded next week.)

Tea and Concert Held at Cambray

Fine Supper and a Pleasing Program—Large Sum Realized.

The annual tea and entertainment in connection with Cambray Methodist church, was held last Monday evening. The church was crowded to its capacity with young people from all parts of the district, and many citizens took advantage of the pleasant evening to enjoy the hospitality of Cambray friends. It taken the old-fashioned tea meeting to draw the people together, and no function provides more opportunity for the exchange of fellowship that the tea meeting.

The tea was served in the basement, and the ladies of the church outdid excelled their well known reputation for providing the best and most appetizing refreshments. The chair was taken by Mr. W. B. Sparling, M.A., who made an excellent genial chairman. He so directed a program of almost three hours' length that all remained until it was completed. Excellent speeches were given by three of Cambray's former pastors, Messrs. Anderson, Turpill and Snowden, and judging from the complimentary remarks made by those gentlemen concerning the old circuit, they had honored with the chosen people. Mr. Murray, the Presbyterian minister, also gave a short and pleasing address.

Miss Brandon, of Cannington, gave several vocal selections, which were encored. Mr. W. Robinson, three cose solos, which were well received and were a recall. Naylor Bros. and Mr. Mullen, of Lindsay, gave several selections on the mandolin and guitar, which fairly carried the house away, and they were repeatedly encored. Master Percy Mulhern gave several vocal selections. His sweet voice was very much appreciated. Mrs. Gilbert and Miss Maitche being the accompanists.

The pastor, Mr. Tonkin and the people of Cambray are to be congratulated on the success of their 1908 tea, which netted $110 in cash.

WEDDING BELLS

Graham—McFadyen.

The home of Mrs. J. S. McFadyen, Hartley, on New Year's eve was the scene of a very pleasing event, it being the marriage of a daughter, Miss Maude Isabella to Mr. Colin Graham of Margoes. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Whatham, of Woodville.

To the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Laura Beatty, Lorneville, the bride entered the parlor leaning on the arm of her father, and looking charming in a gown of cream poplin d'esprit. Miss Kate McFadyen, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and looked very prettily dressed in white silk de Paris. The groom was assisted by his brother, Robert.

After the marriage ceremony all sat down to a sumptuous wedding supper. The bride received many beautiful and useful presents, among them a handsome gold watch and chain from Lindsay, and from Chicago.

The happy couple left the same evening for their future home on the groom's farm in Mariposa, carrying with them the best wishes of their many friends for a happy and prosperous voyage through life. The bride's travelling gown was a light brown cloth, trimmed in ermine with green velvet and hat to match.

Grozell—O'Connor.

On Jan. 7th a quiet wedding took place in St. Mary's church, Stroudbridge, when Rev. Father Quillinn united in marriage Miss Katie B. O'Connor and Mr. Charles A. Grozell, both of Bracebridge. The bridesmaid was Miss Mary O'Connor, sister of the bride, and the groomsman Mr. Joseph Grozell.

After partaking of lunch at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Stev O'Connor, the happy couple left on the 11 train for Orillia. After visiting friends in Orillia and Victoria Harbor they will take up their residence in Bracebridge.

Mr and Mrs. Grozell have the best wishes of a large circle of friends.

A Grim Record.

No less than 2157 persons were reported to the police as missing in New York city during the year just closed. Another grim reminder of the transiency of humanity and how easily it is for people to disappear there without any particular concern on their part or to what may have been their fate.

Tumors Conquered Without Operations

Unqualified Success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in Cases of Mrs. Fox and Miss Adams.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of women's dread enemy, Tumor.

So called wandering pains may come from the presence of a tumor, and danger may be made manifest by excessive menstrual flow, accompanied by unusual pain extending from the abdomen through the pelvis and thighs.

If you have mysterious pains, if there be menstrual disorders, irregularities or displacement, don't wait for time to prove your fears, don't go through the horrors of a hospital operation; secure Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once and begin its use, and write Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., for advice.

Read these strong letters from grateful women which have been published:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— (First Letter.)

"In looking over your list of ailments your medicine cures Tumors. I have been to a doctor and he tells me I have a tumor. I will be more than grateful if you can cure me."—Fannie Fox, Bradford, Pa.

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:— (Second Letter.)

"I take this pleasure in congratulating you on the success I have had with your wonderful medicine.

"Eighteen months ago my periods came on me every other week, and I was permitted to a thorough examination by a physician, and was told that I had a tumor and would have to undergo an operation.

"I noticed your advertisement of your ailments and decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, and after taking five bottles as directed, the tumor is entirely gone. I can again feel like a woman."

For over half a century members of this firm have been engaged in manufacturing Woollens. Experimenting, studying, learning more about making blankets all the time. So our blankets are constructed to stand the test and are absolutely unshrinkable. Our blankets are the warmest for the least weight, because we use only the soft silky fibres of the wool. Our blankets have no "cotton" in them, because the wool is skilfully carded, finely spun and closely woven. They are finished with a short soft nap which does not come off. Do not buy blankets with a lofty nap if you want it to wear or wash well.

Ask your merchant for our goods. If not in stock send direct to our mills and get the home-made quality.

Held by County What About It?

Governor of Peterboro Jail Refuses to Surrender Prisoner.

Peterborough, Ont., Jan. 20.—There is a lively conflict between the city and county authorities. Governor Nesbitt, of the county jail, refused to hand over Charles Burke to the city authorities on a charge of committing a boisterous disturbance on the police courts.

Burke was remanded a few days ago on a charge of assaulting P. C. Newhall, and was to have appeared Tuesday. However, previous to the sitting of this information, another charge of robbery at the point of a revolver had been laid against him under the county jurisdiction. Mr. Nesbitt claimed that he had no right to give up Burke to the city authorities, as he was being held by the county. The outcome was that Magistrate Dumbleton ordered Burke to be held only on the robbery charge.

Stock and Grain Course For Farmers of Victoria

Free Five Days' Course, Jan. 28th to Feb. 1st.—Visit of Professor G. E. Day Will be Welcomed by the Stock Breeders of the Entire District.

Professor G. E. Day is perhaps the most widely known and most popular live stock man in Canada. For fifteen years he has been in charge of the Animal Husbandry Department of the Ontario Agricultural College, during that time he has done a great work for the live stock industry of Canada. By lectures, articles in the press, and in stock judging classes Professor Day has been a leader in developing our great live stock industry, and in inducing our farmers to breed the required type of bacon in 1905 and 1906 Professor Day and his assistant, Professor Arkell, trained the winning team in the annual students' judging competition. This year Professor Day and his assistant, Professor Watson, again trained the winning team. This victory goes to Professor Day, for 1907, the honors goes among the College Live Stock men of America.

During five days, January 28th to February 1st, the farmers, and farmers' sons, of this district will have an opportunity of hearing Professor Day. Many of the finest animals within a twenty-five mile radius of Lindsay will be placed before the students, and Professor Day will judge the animals, and then Professor Day will address the students, and give reasons for his placing. All the meetings of this course are free, and this is an excellent opportunity to secure a large amount of information, in a short time, and at little cost.

A detailed programme of the course appears in another column. Reduced rates have been secured on the railways and every effort should be made to take full advantage of this course.

Monster Vessel Not Big Enough

Lusitania Crowded on Outward Voyage —Left 450 Passengers Behind.

New York, Jan. 15.—(Special).—The big Canadier Lusitania is not big enough to carry away all the travelers who crowded her. Although next, next in size to the biggest ship in the world, she sailed Saturday with an accommodation taken, and 450 passengers who wanted to go were left on shore. Many had bought passage tickets from agents in the West. One hundred and fifty wanted to go second class, and three hundred steerage.

The Lusitania carried 350 first class passengers, 250 second, class and 1,500 third.

THE ANARCHIST.

This is what the governor of Kansas said about the barroom in his inaugural address:

Not a single good thing can be said of the barroom.

It is the enemy of everywhere an enemy to society and to good government.

It is the enemy of the home.

It is a promoter of strife.

It is a fruitful source of pauperism.

It is the devil's best recruiting ramp.

It creates more burdens of taxation upon the people than any other agency in existence.

No human interest is sacred to it.

It voluntarily obeys no law.

It desecrates the Sabbath and refuses to close its doors on this holy day except when a policeman with eighteen officers from some courageous mayor is on that beat.

It defies the authority of the law, and defiance of the law against selling to minors.

It makes day dawn with its profanities and night hideous with its orgies.

It is everywhere and everywhere an anarchist.

Finger Caught And Was Crushed

Painful Accident at the Madison Williams Foundry.

Evening Post of Jan. 21

While working at one of the circular saws in the Madison Williams foundry yesterday, Frank Morris managed to get his finger caught in a revolving saw and it was cut off. Remember was so badly squashed that it had to be amputated at the first joint.

Frank certainly has great fortitude and nerves, for he laid the finger down when the doctor amputated the finger, and would not go out under the influence of an anæsthetic.

Average Farmer Is Not Honest

So Says Prof. Dean When Speaking About Cheese Industry.

Woodstock, Jan. 17.—At the concluding meeting of the 41st convention of the Western Ontario Dairymen's Association, Prof. Dean, principal of the Guelph Dairy School, in his address, said that the average of farmers in certain sections amounted almost to a crime. For those who knew what good cheese is, that it might be, every pound of cheese his factory shipped away was adding to the loss of Canada, and most necessary to the growth of phur life. There is a great deterioration in the quality of new handling cheese factories in western Ontario. Due to the fact that polygonic salt acts are not paid and there is too much of the "every man for himself" element in it. The present system puts a premium on dishonesty.

AVERAGE MAN DISHONEST

The average man, in my judgment, is dishonest, and would so soon with the pump as not," said Prof. Dean.

Farmers are making their cheese too hard for old country use, instead of making it soft enough to keep, and record more and more for strength instead of making and feeding foreigners come to this country.

GIVE NATURE A CHANCE.

The strongest minds have gotten their inspiration direct from Nature. Nature is the great teacher of mankind. We must obey Nature for all our needs. In the remote ages, when man was the surgeon of the Japanese navy and army he was a great man, and would heal more rapidly and with better success if left to Nature. Nature's remedies were the water which had been boiled and thus sterilized—then cooled and covered up with clean linen—and carefully dressed with the injured part. The methods resulted in the loss of only 32 out of 687 men treated in a month. Nature's remedies are. It is only from lack of observing Nature's laws that most of us suffer at one time or another from indigestion, impure blood and a general feeling of weakness. Our remedy lies in Nature's laboratory. Many in the front ranks of the medical profession have gone to the aid of many American physicians who have been completely treated will supply a health-giving tonic.

Many years ago a physician who had an extensive practice among the afflicted made a startling departure from the usual methods of his contemporaries in medicine. He went straight to Nature for the cure of the ailments of humanity. He found that the remedy was a simple combination of herbs, which cured the loss of appetite, pale or pimply skin, and the feeling of languor and weakness. He found that the bark of the Black Cherry tree, the root of the Mandrake, Stone root, Queen's root, Bloodroot and Golden Seal root, made into a scientific, non-alcoholic extract by the use of glycerine, made from pure olive and tonic. The refreshing influence of this extract of Golden Seal root, received at once by the patient—has proved a great help to the body burn brighter and stronger, and by the use of glycerine the tissue publish which, otherwise may be taken system. Voices Carried by Telegraph Wires

Operator at Keene Hears Conversation in Lindsay Despatcher's Office.

The following from Saturday's Peterboro Review will interest some of our readers;

A correspondent from Keene writes the following, telling of a peculiar phenomenon that came under his experience the past week:

"I was at Keene G.T.R. station yesterday and witnessed something that I thought was remarkable and I believe unheard of.

Sitting in the operator's office I heard the voices of conversation in telephone. The operator told me he often heard it and that some times the sound was plainer than at other times. He called my attention to the fact that it was distinctly heard when using the wires of the Bell telegraph instruments, and he claims to recognize the voice of Chief Despatcher Hodgson of Lindsay frequently. He doesn't know whether he is talking in his office in Lindsay or over the telephone on Belleville line, which also strung on the same poles as the telegraph wires.

Out at any rate he heard Kingsley's voice from the telegraph instrument and Mr. Hodgson's voice as he heard it, as have several other parties."

NOTICE FARMERS.

We beg to advise our patrons and farmers in general that we have been prepared to give out seed stock and are booking orders for the same for next season for the growing of Pansy and other Peas, and we respectfully request those who grow, and have not already left their orders for growing seed peas, to call at our office at once and book orders.

Owing to the drought and part failure of the crops in Canada and Europe, we are without seed of any kind, and at present date we are receiving more orders than ever before at this time of the year and many special varieties are getting short and intending growers had better call at our office at once and book their orders, otherwise while we have the stock and the varieties we will be unable to supply.

The prices for 1908 have advanced on many varieties of seed.

LINDSAY 7—WHITBY 1.

Evening Post of Jan. 18

The game was one-sided, but the play was interesting. Whitby fought every inch of the game. Their forward work was fine, but their defence weakened after 20 minutes' hard play.

Lindsay's defence was all that could be desired, but the line was lamentably deficient. Whitby's rushes and combination work were almost invariably broken up by Lindsay's Kopf. A. Blanchard was about the only one who seemed to make any impression on Ghent. Sullivan has a tendency, however, to let himself be drawn out when the play starts from the end. He would be more effective if he would play closer to his goal.

Randell wasn't off the ice last night. That's three games hard running, and only once this year. He played a good game, but should watch his toby to centre in front of goal. Kopf played fair, but both he and Randell neglect the corners. When they should be in the corners they lay back and let the other fellows get a start with it to compel the centre ice forwards to give.

Lane, at centre, worked hard, but has not the "knack" of scoring—in fact, the centre seems to be the weak spot on the team. Stedman didn't seem to get his usual game, and at any time it will be noticed that he plays a kind of over-protective combination game, leaving about all the aggressive work to be done by the rover, and that makes Lane's work still harder. It will take a heavy man of the ball-dog variety in centre to make Lindsay a real dangerous team in the scoring line. At present against a good defence our forwards seem to get enough goals to win a leather medal.

Newton was fines for 20 3-4 minutes, and stopped some hot ones. Kopf and Sully played a steady defence game, which could not be improved much. Kopf's rushes were a feature. He scored 3 goals and figured in a couple more. Stedman placed. Scoring: Goal 1, Randell 1.

Referee Hallock gave entire satisfaction—in fact Lindsay crowds seem to think he can do no wrong, although last night Lindsay certainly had to play a carefulgame or get the force.

BOOM IN COLLEGIATE SPORTS.

The Collegiate intend to make hum in hockey this winter. A schedule of inter-form games is being drawn up, as well as a schedule for picked teams. These picked teams will include the best players in the Collegiate, and will be selected by result. They will play off between four and six o'clock almost every evening when the weather is good, no students will be allowed to skate after supper, when they should be at their studies. The teachers are taking an active interest in the games, as they believe—with most persons versed in school problems—that the students will do better in their studies if encouraged to take good, healthy, strenuous exercise to pull up their bodies.

During the last few years sports in the school have gradually died away, the students seemingly have lost interest, both in their games and in their studies, and it is encouraging to see things again beginning to pick up under sensible and guidance of the staff and school board.

LINDSAY 10 — PENELON FALLS 5

Evening Post of Jan. 16

Things looked pretty black for the Lindsay intermediates at half-time last night, in their friendly game of hockey with a Penelon Falls team. Spectators began to wonder if Peterboro Whitby had dropped out, and had given our line-up the game on the strength of last year's reputation. The Intermediates didn't play the least pretense of playing "comy" and some of them! couldn't even hang onto the puck when they had it.

WHITCROFT AND CROWLEY.

Edmonton defeated Strathcona on January 10 by the score of 6 to 4. Edmonton has won three cup-tied games this week and five so far this season.

The Edmonton Journal says: Early in the game Whitcroft had his shoulder badly damaged, but went on without a murmur, and it was not until two minutes of time that he, on receiving another blow, was forced to rest a moment. He was game to the core and was still playing when the bell rang.

Great praise is also bestowed upon Crowley for his strong work.

A CONDUCTOR PROTEST!

Port Hope Guide, It is rumored around town that Coburg have protested Hennick and Sinnott on the age question, and Bowden on the grounds of professionalism. The local secretary has received no notification, and they are not inclined to hum much about the rumor. The players are all eligible, and if Coburg feels like squandering money to find this out, all well and good.

PETERBOROUGH LOST

In a G. H. A. game at Whitby last Monday the locals trimmed the Peterborough Strathconas by the big score, 15-3. The team in poor shape and good playing was rendered impossible, so the two teams endeavored to even up by rough work. Several were injured on each side. The Whitby team had been strengthened since the game with Lindsay.

The Berlin Dutchmen were turned down Friday night by the Brantford pro. bunch, 9-0. The game is referred as one of the best of the season.

The Bankers and some friends played a game of Crown Saturday evening for a friendly game of hockey with that village. The score was 16-3 in favor of the Bankers.

Midland put it over Penetang last Friday night at the former town. Half time score 6-4 in favor of Penetang, but in first half of second round their opponents run away with them and won out—14 to 8.

Too many rooters spoil the silence.

It's a long game that has no penalties.

All are not goals that go into the net. (It depended on the goal umpire)

It's a poor player that can't skate a little faster than he can.

A faint kick never spoiling, a goal in time saves overtime.

Timekeepers were designed for.

As you make your ice so shall you skate on it.

A rolling puck gathers no goals.

A player is known by the money he gets.

A good referee turneth away kicks.

The best made shoes of both wing were gang aft a glee.

You cannot gather hockey players off pool tables.

A rooter and his money are soon covered.

Trotting

Toronto World: At Lindsay, yesterday Johnny K. finished fourth in the first heat in 2.22, and second in the next in 2.24. "Thus he was third in seven minutes better and went and won the race. Those who know Jessie will stand some explanation.

Telegram: Oh, yes, the object of horse racing is to improve mankind and friend, but a beast of a horse goes back ten years to show that though horse racing has developed wonderfully the horses were just as good then as they are now. Seems to have been an oversight somewhere.

Curling

JUST HIS STYLE.

In describing the play in the single rink competition for the Gladstone trophy, the Toronto Telegram says:

"Probably the best game of the evening was between Tom Hanson's Caledonians and Harstone's students. Tom took an early lead on the gymnastics of his lightweight opponent, but the smile never came off Harstone's face. He just kept plugging along, encouraging his players, and incidentally playing a great game himself. Gradually he hauled down the Scotsman, till on the eleventh end, when Tom tried to draw, and was a foot too strong, Harstone counted five and gave his men one, and won."

For two or three ends Harstone had his advantage, but Tom again drew level, and in the end the game hinging in the balance, by a beautiful wick-edge shot, Harstone shot, and counted the only three of the game. Then you felt that it was all over. Final score, Harstone 16, Hanson 10.

But don't run away with the idea these students are novices in the game. They play exactly their game in a style that indicates early training, while Harstone as skip, builds up an end that would do credit to any crack in the game. Bruce Hogarth, at second, is especially worthy of mention as a player.

Odds and Ends of Sport

AGREES WITH JOHN L.

(To Sporting Editor The News)

Lindsay, Jan. 18—Sir,—I only thank John L. Sullivan for his grand advice re temperance to young men. His life should be an object lesson to all aspiring athletes to live a moral and a temperate life. I can say that the use of liquor or any other drink of intoxicating liquor is unnecessary in training. I have training for long distance walking, running, jumping, wrestling and boxing matches, and for continuous distance walking, with my dog, the greatest feats of endurance.

When you think of a man standing for over four hours without sitting down and winning clubs all the time, you can understand the great condition a man requires to be in. I never went in for strong drink or smoking. I agree with what Mr. John L. Sullivan says re this harmful effects of drink.—Yours respectfully, ROBT. J. LEAKE.

Donald Dinnie, the great strongman athlete, sold me in his day, years ago, that John L. Sullivan was the ideal of a pugilist, and the most active man for his weight he ever saw, walk 300 at one time to run 100 yards in 10 1-4 seconds.

LANKY BOB'S CONCEIT

Here's a timely article about Bob Fitzsimmons from the pen of the sporting editor of the Toronto World.

"There is nothing so pathetic as an old man who has lived and died but want to see. Such a case is Robert Fitzsimmons, playing the boards at the Star this week. In a speech, Fitz states that he has had his day, and was but for his timely use of Zam-Buk, he says, he would have lost his fingers on a rusty piece of tin and died on them. It became so serious, but in two days blood poisoning set in and my fingers became so swollen, discolored and inflamed, I was alarmed and began using one ointment after another, but was not benefited. I was in a state of misery, when a friend advised me to try Zam-Buk. That I did, and Zam-Buk soon put me right. The inflammation, and in one week the wound was nicely healed. Since then I have had no hesitation in the house but Zam-Buk. I find no greater foil for my speedy cure than I unhesitatingly give my testimonial to the merits of Zam-Buk."

Zam-Buk cures Cuts, Bruises, Chapped Hands, Chilblains, Cracks, Sore Heels, Chilblains, Eczema, Running Sores, Sore Throat, Bad Chest, Hoarseness, Piles, Inflamed or Bleeding, Bad Legs, Inflamed Patches, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Abscesses and all diseased, injured and irritated conditions of the skin. Of all druggists and stores, 50c., or post paid upon receipt of price, from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. 50c. a box, 6 Boxes $2.50.

Bob Fitzsimmons, who is booked for a week's engagement at the Star, Toronto, 3, to remain ten days. Then they will go direct to Vicksburg, Miss., on March 15, to stay until March 24. After that the Cole will play exhibition games in Montgomery, Atlanta, Chattanooga, Birmingham, Memphis, Nashville, Evansville, Terre Haute, Fort Wayne, Indianapolis and return.

MAY BE A GENTLEMAN.

John L. Sullivan claims that a professional prize fighter may be a gentleman. He says: "Prize fighting is not so brutal as football. Why, in twelve months, thirty-two men were killed playing football.

In all years of prize-fighting, not since it was started, in 1700, have there been thirty-two killed.

"The fists are nature's weapons. Fighting has come down from the old Roman times. The women folks used to attend these contests, and, when a certain point had been reached, they would hold their thumbs down—you have been the pictures?

"But the English really introduced fighting—they framed up the rules and put it on the present basis.

"There is no reason why a prize fighter should not be a gentleman as much as a banker, a broker or anything else, and there are gentlemen in the ring as well as in any other calling in life."

EDUCATION DIVERSIFIED

The president of the Toronto University advised the young men to stick steadily to their studies. But the age question and Bowden on the amateur question contain the announcement that the university will hockey and curling matches, teas, concerts and dances galore. The education of the varsity graduate has to do with his heels as well as his head.

TWAS EVER THUS.

Hamilton Times: The prize of the ladies' pin that was sent to George Dixon's funeral might have prolonged his life and made a useful colored lady out of him. Many an African mirror ostentatiously sent $25 worth of poisoned to his bier who would not have contributed a shot, and counted the only three of the game. Then you felt that it was all over. Final score, Harstone 16, Hanson 10.

Blended Flour is Now Popular

Its Increasing Use Will Mean Many Thousands Yearly for Farmers.

Some of our farmers do not seem to realize the importance of the success of Ontario millers in blending Ontario and Manitoba wheat. In a word, it means a growing demand for our blended flours, a steady market for Ontario wheat, better prices to the farmers for his wheat, and better prices for bran and shorts.

All of these results hinge upon results are due solely to the efforts of our millers. They first proved to their own satisfaction that blended flours were better than flours made of a single variety of wheat. They proved, by repeated tests, that a blend of Ontario wheat and a little western wheat, made better bread than Manitoba Hard patent flour, and also made better pies, cake and pastry than Ontario spring flour. This is true because blended flours contain the good qualities of both kinds of wheat.

One of the largest bakeries in Toronto tried a blended flour for making "homemade bread," and in a short time they were working night and day in a vain endeavor to supply the demand. In the Maritime Provinces, blended flours have driven the Western flours out of the markets in some instances.

The millers have done more than their part in trying to prove to people that blended flours are best. It is doubtful if our farmers realize how much they can help in increasing the price of Ontario wheat to the old figure. What our farmers should do is to stop using Western wheat flour and use only Ontario blended flours. This would create such a demand for Ontario wheat that the millers would soon go up, and our farmers of course would get all the benefit.

Not all this would help our dairymen and stockmen. The prime cores of bran and shorts selling for such ridiculously high prices, has been that our local millers were grinding little stuff, and enough of it, there were none of these feeds for sale at the mills. They had to be brought from Manitoba and Western and by the time the freight was added to the mice price which the Western dealer demanded, the price was out of all proportion to what it should be. By buying blended flours and keeping our mills running to their full capacity, there will be plenty of bran and shorts to sell at very much less than they cost to-day.

Horticulturists Choose Officers

Society Has Large Membership and is Doing a Good Work.

Evening Post of Jan. 21

The annual meeting of Lindsay Horticultural Society was held last evening in the Council chamber. The attendance was fairly large, but not as large as it should be considering all the deep interest taken by our citizens generally in the appearance of their premises, which work which has been fostered by the Society in every possible way.

The following officers were elected for 1908:

Robert Chambers—President, (re-elected).

A Cathro—Vice-President.

J. J. Frampton—Sec.-Treasurer, (re-elected).

Auditors—Jos. Keith and Robt. Carroll.

Directors—C. Hughan, F. Frampton, Dr. Blanchard, M. H. Allen, Jas. Hyatt, A. McCosh, Dr. Irwin, Mrs. G. H. Milne and Mrs. H. Whitside.

The Society commenced, 1907 with a balance of $30.69 in the treasury, and closed with $45.75 was hand. The receipts were $175.75 made up at $1 per head, and the Legislative grant was $81. In all the expenditures were $175.75 leaving the balance. The expenditures was an amount of $75.75 for the children's flower shows, $53.65 for prizes and personals for competitors, and the balance and plants purchased for free distribution cost $37.35. The total receipts were $175.75.

The Society has been well officered in the West, and this accounts for its good work done.

In Mr. F. J. Frampton, the enthusiastic secretary-treasurer, the member has an official whose heart is in the work, and it would be difficult to replace him.

Bless Their Innocent Hearts!

The Haliburton cor of the Bob, independently sow the 20th century and still two young men aged about 25 years, who drove in from the 6th and 7th concessions on Saturday, to go to the camp, had never seen a train in their lives, so got up early on Monday morning to see they flyer go. They were down early enough to see the engine come out of the roundhouse, and when it stopped, one of the young fellows said, "Why! it has stuck." The other fellow went out better. "My word. Will, would it not be a dandy to draw logs."

An Alberta Farmer Writes Concerning Last Season's Conditions.

Morningside, Alta.,
Jan. 13th, 1908.

Dear Sir,—In your paper of Jan. 3rd there is an item headed, "Too Wet is Growing." It says wheat is selling on the street at 80c. per bus., oats 35c. The writer of that piece never visited this part of Alberta this past season.

It was a very late spring to start with, and on the 25th of June there was the worst hail storm I ever saw. There were pieces of ice 1 1-2 inches in diameter, damaging the crop considerable. Sept. 5th was the worst cold day of the whole summer—next morning the ground was covered with snow. The grain was under snow for eight days to the depth of nine inches. This made harvesting very difficult.

Winter wheat is selling for 60c. per bus., oats 24c. per bus.

Here are some of the prices of groceries we have to pay; Prunes, per lb., 17 1-2c.; dried apples, per lb. 17 1-2c.; green apples, per lb., 15c.; smoked bacon, per lb., 23c. Other things are on the same basis. It is not all sunshine here, as some of the people in the east think it is.—Yours, etc.,

WM. H. CHAPMAN.

P. S.—When oats bring 35c. per bus. I will be able to renew my subscription.

SETTLEMENT OF THE WEST.

The manner in which the West is being populated is probably best shown by the number of homestead entries and the number of acres passing into personal ownership. A comparison of the work of the present Government with what was done in Conservative times will reflect great credit on the sagacity and enterprise of the present Reform Government. The following table will be read with interest:

Statement of Homestead Entries — Five years ending 30 June, 1902, 41,883,000 acres.
Five years ending 30th June, 1907, 199,212; 29,831,920 acres.

The above statement shows what the policy of the department has accomplished within the past five years, and what substantial gains have been made in securing permanent settlers who will add greatly to the wealth of the Dominion.

For purposes of comparison, let us take ten years previous to the Conservative power out of office, in 1896, and compare what they accomplished with the result of the next ten years under Liberal administration.

Ten years ending 31 December, 1896; 32,000; 5,126,000 acres.
Ten years ending 31 December, 1907, (12,815; 27,522,400 acres.

Surely there cannot be better evidence put forward to justify a policy than is furnished by these figures.

BRITAIN'S SEA POWER.

Only a little while ago we had heard little or nothing of the Dreadnought class of battleships. The launching of the first one is recalled like something that happened yesterday. Yet, built or building, Great Britain to-day has a squadron of these monsters. The keel-plate of the fifth and greatest of them, the St. Vincent, was laid at Portsmouth on January 31, and within two years she will be at sea. This progress is of much significance. It confirms a lead in the matter of naval power which no other nation can overcome unless some extraordinary event paralyzes Britain's building program. Ships of the Dreadnaught class, completed, completing, or laid down, are as follows:

	Displacement Tons	Indicated Horse-Power
Dreadnaught (Portsmouth built)	17,000	23,000
Bellerophon (Portsmouth, completing)	18,600	23,000
Temeraire (Devonport, completing)	18,600	23,000
Superb (Elswick, completing)	18,600	23,000
St. Vincent (Portsmouth, laid down)	19,000	24,000

The latest is the greatest. Just as the Bellerophon, Temeraire and Superb were improvements upon the Dreadnaught, so St. Vincent is an improved Bellerophon. Her tonnage displacement will considerably exceed 19,000, making her the biggest ship under construction in the British navy.

A naval writer notes that a notable departure from the Dreadnought design is in the arrangement of the four turrets. The forward and aft the two will be elevated to give a clear discharge directly aft over the roof of the afternoot barbette, thus giving a stern fire of eight 12-inch guns compared with the Dreadnoughts six. The St. Vincent will carry an improved heavy gun with heavier mountings, but her main armor will be eleven-inch Krupp steel, as in the Dreadnought. The new ship is to have a speed of twenty-one knots over a sea course, and to derive her extra 1,500 tons of dead weight through the water her turbines will develop a horse-power of about 24,000 indicated horse-power. The speed, considering the size and design of the vessel, is terrific.

Britain has its work cut out for it, in conflict over fiscal and social questions, a tremendous burden of taxation and many other distractions; but whatever the talk goes on and party succeeds party, the hammers in the ship yards rise and fall unceasingly. Britain, whatever else may befall, will keep the sea. The self-governing Colonies have their own problems, but the problem of Imperial sea powers is also theirs. And they must look to it.—St. John Telegraph.

Fenelon Falls---"The Beautiful"

Gay Doings at the Hub of North Victoria Just at Present.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church held a basket social last Monday evening at the residence of Mr. W. B. Jordan, a short distance from the village. Everything pressed to conspire to make it a grand success. In the first place the weather was ideal; secondly, the sleighing was good; thirdly, the houses which opened its hospitable doors was just the house; and fourthly and lastly, but not linally, the belles came in out in large numbers. Belles with baskets and baskettes belles; but lest I get a welcome at the home on the hill. A couple of large sleighs were kept busy for over an hour between the house and Mr. Jos. McFarland's store, where numbers were assembled waiting to drive out to the scene of the festivities. Shortly after 8 o'clock a programme was rendered which was as follows: Chairman's address, Mr. Lewis Dayman, instrumental, Miss Nora Wilson; duet, Misses Grace McFarland and Lilian Corbett; reading, Miss Ella Johnston; solo, Mrs. Montgomery; solo, Miss Della Dayman. A novel feature of the entertainment was a limerick contest. Each person present was handed a piece of paper wherein was written the first four lines of a verse looking the last line, which he or she was supposed to supply. Of course, your correspondent, would not be hard too, but do you think he could think of a suitable line to save his life? He could, to a half of it though, but it was no good. He wooed the muse in vain. She had deserted him for that evening; no doubt disgusted at the presence of so many rivals; of the belles, belles, belles to the right of him, belles to the left of him chatted and smiled at him, nearly as numbered.

'Ho was a man dismayed,
Yes, he was sore afraid,
Lest they should laugh at him.
Laugh if he blundered;
He was an 'ideo rak,'
Terrib, the look; man.
He took the prize, but then
Nobody wondered.

Not when they heard the last line:

A Fenelon lady of nineteen-nought-eight
Was very anxious to change her state;
She put an ad. in The Star,
And then came from afar
A W. Terrill as says-forty gall.

Which goes to prove, that it pays to advertise. So the girls need not bother their pretty heads any longer about the best way to propose. Just do as the above limerick lady did and if all the eligible males as good time as A. W. did the year 1908 will be a year to be remembered. The list of baskets, mentioned by Mr. Moore, was quite exciting. Everyone who has attended a basket social and entered into the spirit of the occasion, does not need to be told just why. The baskets were not very numerous considering the manner of the fair sex present; but all those who did bring them certainly sported another time or pains to make them attractive. There were some elegant confections in millinery effects on the exteriors of most of them and if the exterior was a fair index of the contents, then the purchasers thereof were to be congratulated. The prices ranged from 60 cents to $2.50, and altogether the sum realized from baskets was about $26. There was no excitement, except in the lady who came without baskets, on did not buy. The receipts altogether amounted to about $40.

The members of the St. James' Literary Society drove out to Beech wood Farm, the residence of Mr. Alex Thurston, on Monday evening, where they were most hospitably entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Thurston and their family. The business of the society must have been attended to, a programme was rendered in which were the following members: Address of welcome, Mr. Thurston; French reading, Miss Edith Hand; duet, Misses Marjory Austin and M. Wilson; solo, Miss Chadwick; and after sent time was spent, in games and conversation, after which refreshments were served by Mrs. Thurston. Rev. Mr. French, at the close of his address to the members moved that a vote of thanks be tendered Mr. and Mrs. Thurston for their kindness, which was duly carried unanimously. Two sleigh loads from Fenelon falls and one from Coboconk made up the party. Who knows the road to Thurston's?

Poultry and Pet Stock Show
A Splendid List of Entries

The Exhibition. Held This Week in the Market Building Under Auspices of Lindsay Poultry and Pet Stock Association, a Huge Success.

Evening Post of Jan. 21

The officers in charge of the Lindsay Poultry and Pet Stock Association were working like beavers yesterday afternoon, last night and today getting things in shape for the annual exhibition. To-day was advertised as the "opener," but so much remained to be done at noon to-day that the management did not expect the market room to be in shape for the reception of visitors until this evening.

Although the management were granted the use of the Council chamber, they have generously taken note of the objections made by some of the aldermen, and decided to use the market room only. As a result the room is unduly crowded, but the exhibitors are making the best of things by doubling the number of birds in some of the coops. The crowding will make it very difficult work for the judges, but Mr. Trew may be depended upon to do his task right, and he will be the last to solicitus to be surrounded, seeing that it is a matter of conscience with Mr. Trew.

The number of entries will closely approach last year's total—1045, and in quality—will outclass the birds then shown. The sight of these magnificent fowl will come as a revelation to many, and should serve as a spur and incentive to poultry raisers who have given redoubtedly to the improvement of their breeds.

SOME EXHIBITORS

Among the foreign exhibitors are; H. S. Duby & Son Midland.
J. E. Webster, Oshawa.
Geo. Kelly, Peterboro.
Thos. Boyce, Toronto.
J. G. Waite, Wicklow.
Thos. Rice, Whitby.
E. L. McIlwrell, Little Britain.
Hayes & Marshall, Cambray.
Lumley & Varcoe, Bowmanville.
J. J. Cole, Bowmanville.
S. Snowdon, Bowmanville.
J. J. Wilson, Oshawa.
W. R. Knight, Bowmanville.
All Robinson, Norwood.
C. W. Jeffers, Bobcaygeon.
M. L. Culbert, Oakwood.
J. B. Hope, Vitrina.
Geo. Ward, Omemee.
A. E. Donaghy, Colborne.
H. T. Lush, Peterborough.
Gordon King, Stouffville.

Among the principal local exhibitors are; Messrs. Reilly & Neelan, J. Orlefly, F. W. Sutcliffe, Geo. Carter, Alf. G. Calvert.

Our citizens should consider it a duty to visit the exhibition, and we guarantee that all who are impelled to do so by that or any other motive will depart satisfied and pleased. Too often we permit ourselves to be lacking in knowledge which is easily gained, and we cannot learn too much about an industry that is worth many thousands of dollars annually to the farmers of Victoria County.

During the day many visitors made the round of the corridors between the coops, and the invariable expressions were couched in complimentary terms. Many of the Epworth Leagues in town found time after dinner to-day to visit the show.

List of prize winners will be published next week.

OMEMEE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Quite a number of our citizens attended Lindsay Assizes.

We have a large number of High school pupils, about one hundred in all. Many from a distance.

Weekly union prayer meetings are being held every Tuesday night by the Methodist and Presbyterian churches week of prayer. Much interest and awakening is being felt.

Much surprise and regret is expressed at the resignation of our new mayor, R. Grundy, besides Councillors Griffin and Carey. Disqualification is the cause. A new election is to be held.

Local Option is being talked about, especially since the letters bearing on the subject appeared in the Lindsay and Peterboro papers, taken from St. Luke's church paper, Peterboro. Although the facts are all right, yet those temperance people who signed that those on the Indian list for Local Option, did it for the best, and not to injure Mr. Beatty, hotelkeeper.

Mr. J. J. Lamb's new house will soon be occupied, and one of the most attractive residences in the County of Victoria.

Many will attend the Lindsay Poultry Show.

R. Courtenay & Son's saw mill is getting in a large quantity of custom sawing. There has been quite an addition put to the mill.

Minerals From North Country

Postmaster at Pusey, on I. B. & O. R'y Forwards Specimens.

We are in receipt of a number of specimens of ore sent to Mr. James Shea, of Tower P. O., in the county of Hastings. These were taken from a mine two miles from Wilberforce, on the line of the I. B. & O. R'y. One specimen is a lump of pure graphite, and in almost all the specimens there is a sparkling of a rich mineral; this is a valuable substance which is largely mined in Canada, and is used for lead pencils, also for lubrication. There are some beautiful calcite crystals in which are mixed specks of an ore resembling iron and sulphur; the red stains in the calcite are also an evidence of iron. There is no doubt but there is a considerable of rich mineral in our northern district.

Beyond doubt the north country, and more especially the section in which Tupsey is situated, is rich in minerals of commercial value, and some of these days the miners of our hidden wealth will awaken to the fact.

AN ENGLISHMAN IN CANADA.

A young Englishman, who, for obvious reasons, shall be nameless, landed in Canada early last October. His worldly possessions consisted chiefly of a determination to succeed in the land of his adoption. In the course of a month he had found himself an opening in a Western city. The berth does not carry a princely salary, but it gives him a start, and, what is more, he is laying by two-thirds of his small in- This man deserves to succeed, and he will. At the end of three months' residence in the West he writes that dirty, noisy, over-populated London can go ——for a time. Give him the snow-capped mountains, the running waters and above all, God's fresh air.

He continues; "Little as I have seen of your great country, with all its natural resources, I am convinced that it is a land flowing with milk and honey. I feel, however, it is too often forgotten that cows must be milked and bees looked after. Hence the frequent termination of an advertisement. 'No English need apply.' I am strongly of the opinion that the attitude of the average Canadian towards the average Englishman is not quite what it should be. Still, I suppose the Englishman has sown the bad seeds, and, as is so often the case in the affairs of life, the effect is out of all proportion to the cause. For my own part, I am determined to show the Canadian that there is room for him and me, and if we are not good friends, then the fault shall not be mine."

The Toronto News, in quoting the above letter, recently explained that it did so because it reflects the sentiments of a newly arrived and educated young Englishman regarding Canada, because these sentiments will help to set his class right before Canadians, and because the words may prove a stimulus to thousands of his countrymen who are trying to carve out careers in this new land. He probably gets near to the truth when he observes in regard to the bad name borne by another class of Englishmen that the effect is likely out of all proportion to the cause. The type of Old Countryman represented by the correspondent may be safely set down as absolutely the most desirable accession to our population obtainable, for besides his determination to succeed, he brings with him certain old world ideas to which the often somewhat crude inhabitants of a new land are more or less strangers.

THE TWO-THIRDS HANDICAP.

The liquor men have tremendous reason for thankfulness to Mr. Whitney for his three-fifths limitation on local option, remarks the Montreal Daily Witness. They ought to hold a prayer meeting or whatever they do on such occasions, and return thanks for their salvation. Most of the ninety-five places that voted on local option on Jan. 6th showed a majority for the abolition of the bar; yet most of thees places were saved to the liquor interest by Mr. Whitney's provision that two liquor votes should count for as much as three temperance votes. At Beaverton, for instance, there were a hundred and fifty votes for the abolition of the saloon and only a hundred and eight in its favor; yet by those eight votes over the hundred liquor still reigns in Beaverton. There were a good many municipalities which voted at the same time on the municipal control of power plants, the vote involving a phrase of the supreme economic issue between individualism and socialism. In these votes one vote for party control exactly balanced one vote for company control. But in the question of whether the people's interest or the liquor interest should prevail two votes for liquor balanced three votes against it. The liquor interest, with its unparalleled electioneering machinery, had only to drum up forty votes for sixty that came voluntarily forward to crush it. Mr. Whitney may be right in his view that in order to have assurance of sufficient temperance pub- public opinion to support the enforcement of the law the sixty per cent. requirement is not too much; but he has certainly created a condition of things in which a very large proportion of the municipalities by majority want what by his fiat they cannot have. There is thus a sufficient vote disaffected towards his attitude to turn a very large number of electors against him. Of course, how far this adverse judgment may be counterbalanced by the superior effectiveness of barroom support on election day is an element which Mr. Whitney can estimate better than we can. The recent political history of Ontario has shown some painful surrenders to the all-pervading activity. However virtuous and patriotic Mr. Whitney's intentions may be in demanding the sixty per cent. vote, the people will simply assume that he politically values the liquor support more than that of the temperance element. With this estimate of him ingrained in the mind of a public, balked in its efforts after reform, it is a question whether Mr. Whitney will think it wise to face the people again with this blemish on his banner.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The United States census figures show that there has been a progressively more rapid increase in insanity than in population in the United States. There were 40,492 inmates of asylums in 1880; 74,028 in 1890, and 150,151 in 1900, says the Philadelphia Record. These figures, however, may only prove that the State is looking better after those thus afflicted.

Fancy ! There were 198,075 pounds of butter imported into Canada in five months, some of it from Denmark, some from Ireland, some from New Zealand. What a chance for those fiscal theorists who are always claiming that we should spend our money at home. In this case we couldn't and would only have had to get on with bare bread, but the argument sounds true.

Montreal Herald; A Toronto architect has been saying that a panic in a departmental store would produce the worst horror conceivable. The stairways and elevators, he says, are quite incapable of handling the crowds sometimes found there, and the floors are so big as to give the rushes against the rails of the stairways tremendous force. It isn't a cheering picture, but it is worth thinking about.

That newspapers are, to a certain extent, responsible for the advertisements they publish, is the opinion of that thoughtful journal, the Hamilton Times. It says; There are certain legal restraints that they cannot disregard. They cannot publish indecent advertisements without running foul of the law, nor can they injure the reputation of another through their advertising columns. But within legal bounds they are free to use their own judgment as to what they shall insert and what they shall keep out. Sometimes a newspaper will prefer to lose considerable money rather than give an insertion to an advertisement which it believes to be a fake, although it would be quite legal to publish it. Dealing with the question of the rights of newspapers in the matter of advertising, the Montreal Gazette says:

No one expects a newspaper to guarantee truthfulness of every assertion made in the advertisements printed in its columns. There are certain fundamental rules which newspapers of the better class follow in regard to advertising offered them. Such newspapers will not, for instance, print advertising which they have good reason to believe is meant to deceive and defraud the public, but at the same time the newspaper is not bound to regulate its conduct in this respect by accepting the theory that its readers are infants and not able to exercise the ordinary degree of precaution. Again, to urge that a newspaper has no right to print an advertisement contrary to its views followed to its logical sequence would mean that it would be wrong for it to report a meeting of those holding divergent views, save and except for the purpose of belittling and ridiculing them. Nowadays the newspaper realizes that it is a dealer in news and that its business is to supply all the news up to its capacity. People who desire its views find them in the editorial columns and there alone.

The newspaper that would reject legitimate advertising because it did not believe in the article advertised, or the views enunciated in the advertisement, would be doing a great injustice to all those who might differ in opinion with it. Suppose we favored local option, it would be manifestly unfair in us to refuse all advertising that opposed it, just as it would be unfair if we were opposedt o local option, to refuse all advertisements that local optionists might wish to publish. Independent of its views as a newspaper, it has a public office to serve, and there is no warrant for a refusing to accept an advertisement, as long as it is legitimate and legal, because it may not agree with the object of the advertisement. Were a newspaper to be governed otherwise in its business relations with the public it might do incalculable harm to those with whom it differed. The rule in all well regulated newspapers is to treat all alike.

When Victoria County Pioneers Carried Grist to Holland Landing

A Backward Glance Covering the Days When Penetang Was the Only Military and Naval Post on the Great Lakes.

"I can well remember when Holland Landing was the biggest place north of Toronto."

This statement was made to the Aurora Banner by Eli Corbiere, who is still a resident of what is yet known as "The Landing", although the conditions which gave it the name long since ceased to exist.

To Mr. Corbiere has been given great length of years; eighty-nine winters have passed over his head, and he will by next June have been sixty-nine years wedded. But his span of life, long as it is for an individual, is but as one of the yesterdays in the existence of the people. And yet what vast changes have taken place within that brief yesterday. When Mr. Corbiere first saw the light, Barrie, now approaching the status of a city, was a mere landing place at the end of a portage; Collingwood, in which steel ships are being built with a carrying capacity four times that of the sailing vessels in which many of the first emigrants came from Great Britain, was not even a dream of the future; and Owen Sound, in which three and a half million dollars' worth of shipping are laid up for the present winter, was the centre of an Indian hunting ground. In Mr. Corbiere's early days Penetang, then a British naval and military post, was the only port on Georgian Bay, and to that port Mr. Corbiere carried the mail on foot, spending a week going and coming. The first settlers in Ontario and Victoria counties, his contemporaries, were obliged to pack their grists to the shore of Lake Simcoe and carry it thence by boat to the Landing to be ground. When he was a lad the great Huron Tract had not even so much as reached the stage of "the Queen's bush"; and the vast stretch of territory extending from the Ottawa River to the Pacific coast, with its riches in Cobalt, in the fertile prairies, and in the coal and gold of British Columbia not even suspected, was a mere game preserve for the Hudson Bay Company.

When the mighty achievements which have taken place within the span of one human life are passed in review it requires no prophet to foretell the vastly greater changes of the immediate future. The prophecy of the late Dr. Douglas, made in one of the gloomy decades of the past century, that the child was then born who would place its hand on the head of a child that would see seventy-five million people in British North America will be abundantly fulfilled. The numbers ar coming, but what of the character?

> The see is planted, and the flower
> Shall flourish, as the human will
> For good or evil rules the hour.

Let us see to it that the seed planted amid the toil and the suffering incident to the days of the pioneers is well nourished by us whose rich heritage was created by the sacrifices of the past.—Toronto Star.

Mr. W. A. Fanning Given Free Hand Council Says "Good Thing, Go Ahead"

Matter Dealt With in Committee---Neighbors Petitioned Strongly in Mr. F's Favor, and Mr. John Carew Told the Members a Few Things.

Evening Post of Jan. 18

At the first meeting of Council committees for the year, held Thursday night, Alderman W. W. Jordan and Calvert were the only absentees.

Some accounts and other minor matters engaged the attention of members for a time, but these trivialities were swept aside as soon as possible to make room for the piece d'resistance—the settlement of the W. A. Fanning trouble.

Ald. McGeough, chairman of the Police and Lighting committee, under whose jurisdiction the case came because of three actions pending against Mr. Fanning — first refreshed the memories of his colleagues by reading to them the names of a number of Mr. Fanning's neighbors (Dr. Burrows not included) which were attached to a petition, the prayer of which was that Mr. F. be allowed to continue doing business at the old stand, for the reason that they found nuisance arising therefrom.

Dr. Burrows and Mr. Samuel Tucker, who were in attendance at the meeting, gasped audibly at the confession of satisfaction. The former heard later the names of parties who had sympathized with him in his affliction and then basely sided with the enemy for the sake of the loaves and fishes, whilst the latter felt a pang or two of virtuous indignation well up from somewhere as he realized that his tenants—the occupiers of property he held to be depreciated in value by its proximity to the sales stable — had failed to see things through his brand of glasses.

THE COUNCIL'S VIEWS.

At the outset Dr. Burrows reviewed at some length the history of the sales stable. He denied that he had persecuted or harrassed Mr. Fanning —he had simply protested against an intolerable nuisance.

Mayor Begg—"There's no use going into that part of the business — the Board of Health has to deal with nuisances. The question before us is Mr. Fanning's infraction of the town by-law."

Dr. Burrows pointed out that Mr. Fanning had not applied for a building permit in 1905 — the permit had been taken out in the name of Mr. John Carew, who did not describe it as a stable. As soon as it was known that it was to be used as a sales stable a petition was sent to Council against it. In addition to the stench he (Dr. Burrows) and others also suffered as a result of Mr. Fanning being permitted to conduct his auction sales on the street, thereby blocking the east sidewalk and part of the roadway. Farmers and others stopped their rigs in front of his premises and as a result his boulevard was being ruined. Steve Oliver, another auctioneer, put a stove out on exhibition for half-an-hour, and had to remove it — why shouldn't he or anyone else enjoy the same privileges as Mr. Fanning? Even if Council permitted Mr. Fanning to conduct his sale on the street he would be breaking other clauses of the by-law.

was outspoken in his denunciation of

Mr. Sam Tucker was heard. He

the stable as a public nuisance — he was speaking for his tenants and in defence of their rights. In the 46 years he had been in Lindsay he had never ran up against a viler smell than emanated from the stable occasionally in the good old summer time. The petition in favor of Mr. Fanning bore the names of Messrs. B. J. Gough, B. Sanderson, J. Maunder, Searl, Thomas, Irwin, Babcock, senior and junior, Houzer, Mrs. Poole, Mrs. Wilson, H. Preddy, H. J. Lytle, Tilley, Lewis.

Dr. Burrows—"You know the weight to place on that — anyone can get up a petition to hang a man if he wishes."

Mayor Begg—"The street at the market, at Pym's and elsewhere is often blocked — if a band comes here it is allowed to play on the street and gather a crowd. Mr. Fanning's business brings a lot of people to town, and that's what we want. I'd willingly give up the front of my place for one day every week to help along a similar business."

Dr. Burrows—"If you can induce Mr. Fanning to go there I'll give you $25 gladly."

Ald. Smale said the growth of the town demanded a horse exchange — it was a necessity. Horses must be shows in harness, and the place must be convenient. If the walk and roadway on the west side be kept open for pedestrians and rigs he didn't think Mr. Fanning should be interfered with.

Dr. Burrows—"Why can't he rent a lot or a hotel yard? Then he could display his cattle and other stock."

Dep.-reeve Eyres—"I recognize that Mr. Fanning's business is a necessary and desirable one, but we must be careful of the rights of pedestrians."

Mayor Begg—"I think we should allow Mr. Fanning a certain length of time to commence his sale and display his cutters and other chattels."

Reeve Jordan—"We have no authority to tell the Chief to not prosecute — he gets his instructions from the Police Commission."

Mayor Begg—"Yes, but they will not be arbitrary."

Dr. Burrows and Mr. Tucker had left the chamber about 10 minutes when Mr. John Carew entered to see how matters were progressing. He was given permission to speak, and struck out right from the shoulder. He didn't know of anyone save Drs. Burrows and Simpson who would come forward against Mr. Fanning —the good people of the town were all in favor of his enterprise. Mr. Carew then waxed persuasive — his full-toned, manly voice fairly quivered with repressed feeling as he dwelt upon the probable result of his friend W. A's enterprise in attracting buyers and sellers from long distances and helping the business men. Our friend John is a bully man to have at one's back — he fights hard, and puts a case with great nicety.

Finally all members of Council agreed that Mr. Fanning should be allowed one hour every sale day during which he could display goods and start his auction on the street, and a motion to that effect was adopted. Chief Vincent will be instructed to see that he does not exceed the limit, or that drivers of vehicles be allowed to halt in front of other citizens' residences in the vicinity.

The committees then adjourned.

THREE MONTHS OF COLD WEATHER YET.

We are well aware of the fact that although the winter is not half over you expect us to give you a pretty close price on an

OVERCOAT OR SUIT.

If you knew how close a price we are prepared to quote you, you would drop in to-day and pick up what others scream about as "bargains." We don't like the word "bargains." They are generally more fakes than bargains.

Good good at an extremely low price are the only bargains we have to offer, and another thing it's nobody's business how little we charge you for an Overcoat or Suit, that's a business transaction between you and us.

Even the best clothing we have in stock

20th Century and Progress Brand Garments,

will be sold you at prices that will surprise you. If you buy now, this Suit or Overcoat will be practically new for next year.

wonder at its existence and its claims. That had been the voice of suppressed ambition, and now as he stood in the new kingdom it never voice lifted itself. The joy of material things rose suddenly, overbalancing the last remnant of the philosophy he had reared. He saw all things in a fresh light—the soft carpets, the soft lights, the numberless pleasant unnecessary things that color the passing hundredths and the wheels of life. This was power—power made manifest. The choice hangings of one's books, the quiet harmony of one's surroundings, the gratifying deference of one's dependents—these were the visible, the outward signs, the thing she had forgotten.

Crossing the room slowly, he lifted and looked at the different papers on the desk. They had a substantial feeling, an importance, an air of value. They were like the solemn boys to so many vexed problems. Beside the papers were a heap of letters neatly arranged and as yet unopened. He turned them over one by one. They were all thick and interesting to look at. He smiled as he recalled his own scanty mail—envelopes long and bulky or narrow and thin, unwieldy manuscripts or very welcome checks. Having sorted the letters, he hesitated. It was his life task to open them, but he had never in his life opened an envelope addressed to another man.

He stood uncertain, wolfing them in his hand. Then all at once a look of attention and surprise crossed his face and he raised his head. Some one had unmistakably passed outside the door which Greening had left ajar.

There was a moment of apparent doubt, then a air of alert, a quick, uncertain knock, and the intruder entered.

For a couple of seconds she stood in the doorway; then as Loder made no effort to speak she moved into the room. She had apparently but just returned from some entertainment, for though she had driven off her gloves, she was still wearing an evening cloak of lace and fur.

That she was Chilcote's wife Loder instinctively realized the moment she entered the room. But a disconcerting confusion of ideas was all that followed the knowledge. He stood by the desk, silent and awkward, trying to fit his experience to his knowledge. Then, faced by the hopelessness of the task, he turned abruptly and looked at her again.

She had taken off her cloak and was standing by the fire. The complexity of moving through life alone had set its seal upon her in a certain self possession, a certain confidence of poise, yet her figure as Loder then saw it, background by the dark leather and gowned in pale blue, had a suggestion of youthfulness that seemed a contradiction. The remembrance of Chilcote's epithets "cold" and "unsympathetic" came back to him with something like astonishment. He felt no uncertainty, no dread of discovery and humiliation in his presence as he had felt in the night, yet there was something in her face that made him infinitely more uncomfortable, a look he could find no name for, a friendliness that studiously covered another feeling, whether question, distrust or actual dislike he could not say. With a strange sensation of awkwardness he sorted Chilcote's letters, waiting for her to speak.

As if divining his thought she turned toward him. "I'm afraid I intruded," she said. "If you are busy—"

His sense of courtesy was touched. He had learned much from the talk of women, and the words shook up an image of the old sentiment.

"Don't think that," he said hastily. "I was only looking through—my letters. You must be used to your letters." He was conscious that his voice was hurried, that his words spoke of her as successful and intelligent, and never a blunder. Yet he knew he was a rare and uncommon fact. Her hair was black—not a glossy black, but the shaky black that is softer than any brown—her eyes were large and of a peculiarly pure shape, and her eyelashes were black, beautifully curved and of remarkable thickness.

"Are you in a hurry?" he said again, cutting short his thoughts with some commonplace.

"Thank you." She gravely accepted the proffered chair. But he saw that without any orientation she turned her skirts aside as she passed him. The action displeased him unreasonably.

"Well," he said shortly, "what had I to offer?" He waited to the manuscript with his customary moment and stood watching her. The intruder had taken the chair he had left him. Her instant and uninterested scan was proof of his almost settled idea. His own half contemptuous impression of Chilcote came to him unpleasantly and he felt a first desire to assert his own individuality. Stung by the contrast, he felt in Chilcote's pockets for something to smoke.

"Do you mind?" he asked the question. "Are these your cigarettes?" He leaned toward a small table and took up a box of the familiar size.

"Thanks." He took the box from her hand as it passed from one to the other he saw her glance at his rings. The glance was momentary. Her lips had to express gratitude and her eyes then closed again without comment. More than once spoken words the intrident showed him the gulf that separated husband and wife.

"Well," he said again, "what about Frisle?"

He spoke the words abruptly and looked at him more directly, as if bracing herself to a task.

"Mr. Frisle is as interested as ever in you," she began.

"Or is you?" Loder made the interruption precisely as he felt Chilcote would have made it. Then instantly he wished the words back.

Eve's warm skin colored more deeply. For a second the Dorothy-like dodging expression that puzzled him showed in her eyes, then she sank back into a corner of the chair.

"Why do you make such a point of fencing at Frisle?" she said in a tired quietly. "I overlook it when you are nervous." She halted slightly on the word. "But you are not nervous tonight."

Loder, to his great humiliation, reddened. Except for an occasional outburst on the part of Mrs Frisle, he was charwoman, he had not merited a woman's displeasure for years.

"The sneer was unintentional," he said.

For the first time Eve showed a personal interest. She looked at him in a puzzled way. "If your apology was meant," she said hesitatingly, "I should be glad to accept it."

Loder, uncertain of how to take the words, moved back to the desk. He felt a sudden relief at the sight of his rings. There was an interval in which neither spoke. Then at last, conscious of its awkwardness, Eve rose. With one hand on the back of her chair she looked at him.

"Mr. Frisle thinks it's such a pity that"—she stopped to choose her words—"that you should lose hold on things—lose interest in things—as you do lately. He has been thinking a good deal about you, and just three weeks, ever since the day of your—your illness in the house, and it means to blie"—she, she broke off, watching Loder's seven ed head—it seems to him that if you made one real effort now, even now, to shake off your restlessness that your friends could convince you that thinks that the present crisis would be"—she hesitated—"would give you a tremendous opportunity. Your trade interests bound up as they are with Frisle, would give any question you might hold a double weight." Almost unconsciously Eve's tone had crept into her words.

"I'll think over what you've said," he repeated.

Mrs. Frisle talked very seriously about the beginning of your career. He said that if only the spirit of your first success could come back"—her tone grew quicker, as though she feared ridicule in Loder's silence. "The spirit that was the influence. I know that I have little—none, perhaps—but I couldn't tell him that, and so I promised."

"And have kept the promise?" Loder spoke at random. Her manner and her words had both affected him. There was a sensation of stirring in his brain.

"Yes," she answered. "I always want to do—what I can."

"As she spoke a sudden realization of the effect she was making crept upon him, and with it his scorn of Chilcote made a renewed force.

"I'm intrigue—he began, turning to her. Then the futility of any description stopped him. "I shall think over what you say," he added after a short pause. "I suppose I can't say more than that."

Their eyes met and she smiled a little.

"I don't believe I expected as much," she said. "I think I'll go now. You have been wonderfully patient." Again she smiled slightly, at the same time extending her hand. The gesture was quite friendly, but in Loder's eyes it held relief as well as friendliness, and when their hands met he noticed that her fingers had growled cold.

He picked up her cloak and carried it across the room. As he held the door open he laid it quietly across her arm.

"I'll think over what you've said," he repeated.

Again she glanced at him as if suspecting sarcasm. Then, partly reassured, she passed out. "You will always despise your opportunities, and I suppose I shall always worry about you," she said. "That's the way with men and women. Good night." With another faint smile she passed out into the corridor.

Loder waited until he heard the outer door close, then he crossed the room thoughtfully and dropped into the chair she had vacated. He sat for time looking at the hand her fingers had touched. Then he lifted his head with a characteristic movement.

"Eve Frisle," he said aloud, "how cordially she detests him!"

CHAPTER IX.

LODER slept soundly and dreamlessly in Chilcote's canopied bed. To him the big room with its severe magnificence suggested a lofty peace and a grave solitude that it held in its owner's eyes. The ponderous furniture, the high ceiling, the heavy curtains, he changed since the days of Chilcote's grandfather, all hinted at a far reaching ownership that stirred him. The ownership was mythical in his regard and he experienced a mirror, half fulfilled the day and surely sufficient for the day.

That was his frame of mind as he opened his eyes on the following morning and by appreciative of his comfort, of the surrounding space, even of the light that filtered through the certain chinks, suggestive of a world recreated. With day all things seemed possible to a young man. He stretched his arms luxuriously, delighting in the glorious smoothness of the sheets.

What was it Chilcote had said? Better live for a day than exist for a lifetime. That was the spirit, and life had in gun. At thirty-six he was to know it for the first time.

He smiled, but without irony. Man is at his best at thirty-six, he mused. He has retained his enthusiasms and shed his exuberances; he has learned what to pick up and what to pass by; he no longer imagines that to drain a cup one must taste the dregs. He closed his eyes and stretched again not his arms only, but his whole body. The sensation of his muscles at rest he stated on a physical expression. Then, sitting up in bed, he pressed the electric bell.

Chilcote's new valet responded.

"Pull those curtains, Renwick," he said. "What's the time?" He had passed the ordeal of Renwick's eyes the night before.

"Nine o'clock, sir, even a little stupid. He drew back the curtains carefully, then looked at the small clock on the dressing table. Right—sir, he said. I didn't expect the bell so early, sir."

Loder felt repentant. He had no cause for lowed.

"May I bring your cup of tea, sir?"

"No, not just yet. I'll have a bath first."

Renwick showed ponderous uncertainty. "Warm, sir?" he hazarded.

"No, cold."

Still perplexed, the man left the room.

Loder smiled to himself. The chances of discovery in that quarter were not great. He was, in fact, more like Chilcote had even overstepped necessity in the matter of his valet's discretion.

He breakfasted alone, following Chilcote's habit, and after breakfast found his way to the study.

As he entered Greening rose with the same expectant hesitancy that he had shown the night before.

Loder nodded to him. "Early at work?" he said pleasantly.

The little man showed instant, almost relieved, relief. "Good morning, sir," he said. "You, too, are early.

I rather risked your nerves troubled you after I left last night, for I found your letters still unopened this morning. But I am glad to see you look well."

Loder promptly turned back to the night. "Was last night's letters?" he said. "To tell you the truth, Greening, I forgot them. My head was very slight—my wife looked me up after you left, and we coupled. I clean forgot them. I'm sorry. I'm not an exemplatory way as he moved to the fireplace. "Have a cigarette."

With Greening's eyes upon him there was no time for scruples. With very unfeigned confusion he began opening the envelopes one by one. The letters were unimportant, and he turned them one after another to the secretary, experiencing a slight thrill of authority as each left his hand. At the fact that power is visible in little things he was human.

"Give me my engagement book, Greening," he said when the letters had been disposed of.

The book that Greening handed him was a little worn, and Loder, as he opened it, felt a sudden pleasure in the fact.

Turning light, the incident moved his sense of humor. He and the book were co-operators in the fraud, it seemed, and he felt a kinship for the little man. Nevertheless he opened it with proper gravity and skimmed the pages.

The page devoted to the day was almost full. On every other line were the initials of Chilcote's secretary, and twice among the entries appeared a prominent cross in blue pencilling. Loder's interest quickened as his eye caught the mark. It had been agreed between Chilcote and his secretary that essential to Chilcote's public life need be carried through during his absence, and that everything else could continue to be crossed in blue pencil. The rest, the little, the unimportant, was supposed to be left to circumstance and Loder's discretion. Chilcote had been accustomed always accounting for the breaking of trivial promises.

But Loder in his new energy was anxious for obligations. The desire for fresh air and fresh scene was lost in diligence. He scanned the two lines with eagerness. The first was an interview with Frisle, the second, Chilcote's supporters in Warle; the other an appointment for lunch at the club. The idea of the former his interest quickened, but at thought of the latter he hesitated. Chilcote's life had been a royal command it would have directed him. Yet the idea of a space his assurance faltered. Then by coincidence the recollection of Eve and Eve's words of last night crossed his mind, and his mind was filled with a new uneasiness.

Because of Chilcote he was despised by Chilcote's relief. There was no denying that. He felt the pleasant excitement of the adventure that knowledge had given him, and he felt the shock of it with remembrance of the slight, reluctant touch of her fingers, the faintly evasive distance of her eyes. It was a trivial thing, but it touched his pride, and he was ready to put it to himself. It wasn't that he valued this woman's opinion—any woman's opinion, he felt, was trivial if it touched his pride. He turned again to the window and pressed the engagement book still between his hands. Was it Chilcote's opinion he respected? What if by his own personality combined under Chilcote's identity he forced her to alter her opinion? It was a matter of pride, after all—scarcely even of pride; self respect was a better word.

Satisfied by his own reasoning, he pressed the button for Greening.

"See to those letters, Greening," he said. "Just to show you I'm not spoiling work you might go on with your Kloersaan notes. I better well all that I can. I don't want to have to get in that quarter before we're much ahead. I'm not in a hurry." With a reassuring nod he crossed the room and passed through the door.

He lunched with Frisle, at his club and afterward walked with him to Westminster. The walk and lunch were both memorable in that hour he learned many things that had been sealed to him before. He learned his first draft of real elation, his first drop of real discontent. He gave for the first time how a great man may condescend—how unostentatiously, how fully, how sympathetically. He learned and kindness perfectly combined may accomplish, and he burned in warmy with a sense of ingliety that crushed and elated him alternately. He was John Loder, friendless, penniless, with no present and no future, yet he walked down Whitehall in the full light of day with one of the greatest statesmen England has known.

Some strangers were being shown over the terrace when he and Frisle reached the house, and, noticing the open door, the old man paused.

"I never refuse fresh air," he said. "Shall we go another turn before I do before settling down?" He took Loder's arm and drew him forward. As they passed through the doorway the pressure of his fingers tightened. "I shall reckon today among my pleasantest memories, Chilcote," he said gravely. "I could explain the feeling, but it seem to have touched Eve's husband, the end you, more closely than another than I ever did before. It has been a genuine happiness." He looked up with his eyes fixed through all his years of action and responsibility had remained so bright.

But Loder paled suddenly, and his glance turned to the river—wide, contrerious, secret. Unconsciously Frisle had stripped the illusion. It was not John Loder who walked beside the old Chilcote—Chilcote with his position, his interests and his wife. He had carried his arm, but Frisle held it.

"No," he said. "Don't draw away from me. You have always been too ready to do that. It is not often I have the pleasure of being with you. Be ungrived of the enjoyment."

"Can the truth ever be pleasant sir?" unconstantly Loder echoed Chilcote.

Frisle looked up. He was half a head taller than Loder, and, though his dignity concealed the fact, "Unlovely" he said seriously, "is an cynicism! It is the trademark of failure, and I do not like it in my—friends."

Loder nodded. The quiet insistent of the reproof, its mitigating kindness, touched him strangely. In that moment he saw the rills down which he had run, the ruts in the ill-ease spinning and the right daunted path. The path was right, but it was narrower, than he had guessed; there were curves and sidlings upon which he had stumbled, and he knew his head and met Frisle's glance.

"Don't count too much on me, sir," he said slowly, "I might disappoint you again." His voice broke off on the last word, and he heard the other voices and of laughter came to them across the lawns and saw the men and women and three men passed through the open door. At a glance he realized that the slighter of the two women was Eve.

Seeing them, she disengaged herself from her party and moved lightly forward. He saw her cheeks flush and her eyes fixed in pleasant surprise, but rested on his companion, but he noticed also that after her first cursory glance she took no notice of Loder.

As she came toward them Frisle threw away his hand in readiness to greet her.

"Here comes my godchild!" he said. "I often wish I could take her with me on my away with the prefix." He added in his first voice, "I thought you had reached them, then he responded warmly to her smile.

"Mr. Frisle," she said. "Turning the terrace into the garden of Eden in January! We cannot resist it."

Eve laughed. "Blame Lady Sarah!" she said. "We met at lunch, and she carried me off. I wanted to stay, I hadn't to ask where.

They had reached, and Loder joined, a little uncertainly. He had yet to learn that the manner of Chilcote and his wife was a long standing fact in their particular set.

At the sound of his tardy laugh Eve turned to him. "I hope I didn't rob you of all sense of duty, Mr. Loder, I caught him in his den," she explained, turning to Frisle, "and invaded it most shamefully. Lady Sarah I believe is still 22."

Again Loder noticed how quickly she looked from him to Frisle. The knowledge caused his self assertion.

"I had a sweet time, sir," he said. "Do I look as if I hadn't slept?"

Renwick had been right, unfortunately Eve looked back. "No," she said trifilly and with a faint surprise that to Loder seemed the first genuine emotion she had shown regarding him. "No, I don't think I ever saw you look so well." She was quite unconscious and very charming as she made the admission, and Loder felt that her yellow gold of hair and eyes gained by daylight—were brightened and vivified by their

Timely Advice Given Free Good Way to Save Money

Another Application of the Old Adage, "Keep Track of the Pennies and the Dollars Will Look After Themselves."

A financial journal which publishes a series of "Hints to Men Who Want to Get Rich," has the following which may be useful advice for some of our readers to follow during the New Year:

"One of the ways in which a man has made himself independent of his salary and has placed himself in that position, came from the purchase of an account book, for which he paid 30 cents. Every time he spends a cent he puts an entry in his book. Every time he buys a newspaper, a cigar, a drink, a necktie, and the clothes, every time he goes to the theatre or to a dance, every time that he draws even the smallest sum from his board he puts the record of his expenditure in his book.

"And every time that he opens his book and reads some of the entries, he regrets that he has made them. And some although not all, of those resolutions stick.

"The writer upon taking stock of his outgo finds many places in which he has spent money unnecessarily or foolishly. He makes up his mind not to repeat the mistakes. Sometimes, when he is tempted to spend money, he is held back by the mere thought of the labor of putting down the sum. He finds that he has made him of the sin that beets so many men—that of buying a thing not because he wants it, but because it is cheap.

"The first hundred dollars is the hardest to save, but money gives lively interest in this Society because he believed it was a good thing for his own and the country's, and time during his connection the directors of the Society made it a point to visit such meet, but they had been able to pay 100 cents on the dollar. It has developed into one of the finest fairs in the Province, outside of the larger cities, and he felt proud and thankful to have been connected with such an organization. He hoped the Society would keep on improving as it has done in the past and maybe he would come back to town from his new home in Northern Alberta and spend his last days here.

NEW DIRECTORS MEET.

President Johnston Ellis then called the meeting to order, and the directors for 1908 got down to routine business.

It was decided to hold the Fair for 1908 on September 24, 25 and 26, and Sec.-Treas. Keith was instructed to write to the Alberta Government Railway notifying them of the dates and asking them to co-operate with Lindsay in securing attractions.

After a communication from the Agricultural Association was read by Sec. Keith, President Ellis and Director Cameron were appointed delegates to attend the Association's meeting on February 19th, and Sec.-Treasurer Keith was also reminded to be present at that meeting.

The delegates were asked by the Board of Directors to look into the question of the Association's land grants than ours, and also the request the Lindsay Fair should have such a large per cent. taken off its grant because of getting special attractions.

REPORT OF DIRECTORS

Gentlemen,—We assemble again at our annual meeting, and we know that we have great reason to be very thankful for the success of our Fair, attendance at our Fair, but for the excellent weather we were favored with. We received a good gate, and in other receipts, such as grand stand, over $200 more than last year.

We have to congratulate the ratepayers on the grounds at a cost of some $1600, but still, after paying for our stable, we find that we have over $400 of a balance in the treasury, and, in fact, we are

The receipts have paid off $7100 during this time, the buildings, land, etc. in 1896 the gate receipts were $1291 and the grandstand $87, while last year, 1907, the gate receipts equalled $2482 and the grandstand brought in $533. The meeting adjourned after a series of discussions on minor matters.

Groom and Bride's Hard Experience

Former Left Lovey-Dovey's Side to Obtain a Drink—Was Shut Out.

Evening Post of Jan. 17

Newly married couples usually have some funny experiences, but that of a couple who were married here in town and went to spend their honeymoon in Kirkfield, certainly outshows most people.

The couple were to spend the night at one of the Kirkfield hotels, and retired about the usual hour. About one o'clock the bridegroom got thirsty and got up to get a drink of water.

Hotels back north are not like the Waldorfs we are accustomed to here in Lindsay, and conveniences are not so near at hand. This young man discovered, as was out in the back yard, that shutting the door made a quick dash and no back before he got chilled (for he was only in his night shirt) he was unable to get and had his drink in half a jiffy, then ran back to the door. What was his disgust and alarm to find that it was empty yet with a modern spring lock and in his haste he had omitted to set it so that it would go in. He pounded and kicked on the door in the hope of arousing someone to let him in but the proprietor and family hearing the racket, thought it was a drunken farmer or lumberjack, and afraid to get up down. At four o'clock in the morning overpowered sick of the game and even so wet was the matter.

There wasn't a soldier man in the country, and if he has to go through the thing several times he will be married he'll have no second wife.

The Growing West.

Apropos of the growth of new towns in the west, a locomotive engineer related the following, says the Epworth Era:

One day I was driving my engine through the prairie when suddenly a considerable town loomed up ahead where nothing had showed up the day before.

"What town's that? says I to my fireman.

"Calgary, says Bill, "it wasn't here when we went over the road yesterday.

"Well, I slowed down, and directly we pulled into the station, where there were hundreds of people were swarming on the platform to see the first train come in.

The conductor came along up front and says to me:

"Say, Jim, I think my knee we'll be running by some important place. Just turn down on yard and I'll put a brakeman on the rear platform to warn out for fear that spring up after the trains get by!

Two More Editors Kept Out of Jail

Cases Against Review and Examiner in Peterboro Failed.

Peterboro, Jan. 10.—(Special)—The case of the Crown vs. W. C. Edwards and Crystal Theatre, The Review Printing Co., and the Examiner Printing Co., which arose out of the publication of an advertisement regarding the giving away of watches at the Theatre, was dismissed today by Judge Weller.

Lest fall Mr. Edwards had an advertisement in The Review and Examiner, stating that watches were to be given away at Crystal Theatre on under certain conditions. It was not stated in the advertisement how the watches were to be allocated. Upon the publication of the advertisement the chief of police took action against Mr. Edwards and the two newspapers, charging them with violating the of the Criminal Code, which states that anyone found guilty of causing or publishing or publishing a lottery scheme, is liable to imprisonment for a term of exceeding two years, or to a fine not exceeding $2,000.

The case was given a preliminary hearing before Magistrate Dunlop, who committed the defendants for trial. They elected to be tried by Judge Weller without a jury. The court held today that there was nothing in the advertisement that would indicate that a lottery was to be conducted, that there was nothing stated as to how the watches were to be allocated.

FARM NOTES

A POOR SHOWING.

The information that comes from the annual meeting of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's association in Picton, is by no means comforting, says The Hamilton Spectator. It is announced that during the past year there has been a decrease in the value of butter and cheese exported of over six millions, as compared with the record of the previous year. The explanation given was an unfavorable season and shortage of feed. But this is only a partial explanation. Mr. Sidney Fisher told the dairymen that Canadians were now far behind those of Denmark and Holland in the matter of milk averages, and this is no doubt another cause for the decrease.

It may not be possible for Canadian dairymen to entirely offset such adverse conditions as unfavorable seasons and crop shortages, but surely much might be done to minimize these conditions by paying closer attention to the improvement of dairy cattle. We can see no reason why the dairy cattle of Denmark and Holland should be allowed to carry off the palm as milk producers, and in a business where there is so much to lose or gain for Canadians there is every reason why our friends, the Canadian dairymen, should have no stone unturned to maintain and greatly increase the position which our dairy products naturally have in friendly British market. It is a duty which rests upon the department of agriculture as heavily as it does upon the dairymen themselves.

TALKING IN THEIR SLEEP.

"You think I'm dead,"
The apple tree said,
Because I have never a leaf to show,
Because I stood
And my branches drooped,
And the dull gray mosses overspread.
"The buds of next May
I feel sway,
But I pity the withered grass at my root."

"You may think I am dead,"
The quick grass said,
"Because I have parted with stem and blade.
But under the ground,
I am safe and sound,
With the snows thick blanket over me laid.
I'm all alive and ready to shoot,
Should the spring of the year
Come dancing here,
But I pity the flower, without branch or root."

"You think I'm dead,"
A soft voice said,
"Because not a branch or root I own.
I have not died,
But I close and hide
In a plump seed-that the wind has sown.
Patient I wait through the long winter hours,
You will see me smile
I shall laugh at you then
Out of the crest of a hundred flowers."

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Do not frighten the flock, for sheep have sensitive and nervous natures which demand quiet.

You can break a scrub from pure-breds but from mongrels you can not, and the equal of a good pure-bred from scrubs.

It is a mistake to breed a sow too young. Let her grow and mature, for it prevents the fullest development of her material capacity.

A mixture of charcoal or wood ashes with a small quantity of salt and sulphur is highly recommended for keeping pigs in order.

John Campbell, the noted Canadian breeder, says that Yorkshire sows are the best for growing lambs in winter. Ewes and lambs should be kept separately.

The Yorkshire and the Tamworth, or a crossed-bred hog of any of these breeds, will make a profitable bacon hog. Cut it in age wean to brood from sows.

How true it is that the bull is one-half the herd. Secure the services of a sire of high breeding, and you can soon have a herd of cows that carry 50 per cent. of the best dairy blood.

One gallon crude carbolic acid, gallon kerosene oil, half gallon fish oil, one quart crude carbolic acid, mixed all together and applied as a spray over the stable floor or three times a week, makes a good cure for the horse fly.

The old-time four or five hundred pound hog is a back number. The smooth, early maturing hog has taken its place. He is smaller, carries as heavy, but is making the money. The "lady" hog is most in demand.

The man who now has a good flock of sheep, has the best chance for the grades, has a good sire on his farm; and with proper care thousands of lambs this and coming years, will yield the easiest made and most profit of any operation on the general farm. If you have not a flock, don't let the chance pass, for it is the advice of a successful Canadian sheep keeper.

To give the pigs a thorough scrubbing may appear to be labor thrown away, but if you lots of hogs are treated alike in every respect, except that one has received a thorough scrubbing with soapsuds once in a while, there will be a marked difference in favor of the hog that has been scrubbed when the time arrives for slaughter. A clean bed of straw, with a dry house, so as to afford them comfort at night will also promote thrift and growth. The hog is naturally a cleanly animal and enjoys a bath. If considered a filthy animal that wallows in the mire, it is because of the treatment given hogs will select clean spots whenever some food if given the opportunity to do so.

Melodious.

ON THINGS IN GENERAL

By "The Stroller."

One of our great dailies said recently that the question of advertising articles and receiving pay for some, and yet speaking editorially against them, was a question that would bear serious consideration. The matter referred to particularly was the liquor business. Just at present the liquor vendors are voluble in all sorts of arguments to entice the young to use their goods. The old hostesses do not need any inducement to drink, do or get sent to good their ranks need recruiting, or the Dominion would be a prohibition country. Infuriating ads are about the healthy giving properties of beer, over wine and wine over whiskey, and whiskey over beer. It is really immaterial to the liquor vendor which palaver you believe as long as you start consuming any one of the advertised articles, but if you want a professional experience that after a few years' training, you will be satisfied with anything, get on to Scott and see if he has a "cure" to fit the question, however, as to whether a newspaper is a proper medium for inducing accepting ads at not much per, is another thing. There is probably no paper of the same class in Canada, so outspoken against the liquor trade as the Globe, and yet it has ads in every day showing forth the beneficial qualities of the liquors advertised, and just at the present time, showing up the horrid evils that come to any place that drinks local option.

We think this dual function is weighing not a little against the Globe combating the arguments of the liquor men for all he is worth. The question with us is, could a honest paper with such professions to accept ads from a business that it by law is to be destructive of the interests of the community? We musteonclude that we do not believe it is. The liquor trade is one of the most patent medicines by the score, they are only alcoholic beverages watered up, which are free, and are only asking for the sake of argument that these patent medicines are as deserving of support as the liquors which are confined to the amount that is put into patent medicines. It would go well for our contemporary if it would publish paper that has never put in a liquor ad, and although not one of our dailies equals, yet it comes nearer to it in G. We refer to the Montreal Witness. There are, no doubt, many good reasons why the Witness or any other paper would not publish liquor ads. We believe this great family paper has turned away hundreds of dollars worth of liquor advertisements, but it has made up for this loss and its cream pills for all sort "simply" because the proprietor could not bring himself to accept the money that would be doing right. If this is so, it is up to the right thinking people of this country to see that he does not suffer, either financially, or otherwise, by the stand he has taken. We have not enough in the world of fair play, and his admiration for a man that will do the right in face of loss, that we strongly feel he will be turned to gain. We believe that a paper like the Globe is in such a position that it can easily afford to drop all liquor advertising and jump on it with both feet. In a small town like Lindsay, the man is different out. Four or five hundred dollars a year makes a great difference between scraping like a nigger and living on easy street, with the machine, if you will, and the Globe, from the moral standing of the paper, the higher price the liquor man are prepared to pay for space, and the influence of "Stroller" alongside one of their ads would be no money from the comb to them, and we, as a good citizen would have it. We understand that any denomination could have all their church ads put in the Globe and that paper would only open its advertising columns to the liquor interests.

Most of our readers will have noticed the startling departure The Globe made, in publishing an editorial epidemic in the life of one of the candidates for mayor in the city of Toronto. The editorial set the individuality of taking this course are very diverse, some of the warmest admirers appreciated it as a bright, on the surface, it looks puerile to bring up a defect in a candidate's private character, which, perhaps, is not a public fault, but desperate diseases require desperate remedies. However, this case appears to be very much overused. There are offices and offices, and although we could wish that the occupant of the most desirable even for the office of poundkeeper, unless he could show a clean bill of healthy morals, yet we can readily see that there might be more harm than good done were such a spade to force. We think, however, that most People will repoint that the office of mayor, especially in the capital city of the province, should be filled by a man above reproach, both in private and public life. The day has gone by when the argument can be used that a man's private life has nothing to do with his public life. It has. There can be no Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde business — everything about a man who is seeking such an honorable office must be as clear as noon day. The mayor of a city is the chief magistrate of the same. He is responsible for the law being obeyed. If he is a drunken blackguard, or a libertine, how can he be expected to look after its observance?

This story that was published about one of the candidates was certainly not a pleasing thing to read in the front page of a leading paper, and yet it had been published before, although in a very subdued manner. The people who expressed disapproval of the publication of the story were generally those who either had read it before, somewhere, or those of other sections of the city who knew the character of the man. Now, there are a lot of ignorant people in this city who read the Globe who, perhaps, have ever got a letter from a brother, sister, or friend, in which they read a description of a character, some third party and say, "of course you know all about so and so," when as a matter of fact all you know of the little they say about it, and you have either not the confidence ignorance to admit that you know, or nothing counts with our public men. We read generalities about such and such a man, and one feel that so much or so little as they please. In the particular case the publication of the paper did the only possible thing. We would venture the assertion that 90 out of 100 of the people were unaware of the actual kind of a man who was seeking their suffrages. Will it be said that it would be better that a publicist would be doing his whole duty were he to neglect warning the people of such a danger? The result of the vote shows what most of the voters thought, Toronto is epidemic free, and all shall go on as usual, the Tory wins. But it also proves itself as being the city of Sunday and Saturday night carousing would have looked like the irony of fate for such a city to have such a mayor. Yes, we say it, and we mean it, all stories are true, about the most pleased men there are the respected Tories — the real Tories, and we are afraid that something would happen. They now know where that some of us might be expected to look, and just what to do on any future occasion should it look up again.

This, however, is only beginning. The Globe cannot afford to let the matter drop. If all we hear is true, there are several candidates, and public life, whose proper place is in private life. We cannot speak for the city of Toronto, but we know that in our city there are men in public life who are in the same class as we believe was the candidate for mayor of Toronto. We know that we are not such an anybody, but we hardly think that the town would be the worse for such a man being privately. Wit and humor in a paper are good, we like them, we enjoy them, but when there is nothing behind them, they betray, as a rule, more cheap and nasty feeling. The serious man who goes to the meeting to run for an office, or hear an candidate have to say, and who really has the interests of the town at heart, is simply not in it with the fellow who comes to have a good time, and make the audience laugh, even when they know in their hearts they should be ashamed of themselves. We had lots of all kinds at our meetings, and now that the elections are over, we may suppose it will do any harm to make a few comments on things as we saw them. The voters were serious, intelligent, and two of them got in. We had that any body could get pelted the man they want, and it is a matter of fun they are right, they can allow and let out any nonsense, and that the price comes high, and if so don't have to pay for it in like manner as we, in our simplicity and humbleness. Our town affairs, including the road roads, are of too serious a nature to be regarded with any levity, and yet that is what we get on these or four occasions. For one of the fellows who was a good citizen running who is deeply interested, financially, in the town. He was a good citizen, but he was a stranger who, as far as we know, has not got a dollar at stake, and he was simply in it for the fun of funnigrams. It may, of course, be possible that there was very little to choose between the candidates for citizen, with his all at stake, should appeal to the serious voter as preferable to the man who had never a gentleman of undoubted ability, and reputation running for mayor, turned down by one that all admit is not in the same class, any way you like to look at it, we can look for almost anything in Lindsay.

It really makes one feel like believing managerial politics altogether, but we know that there is no man so in blamed regular in his ways, but we think many would be very much tempted to do so. We do not suppose that it is the personal element that has entered in this case, although it must make a good man feel him humiliated to be thrown down in such a way. Evidently it is a slap at the present waterwork management, and if the people want a change, why not let them have it at once, and see how they like the fellows can do? There is nothing like giving the "cuss" a chance to run things to bring them to their senses. There was one matter that rather staggered us. Mr. Kylie, we think it was, brought up the qualifications required for the County Council. His points were well taken, and unanswerable, and yet he lost and therefore fell flat. There is no doubt but that, had Mr. Graham been out of our representation last year, we would have stuck a good chance of beating off the 50.00 job that, as, according to the speaker, apparently forced on the county by the judges and barristers. There is also no doubt but that we were entitled to Mr. Bogg's services for at least one year longer, however. We don't care how smart the man is, he cannot learn how to pull the ropes in any one year, but he will, and he will, just as with appreciation, we pay for these things, and in justice are entitled to a little service from the new proteges. In this case we should not be so much in a hurry to get our money, and Mr. Kylie was perfectly right in his argument that a man should serve a short apprenticeship when he is capable of filling it, as all will agree Mr. Bogg was. We have no doubt, however, that Wilfred was generous enough to regretfully, saying that the idea was ever before him, but that the sacrifice of it cost was harder than we possibly thought. No doubt it is; at the same time, it would be a good thing for the county and Wilfred if he did it. Sir John A. got more credit over appointing John Macdonald, of Toronto, to the Senate than for any other thing, and that was the only Grit he appointed to any office in 18 years, or longer.

Now that our new Councils are elected, both for the town and county, we would like to take up the question of separation, provided our friends, "Farmer," and "Nemo", and that "other fellow", will give us the lead, and show us how it is done. We say, the question is a live one and worthy of serious consideration, for all will admit that it is a hard thing to think that all admit that we are paying far more than our share of county expenses. Whether we would be relieved of as much as we should like, we do not, we understand, but it is a debatable question. We may touch on that later on, but in the meantime we just want to give a few figures for 1906, as they are printed in the county year book, and make deductions as nearly as we can reasonable from them. The first matter that strikes us is the lack of proportion in the sentiment, which we say has about one-quarter the population of the whole county within its limits, and yet has only one-third of the representation on the Council.

We are aware, of course, that representation is based on the idea of a mighty good principle to follow. The argument is that if the more populous centres had the proper share of representatives the poorer and less populous districts would get left. We don't think that has been the case, but we do know that where poorer sections get the chance they are overwhelmed by the big municipalities on any and every occasion. We don't think it is fair, we argue that Lindsay, or Marigold or Ops, should be called upon to pay a tax for a bridge, or anything else in their poorer brethren, but when the poorer brethren take the lie in their power and wash themselves clean, they have done in the recent valuation business, and for the sake of peace we say we let them off, and the justifiable expenses of $8000, it does seem to us as if their fighting qualities should in some way be set off.

(There is no way of getting back at them, for the whole outfit of taxes collected from Lindsay and Ops amount to the $8000 in five years, but the county has got to pay this in one, and the cuts of it fall on Lindsay, Marigoma and Ops. We don't know that we would advocate any more separation, we think there is enough now; our plan would be to have the same system of the northern townships, bringing the population of the Council down to say 18 at the most, taking up the surplus population, and the following are the items in which we are interested for 1906:

Administration of Justice ... $5420.29

Our share would be, say ... 800.00
Expense of Registry Office ... 25.00
House of Refuge ... 702.00

$1527.00

In addition to this we would lose—
County grant to Public Lib. ... 500.00

Cost of inmates at Industrial school, now paid by County 150.00

Or a total of ... $1727.00
We have paid ... 4261.00

So that we overpaid in 1906 2534.00

There is no getting away from these figures, that is exactly what we paid in 1906 for our share of the partnership. We will have paid more in 1907, and will pay more still in 1908. The question so to whether we would get off with this amount were we to sever our relationship is problematical. The law is very hazy on some points, such as the High School expenses and other similar items. If we got justice we would lose nothing and neither would the county, but if they decreed, their pound of flesh they could make us teach their youngsters at an expense to us of over $700 a year, it seems fair, and yet that is apparently the law. Next week we hope to deal with some other items.

Every now and then there is a time also by somebody against the so-called militarism in schools, the last one being issued by the farmers in convention assembled, recently held in Toronto. We don't know why any particular class of citizens should object to the boys being put through military manoeuvres, but strange to say, there are several that do. The farmers are one class; some of the trades and labor people are another. Some of the clergymen, for instance, the Baptists are kickers along (those lines. They have had Dr. Goldwin Smith preach the sermon, and pitch against the cult. We admire Dr. Smith, and for many years, and in many letters are prepared to sit at his feet and learn, but when it comes to give us an idea as to the best method of training up boys, we believe we could give the doctor points and win out. The doctor deals in theory only, whilst we can talk from practical.

We don't know why the Baptists should, as a body, object to military training. It is not because they are afraid to express opinions, and if necessary, fight for them; there must be some hidden reason. We are constrained to think that labor people. They are, like the Socialists, against anything and everything, merely in their minds, of course, that has a semblance of law and order about it. We are hoping that, for, fortunately for our regiments, all are not of that cray of thinking, and that there are men in the trade, bold of this trade and labor business, who are not much of which any counsel, or, at least, they would, if they dare, display such uncouth and savage manners that they would outdate the Socialists, and, perhaps, and yet acknowledge our common God in prayer, or our King or his representative, or our parliamentary system. We may not their opinions down as being out of much account as a contemporary, we are speaking about the farmers. Life to them is serious, practical, or fancies and fancies do not appeal to them as being in any ways necessary to buy life. A horse is not a cooking utensil, or a fine fight, does get them out of the rut occasionally, but as a rule life to them is of too serious nature to have their boys waste time in drill, and yet who are the backbone and sinew of our country? Are they not the farmers' sons? Now we are not of the military enthusiasts. We don't think that anything would we never could see any glory in going out to be shot at for fifty cents a day, but we think it would be morally wrong in the paper next day should you happen to lay down your life for your country. We, at the same time we think that if our boys and girls, too, for that matter, were to be overtaught by military discipline it would be much better for them, especially from a physical standpoint. Watch a crowd of boys marching along to school. How many of them have the chest breathe correctly? Not one out of every ten. Would it, not do them good to have their lungs made to do both properly? Look at a bunch of farmers walking when they come to town, they had been properly trained to walk in their youth, they would lose that ungainly slouch which marks most of them in their movements.

We think there is a good deal of misunderstanding at the bottom of those opposed to a military training in our schools. Because a boy is taught to march in step, and to carry his arms, and shoot straight, it does not mean that he has a consuming desire, or that he is actuated by a consuming desire, to kill his fellows. In a nation such as ours, "Defence and not offence" should be our motto, and we believe it is with most of us. At the same time it does not cost much to train our boys and do things correctly, and under discipline, not to be ashamed of our bodies, and that features attached to the training. To meet boys, drill of any kind comes in the nature of play, and we were always taught that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." Drill is gentle exercise, performed with any one, and is therefore to be commended. The lessons learned in a training school, we repeat, if we could, put every boy in a military school, where everything from the time he rises to sunset would be close to the tap of the drum, and where all slouching and lounging when at work or play, would be labored.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

"Suffer little children to come unto Me, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

The Establishment of God's Kingdom on Earth—Articles Bearing on Church Work at Home and Abroad—Carefully Selected Contributions will be Received for Publication in this Column.

A LITTLE WHILE

"A little while for patient vigil keeping,
To face the stern, to wrestle with the strong;
A little while to sow the seed with weeping,
Then bind the sheaves, and sing the harvest song.
"A little while to keep the oil from falling,
A little while faith's flickering lamp to trim,
And then, the Bridegroom's coming footsteps hailing,
We'll haste to meet him with the bridal hymn.

PARAGRAPHS

Christian Guardian; Honesty is not the best policy simply because it cannot be made a policy at all. If a man once begins to make rectitude a scheme for getting along in the world, rectitude for him ceases to exist. Honesty is an eternal principle or it is nothing, the question of returns has nothing to do with it.

There was a peculiar situation in Oklahoma City on January 1. In the great vats of the Auheuser-Busch brewing plant were 2,300 barrels of beer. When Oklahoma became a state and a prohibition state the brewery was in a quandary. The state authorities rules that the beer in stock could neither be kept nor shipped out of the state; and the matter was finally settled by turning the whole 2,300 barrels into the city sewers. Better there, however, than inside Oklahoma citizens.

ESPECIALLY VALUABLE

Exchange; The sexton of a "swell colored church" in Richmond was closing the windows one blustery Sunday morning during service, when he was beckoned to the side of a young negress, the widow of a certain Thomas. "Why is yo' shettin' dose winders, Mr. Jones?" she demanded in a hoarse whisper. "De air in dis church is suffocatin' now." "It's de minister's orders," replied the sexton, obstinately. "It's a cold day, Mis' Thomas, an' we ain't goin' to take no chance on losin' any o' de lambs of dis fold while dere's a big debt overhangin' dis church."

ABOUT CHURCH GOING.

Quite a novel apology for non-churchgoing on the part of urban dwellers has been mooted lately. Country folks are better church-goers, it seems, because they have better health. "In rural Scotland," remarks the Presbyterian," half the people live to be at least fifty-five years old. In Glasgow half the people die before they reach thirty, and that is taking Glasgow as a whole. No doubt in some wards the people live as long, or nearly as long, as in the country; and so other wards must be proportionately worse. It is a fact that in Patrick half of those who died in 1903 were less than twenty years old; in Govan, four years; in Kinning Park—though it hardly seems credible — half those who ended their days there had less than two years of life. Such populations really have not time to acquire church-going habits; one-half dies too soon, and the other half must have its Sundays pretty well taken up with 'works of necessity and mercy.' In many cases there is no one to take the children to church, and they play about the streets and grow up without any church connection." The explanation is novel, but anyone who knows our climate will find a grain of truth in it. As one looks round a 'sparsely-settled' church of a Sunday and goes over the roll of absentees, it is wonderful how many are sick or at home tending the sick.

DOCTOR'S ORDER WAS: 'CUTICURA'

For a Bad Case of Eczema on Child —Suffered for Three Months—Disease Reached a Fearful State —Pain and Itching were Terrible.

CURED AFTER OTHER PRESCRIPTIONS FAILED

"When I was small I was troubled with eczema for about three months. It was all over my face and covered nearly all of my head. It reached such a state that it was just a large scab all over, and the pain and itching were terrible. I doctored with an able physician for some time and was then advised by him to use the Cuticura Remedies which I did and I was entirely cured. I have not been bothered with it since. I used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment but do not know exactly how much was used to complete the cure. I can safely say that Cuticura did a lot for me. Miss Anabel Wilson, North Branch, Mich., Oct. 20, 1907."

ITCHING CURED

With Cuticura Remedies in Three Days After Six Months of Suffering.

"I suffered fully six months. The trouble began on my arms in little red pimples and it was not long before it was all over my body, limbs, face, and hands. It was so bad that I could not rest night or day and during the six months, I did not get a good night's sleep. I doctored for three or four months and spent at least twenty dollars trying to find a cure but none could be found. Then I saw the Cuticura Remedies advertised, and the next day I purchased some for seventy-five cents at the druggist's. I used them and I was relieved of the itching in three days, and I have never had a sign of any skin disease since. The Cuticura Remedies are the only remedies to use for skin diseases, they have cured me and they will cure others in the same way. J. W. Bloom, R. R. Claim Drunkards Helped Optionists

To Get Even With Inoffensive Hotel-keeper in Omemee Village.

The St. Luke's Parish (Peterboro) Church Work magazine of this month remarks; To show to what an extent a certain class of so-called temperance people will go in order to force upon the people their views, a lamentable incident is reported from Omemee, where local option has recently been introduced. The hotel-keeper in Omemee is a quiet, inoffensive man, who, to the best of his ability, has upheld and kept the license law. He does not allow any loafing or excessive drinking on his premises and has put on the black list certain individuals who imbibed too freely and made open eye sores of themselves. The result of his efforts in this direction has been seen in the fact that Omemee is free from drunkenness. To injure the hotelman and to take vengeance on him these habitual drunkards have joined the local option forces and acted for them to "get even" with the hotel-keeper. They were successful; they unitedly succeeded in driving a good and honest man out of his business; they took from him and his children their daily bread. Whether this record is one for the temperance people to be proud of, we leave to our readers to decide.

Tenders Called for The Third Section

More Work Will Soon be Under Contract on Trent Canal.

Tenders are being called for the construction of Section 3 on Trent Valley Canal, and will be accepted until March 12th. This section includes about 7 miles of river from a point 10 miles above Trenton to Bradley's Bay. The work will consist chiefly of dredging along the Trent river. At Chisholm's Rapids, which is five miles from Stirling, however, some extra work will be done in the removal of the ruins of an old dam and lock supposed to have been built about 1837 by the British government. At this point rock channel will have to be enlarged about half a mile and a new lock and new dam constructed. At this point the old Central Ontario railway crosses the Trent. This section ends at Bradley's Bay, three miles above the rapids.

Rheumatism

I have found a tried and tested cure for Rheumatism! Not a remedy that will straighten the distorted limbs of chronic cripples, nor turn bony growths back to flesh again. That is impossible. But I can now surely kill the pains and pangs of this deplorable disease.

In Germany—with a Chemist in the City of Darmstadt—I found the last ingredient with which Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Remedy was made a perfected, dependable prescription. Without that last ingredient, I successfully treated many, many cases of Rheumatism; but now, at last, it uniformly cures all curable cases of this heretofore much dreaded disease. Those sand-like granular wastes, found in Rheumatic Blood, seem to dissolve and pass away under the action of this remedy as freely as does sugar when added to pure water. And then, when dissolved, these poisonous wastes freely pass from the system, and the cause of Rheumatism is gone forever. There is now no real need—no actual excuse to suffer longer without help. We sell, and in confidence recommend Tunnel to Prince Edward Would Investment Pay?

Interesting Article in Support of the Contention—Cost of Other Tunnels Cited —Construction Would End Unsatisfactory Means of Communication.

(J. E. B. McCready in Toronto Globe.)

It is assumed that the tunnel can be constructed for the sum of $1,000,000 dollars. That is beyond the cost estimated by Sir Douglas Fox, a tunnel engineer of a little more experience. In a matter of facts, two contracting firms of the best financial ability have offered to construct for that sum and put up any required security for the fulfillment of the contract.

The Simplon tunnel, with two lines equally separated and fifty feet apart, each twelve miles long, was built for $15,000,000, under most tremendous difficulties, a river of hot water being encountered in the centre of the mountain. The cost was $625,000 per mile of tunnel. The Mont Cenis tunnel, seven and three quarter miles long, was built thirty years ago, when financing was low in its infancy, for $9,439,000. The Northern Pacific tunnel, through the Cascade Range, $650 lineal feet in length, was built for $1,000,000. The cost of the tunnel at the same rate per foot would be but $5,650,000.

It is true that Sir. St. Laurent, in his report, submitted to parliament last spring, estimated the cost of the Island tunnel at something over $15,000,000, but he admitted this estimation by adding a least-from limit, to cost, by his own figures, $7,262,000. Sir Douglas Fox is of opinion that an iron lining in a firm rock formation such as exists under the Northumberland Straits is quite unnecessary.

To sum up the matter it may be worth while to formulate some estimate of what the savings and earnings of the Island tunnel would be. Let it be admitted that the tunnel shall pay the interest on its cost, at three per cent. Then government railways and canals do not pay interest, but let that go. It would at least release the winter steamers for service elsewhere, and with it transfer the interest on their cost, say $30,000. It would save the annual depreciation on the three steamers, at 10 per cent, $100,000.

Any day one of the steamers may be lost in the winter service, which is always hazardous, and whether the government pays insurance or not, the risk is there. One marine insurance company would take the risk at less than ten per cent. This for the five winter months would be $40,000.

Judging from past experience the annual cost of operating three steamers, over and above ownership, would be $150,000. (The Stanley and Minto in 1906 cost $109,000 over their ownership.)

The tunnel would further save the cost of the following services now paid for by the dominion: Dominion Atlantic, $12,000; telegraph cable annually, $7,000; ballast service at Charlottetown, $8,000; special mail trains to connect with winter steamers, say $20,000.

These items make up a total of over $330,000, or $50,000 in excess of the interest on the estimated cost of the tunnel.

But the largest item of saving has not to be named, for it is a matter of age claim for the due fulfillment of the contract, which must be met and cannot be evaded. Unfortunately it must be taken into account what the tunnel would earn as a connecting link between over 250 miles of government railway on the Island and 1,500 miles of government railway on the mainland. What railway company, owning these two systems would hesitate to build a tunnel to connect them at a cost of ten millions of dollars.

It seems reasonably clear that Canada can build the tunnel without incurring any new obligations or adding a dollar to our burdens, and that in doing so she will quiet a growing discontent now fast reaching a breaking strain.

A Great Doctor Speaks Warmly of a Great Family Remedy

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Strongly Endorsed by One of the World's Greatest Doctors—Hope for the Sick.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People is the only advertised medicine in the world that has had the public endorsement of a doctor of world-wide reputation. Such an endorsement stamps this medicine as being worthy of the confidence of every person who is sick or ailing. A great doctor would not risk his reputation unless he was absolutely confident, through a personal knowledge, that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do what is claimed for them. Dr. Guiseppe Lapponi, one of the greatest physicians of modern times, for years the personal medical adviser of the Pope, writes the following testimonial in favor of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills:

"I certify that I have tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in four cases of the simple anaemia of development. After a few weeks of treatment, the result was all I could hope for my experiments. For this reason, I shall not fail in the future to extend the use of this valuable preparation, not only in the treatment of other morbid forms of the category of anaemia or chlorosis, but also in cases of neurasthenia and the like."

(Signed) DR. GIUSEPPE LAPPONI.

Via dei Graceli 32, Rome.

The simple anaemia of development, referred to by Dr. Lapponi, is, of course, that tired, languid condition of young girls whose development is so rapid that it is hard, and whose health at the period of that development, is so often imperilled. His opinion of the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills at that time is of the highest scientific authority, and is endorsed by the leading physicians in which anaemia and other diseases of the blood, as well as nervous troubles, are being cured by these pills, which, it need hardly be mentioned, owe their efficacy to their power for making new blood, and thus getting directly upon the digestive and nervous systems. In all cases of anaemia, decline, indigestion, and all ailments due to bad blood, and all affections of the nerves, as St. Vitus' dance, nervous headache, neuralgia, they are commended to the public with a greater confidence because they have the strong endorsation of this great physician.

Bobcaygeon Man Looking for Wife

Lindsay Failed to Furnish His Ideal, So He Headed North.

Evening Post of Jan 20

Evidently husbands are just as scarce in leap year as in any other year, if one is to go by the results of Wm. Freeman's advertisement for a wife in the Bobcaygeon Independent.

Before many days had elapsed Mr. Freeman had received twenty charming females applying for offering, the writers' hearts and hands to the would-be groom. Each letter was accompanied by the best picture the photographers' art could procure, and needless to say, the photographs of some beauty and youth was so entrancing that had it been any other person than Mr. Freeman wished to marry the whole lot and move his harem out to Utah with the Mormons.

However, level-headed Mr. Freeman set about the next best thing, and received that he would see them all and marry the one he thought most suitable for a life partner. He came into the Simpson house the other day and asked the proprietor if he knew the address of a certain young lady who had written him "No," said Mr. Simpson, "I'm afraid I do not, but say, how would you like to see two very fine, eligible, young sides for the interest on their cost, say $30,000. It would save the annual depreciation on the three steamers, at 10 per cent, $100,000.

Any day one of the steamers may be lost in the winter service, which is always hazardous, and whether the government pays insurance or not, the risk is there. One marine insurance company would take the risk at less than ten per cent. This for the five winter months would be $40,000.

Judging from past experience the annual cost of operating three steamers, over and above ownership, would be $150,000. (The Stanley and Minto in 1906 cost $109,000 over their ownership.)

The tunnel would further save the cost of the following services now paid for by the dominion annually: Dominion Atlantic, $12,000; telegraph cable annually, $7,000; ballast service at Charlottetown, $8,000; special mail trains to connect with winter steamers, say $20,000.

These items make up a total of over $330,000, or $50,000 in excess of the interest on the estimated cost of the tunnel.

But the largest item of saving has not to be named, for it is a matter of age claim for the due fulfillment of the contract, which must be met and cannot be evaded. Unfortunately it must be taken into account what the tunnel would earn as a connecting link between over 250 miles of government railway on the Island and 1,500 miles of government railway on the mainland. What railway company, owning these two systems would hesitate to build a tunnel to connect them at a cost of ten millions of dollars.

It seems reasonably clear that Canada can build the tunnel without incurring any new obligations or adding a dollar to our burdens, and that in doing so she will quiet a growing discontent now fast reaching a breaking strain.

Compound Interest How it Mounts Up

Object Lesson for Citizens Who Permit Their Taxes to Fall Behind.

(The Man About Town," in St. Catharines Standard.)

One of the reforms advocated by Ald. Sutherland in his conditions for the mayoralty at the nomination meeting Monday evening was a reduction in the interest charged on overdue taxes. The present rate this might not seem to involve a great hardship, but anyone who thinks the rate of interest now charged is fair, let her or him consider for a moment how easily interest can pile up. As an illustration of this, two men were discussing the whole suggestion the day after the nomination meeting, and one was inclined to think that three per cent. a month would not be exterminate. "Then," said his companion, "if you wanted $10,000 badly, and Government offered to lend it to you for a month at 3 per cent. per month you would take it?" And the first man said he would—he would take it for three years at the rate of 3 per cent. per month to have the money. "Well," said the other, "if I loaned you $10,000 in this city, Lindsay, for three years, the interest at the start, how much would you get?" The first man thought for a moment and said, "Three per cent. per month, eh? Why, that is 36 per cent. per month, or 108 per cent. for three years. In other words the interest at that rate on $10,000 would be over $10,000 or $10,800. This is just an illustration to show how interest will pile up. Now, why should the interest be regard to city taxes? If your taxes are not paid by a certain date, say, the end of the month later, you pay five per cent interest. It is the same if you let the end of one month or four months later, five per cent is added. This is manifestly an unfair and unjustifiable proceeding. If the taxes one month late pays interest at the rate of 60 cents per annum, why should the taxes two months overdue pays interest at the rate of 30 per cent. per annum; three months late 20 per cent. per annum; four months at 15 per cent. per annum. Ald. Sutherland's suggestion was that the interest rate of 12 per cent. per annum should be charged, one per cent. being added to taxes one month overdue, two per cent. to taxes two months overdue, and so forth. This would be a much more equitable system, and besides giving justice to those who could not pay taxes when due, it would be to which the first month thereafter, would no doubt be an incentive to pay taxes as early as possible even after being due. Sixty per cent. per annum and even 20 or 30 per cent per annum is an extortion, and the sooner it is reformed and a worthy of consideration as a much needed reform.

Board of Health Members.

Evening Post of Jan. 17

Members of our report of last Monday night's Council meeting are anxious to know what board of health will be appointed for the ensuing year the town is to be deprived of the valuable services of Dr. Ward, who died Nov. 6, 1907. Such is not the case, however. When the matter of the board of Health came up Monday night it was considerable confusion at one period, during which time Ald. Wellington was voted upon without the fact becoming generally known. Four or five members of Council were in doubt until next day, when Clerk Knowlson announced that Messrs. Hora and Staples were the appointees under by-law, Mr. J. A. Williamson having been named to complete the board for which Ald. Kylie had been elected.

COMMUNICATIONS

THE GARNEGIE HERO MEDAL.

(To the Editor of The Post.)

Dear Sir,—Will you please allow me space for a few remarks in regards to heroism and brave deeds. I see by The Post of the 16th, where not only bronze medals, but money, has been awarded to two of our townsmen. Now, Mr. Editor, I will quote you a case which I call heroic; it happened on the 15th of last Sept. A boy of 15 years—a cripple, son of Mr. Jas. Nicholls, of the Flavelle staff—was playing around the river in a boat or raft of boards, when he slipped off into the river, which is very deep at that point. Little Sammy Howe, a lad of about eight years, was when boy and seeing the danger the boy was in ran along the boom and jumped in, clothes and all and caught young Nicholls, who was going down the third time, and brought him to the top of the water, where another little fellow named Bridel caught and helped him out.

Now, Mr. Editor, what could I do to save the poor cripple, never stopped to think of the risk he was running, or even thought of what would a boy was drowning and no one near to save him. The rescued boy was about fifteen, and Sammy is supposed to know nothing about swimming, therefore, if it hadn't been for young Howe, (son of Mr. Howe, the blacksmith, he would have been drowned.

Now, I think if anyone deserves a gold medal, it is just these two boys mentioned.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your space, I remain, yours, etc.,

JUSTICE.

COUNCIL OF BOARD OF TRADE SUBMITTED REPORT LAST EV'G

A Number of Thoughtful Allusions Made Therein—Annual Meeting on Thursday Evening for Election of Officers and Other Business.

Evening Post of Jan. 29

The Council of the Board of Trade held its last meeting for the year last evening, when several communications were read and referred to special committees for investigation and report. Messrs. Ray and Gluess were appointed auditors for the year. It was decided to hold the annual meeting for the election of officers on Thursday evening, in the Council chamber.

The following is the report of Council for the year:

To the members of the Lindsay Board of Trade:

Your Council takes pleasure in submitting herewith the report of its proceedings for the year just ended. The Council has met 19 times, and the attendance has been as follows: 2 members 19 times, 1 member 18 times, 3 members 8 times, 1 member 7 times, 2 members 6 times, 5 members 5 times, 1 member 4 times, 2 members 3 times, 1 member twice.

Your Council has not had much more than the usual routine of work before it during the past year, and if the work is to be done at all it would appear as if the Board of Trade was the last medium through which it could be accomplished. For instance, your secretary wrote in the neighborhood of 100 letters during the year, a great many in answer to enquiries that came to him or the Mayor, who usually refers each to the Board of Trade. Some of these, you may never be of any possible benefit to the town, but common courtesy demands that someone should answer them. During this year a committee of your Board went thoroughly into the matter of separation from the county, and in gathering the necessary information from other towns and cities quite a number of letters had to be written and answered. We have had several propositions for new industries up before the Council during the year, and each one was investigated thoroughly. As Lindsay is not in a position to float anything but a concern that has a good solid cash basis of work only, we can soon determine whether a proposition that comes before us has anything to it or not. It is a moot question whether anything is tolerated by citizens with the name hunter. It is very evident that most of the larger towns are getting tired of it, and the Toronto Board of Trade are promoting a bill before the Ontario Legislature to prohibit granting of bonuses. The Board of Trade are promoting a bill before the Ontario Legislature to prohibit granting of bonuses, or the selling of lots, making of loans, guaranteeing of bonds or stocks, or the selling of water, power, gas or other service, at less than cost.

During the year our factories have been worked to their capacities, but have now slackened off somewhat owing to the recent financial stringency. We think, however, that with the opening of navigation things will look up again, and we, as a country, will be all the better for the little breathing spell we have been forced to take, and we doubt Lindsay's factories will share in the good things going.

Our Town Council was good enough to vote the sum of $100 towards advertising Lindsay. This was done in the World's Week and the Toronto Globe and Mail and Empire, but, no doubt owing to the many strikes, nothing has as yet materialized. From all outward appearances our town was gradually filling up. A good class of houses are being erected, and in a few years there will not be many vacant lots left. The question as to whether the time has not arrived when we should make a start at permanent roadways is worthy of serious consideration, and we believe would be worth advertising by the Board. JAS. P. DONALD, Secretary.

Heavy Tips.

"Yes," said the talkative barber, "in recent years we barbers expect tips."

"I'll give you three," sputtered the man in the chair, as he blew the lather out of his mouth.

"You are very kind, sir."

"Yes, I'll give you a tip that this barber's soap tastes like sale grease; the razor feels like a saw, and if you don't stop clipping the skin off my ear I'll get up and knock you spiral in an inch of your life."

The Farmers' Short Course Is Attracting Large Crowds

Good Attendance at the Seed Judging and Stock Scoring Demonstration Tuesday and Wednesday—Bumper Audience at Academy Tuesday Night

AN APPRECIATION

Among the most prominent men of Canada, President Creelman, of the Ontario Agricultural College, is rapidly attaining an eminent position. For four years Mr. Creelman has filled the very responsible position of President, and for the College these have been years of rapid growth and development. In these years the "New President" has done things many and worthy, and has proven himself a brilliant successor to even such a able man as Dr. James Mills.

A brief sketch of President Creelman's career may prove of interest, for though he has visited every county of the Province he is personally known to but few in this district. As his really set sons disclosure, Mr. Creelman is of Irish parentage. Coming from the north of Ireland, the President's parents settled, about forty years ago, on a farm in Grey county, near Collingwood. Here a large family grew up, and two of the sons have been singularly successful. The eldest son, Mr. Adam Creelman, K. C., is today filling one of the most lucrative legal positions in Canada, that of solicitor of the Canadian Pacific Railway, while the younger son, Mr. G. C. Creelman, is President of Ontario Agricultural College and of its sister institution, the Macdonald Institute.

OWARD AND UPWARD

Having spent his early years on the farm, Mr. Creelman took a course at the Collingwood Collegiate Institute, and then turned toward the Agricultural College. Graduating from the College in 1885, he went directly to the Mississippi State Agricultural College, as Professor of Botany. He remained in Mississippi until 1896, and while in the south took the degree of M. S. Returning to Ontario, Mr. Creelman was for four years Superintendent of Farmers' Institutes for the Province in his position he gave proof of great administrative and executive ability, not only in the organization of a make rapid growth, but new branches of work were established, the front of the work kept abreast of the times, organized, and more closely associated with the Farmers' Institutes. Mr. Creelman's work had been so well watched, and when in 1904 the position of President of the College unexpectedly became vacant, the Minister of Agriculture at once selected Mr. Creelman to fill the position.

A POPULAR SPEAKER

President Creelman is widely known both in Canada and in the United States. He has recently filled the position of Secretary and President of the Canadian Association of Farmers' Institute Workers. These positions have brought him into close and valued touch with the Agricultural Education in all parts of Canada. As a public speaker he has attained wide popularity, and during the last few years has delivered addresses at some of the largest state universities of the United States. Always strong and virile, his style is peculiarly original and characteristic, and his addresses are brilliant with striking epigrams and poignant humor. A keen perceiver, independence and resourcefulness are marked in a situation, the thought that is in him, and a ready command of strong, serviceable English, make him acceptable to any audience, and give to his public utterances weight and authority.

The Opening Sessions.

Evening Post of Jan. 29

Yesterday was the opening day of the Short Course in Stock and Seed Judging. The lectures have started out surprisingly well attended, considering the weather and bad roads. Farmers from all parts are late, and everywhere present seems to have a keen interest in the work. The lectures are sparing no pains that this may be an interesting as well as an instructive series of meetings, and the farmers seem unitedly to appreciate this, as the best thing that has ever been offered them.

Yesterday morning's meeting, which was to have been devoted to seed judging between 9 and 10 had to be postponed owing to the non-arrival of Prof. Zavitz. However, the men soon set to work on the cattle judging, and spent a very interesting hour and a half. Each was given a score card and asked to place his opinion of the animal on the ringe, on a set of points. When the two judges, one of the lecturers gave opinions of the animal and the reasons for their decisions, the audience present compared the Professor's opinions with his own, and was free to ask any questions that shed light for any counter opinion.

The attendance was about one hundred and fifty, and the interest was keen.

AFTERNOON SESSION

In the afternoon an audience of about three hundred gathered to judge and hear lectures on the judging of Shorthorns and Angus. Angus, fat stock and breeding stock. The session was particularly interesting and pleased all.

The cattle so kindly supplied for the work yesterday and TUESDAY belonged to well known farmers not far from Lindsay, Mr. Wm. Channon and Mr. Geo. Gordon, notwithstanding the bad roads and cold weather. His herd, which had a very small starting a year or so ago, has grown so rapidly growing in quality, till it is now one of the finest in the county. Yesterday he had his shorthorn cows and one bull were on the stage. Mr. Gordon's Angus were brought down from his fine herd, and Mr. John Deyell, a fine bull, for the meeting to work on.

"THE NEW AGRICULTURE"

Subject of Last Night's Address by Professor Creelman.

The attendance at the Academy of Music last evening was calculated to cheer the hearts of all who have the uplifting of agriculture in view. The theatre was filled both upstairs and downstairs, in response to the announcement that Prof. Creelman, President of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, would deliver a talk in connection with the Stock and Seed Demonstration, introduced by Mr. P. H. Reed, B.S. A., teacher of Agriculture on the Collegiate Institute staff.

Mr. S. J. Fox, M.P.P., officiated as chairman. Seated on the stage were Warden Mason and colleagues, of the County Council, also Mayor Begg, Reeve Jordan and others of the town Council.

Songs by Mr. J. N. Gray and Master Ernest Gray, with Mr. Gray at the orchestra, came first on the program and got the audience in fine fettle.

Prof. Creelman was fittingly introduced by the chairman, and his hearers quickly fell under the spell of his eloquence and evident earnestness. Beginning with a brief reference to the crowded state of the College at Guelph and the cosmopolitan character of the student body, represented almost every portion of the world, the Professor remarked that as a result of the cosmopolitan character of the College they manifested an intelligent interest in everything, not only from the country, but also from the towns and cities on Ontario; too many asked to attend the College only see farmers' sons, and thus live stock and the field records. Some people, who represent in theme cities only see farmers' sons, and farm have but up a false standard of life and profess a disdain for things of the land. Well, the country people wealth from the old land still manifest a deep interest in things of the earth, and Shakespeare and Addison drew well done so, and our kinsfolk in the Motherland, a keen interest in entering his analysis in the stock competitions and competitions in the different lines of work—purely, then, we could see that feel contact with the soil degrades us.

There is a false standard, beyond question, and it must be done away with if we would make true progress. The town or city people visit the farm at the wrong season owing to the difference in the holiday seasons. The townspeople see the farmer at his busiest period and in his rustiest working clothes; then when the farmer visits the town or city he meets the square man, dressed in the latest fashion, bonded, and he stops back and says, later, "Say, you're a dude." The fact is both were mistaken as they should be considering their work. Both classes must come to recognize that each must make allowance for the other and come to understand one another better if advance is to be made along right lines. Don't be misled by the foolish remarks of some people concerning the filling of the soil — there are hundreds, yes, thousands, of people in the cities who would, if it were generally known, look to the farm in order to be sure of enough good things to eat. (Applause.)

The overpercent competition in the cities is fierce. He had a large friend who after years of hard and expensive study, feared he would be forced to go to the wilds of New Ontario and accept a job offered him there in order to pay his grocery bills; another educated man he accepted a position as teacher on Manitoulin Island at $35 per month. He (Prof. Creelman) advised the young farmer friend to make careful inventory of himself, his farm, buildings, stock and everything, and see if there was justification for his complaint of crowding. (Applause.) He met money to live in Toronto and in most towns; everything is high in price, and milk sold at 8c a quart in Toronto, and the quality is only ordinary. A Galt boy had got it about right when he said he was glad to get back so that he could get milk from a cow instead of a can. (Applause.) Many of the boys who went to the discontent of a farmer who had only earned $400 over and above expenses in a year, while a cousin or in the city had earned a salary of $4000. Well, not essentially of one per cent. of the people living in the cities were even $100 ahead at the end of the year unless they happened to have a private income. The farmer ought to quit his grumbling, because he is assuming the most independent class on the face of the earth. Some have got in the way, however, of looking on a farm merely as a place to raise what we eat, and that the improvements talked of by up-to-date farmers should be for John Jones or someone else to carry into effect. That is a mistake—we must look on ourselves as part of this grand heritage of ours—this magnificent country whose fields yield the best wheat, the best grasses, the best fruit, the best cattle, the best of everything, in fact. Farmers are not a grumbling class, no doubt the statement sounded queer, but it was a fact. It would be well for farmers, and for people, similar luxuries, nor for the services of too many hired men. The power of the soil work day in and day out the history of neglected farms is the history of farmers who have not done so. There are 200,000 heads of families on the farms of Ontario, and the farmers' investment represents something over one billion dollars—hence our farmers are engaged in a business dollar business—nothing less thing. A peculiarity of the business is that the more competition there is, the more money is made by every one body. He had heard that many of Victoria County farmers were live men, he could, he said, well believe them to persevere, and get others to enter the lists also, so as to create a market for your local produce. Canadian farmers had made some strides of late years. In the early days the dairy industry failed, and of our makers were scratched off the market because of their inferior butter shipments, our great dairy industry with the Motherland in there two years and a half, and a million pounds of butter. How have we accomplished this? Not by following the old ruts, but by adopting the ideas by every chesemaker has been to the Dairy School in Kingston, or elsewhere, and knows how to apply the ideas — if his patrons will allow him. He (Prof. C.) wished our dairy men were better fed, and better. He wished our cows were better, yet a great advance had taken place. He made a plea for more good cell experience had to guard against many uncertainties when fixing values and estimating investment. He understood that Victoria County had a herd of 1000 cows. The average farmer gave 3000 lbs of milk a year, yet at the College it there was a cow that gave 20,000 lbs of milk in one year. There was a big difference in the value of the cows. Farmers should be encouraged to keep a cow that is known to be no good — perhaps because the wife likes her, or she is a pet of the children's — while an ugly animal, with a record of 8000 or 9000 lbs., is sent to the Shambles.

No, we are not poor farmers — to the glory of our English, Irish, Scotch and French farmers be it said that without any aid they have doubled the output of our farms in the last eight or nine years (Applause) but, and he farmer who has been making only $400 a year will soon discover how to make $800. The farmer who has never had feeding of live stock, we want quality in our animals, we want our herds built up by the best sires, we want bigger farms, our better farming; we must cease cultivating a lot of land good, and that better near home. If we have and a knowledge of how to make necessary repairs. At the College we had a short course where students were allowed to take apart and so, machines and engines, and in one line of the course, they spent a month off each year from the age of 16 to 20, and spend the time in the work of the College, and acquiring useful information in some other way. There is too much of the war chorus that is in the hard man; he should be encouraged to take up the pursuing that line for which they seem to have a partiality and aptitude.

Of Reference to the Short Course, Lindsay was one of six schools in the province favored by the Government with a lecturer on agriculture department. Mr. P. H. Reid, B.S.A., the teacher selected for Lindsay, was a recent graduate of the Ontario College and checked of course up-to-date ideas and enthusiasm. He (Prof. C.) mentioned the fine farms of Victoria to get out of them all that was in him — he was the right man in the right place. (Applause.)

A word or two about higher education — Canada's system was admittedly a superior one, but why on earth should the fruit of all instruction be in the direction of the University when only a small percentage of the students may attend? Surely it shouldn't there be more Nature study and practical work? We must break into that conceited system somewhere if we are going to make our farmers' sons and daughters useful citizens. If the school trustees of school girls and young women were being taught anything about keeping a home, or about the more planning to manage large establishments of their own when they got married, out he would be surprised if, when they grew up, they did not have to bake and sew, and do the other work of the home. Surely it was a fact that only 5 per cent of the homes of the province employed a cook. He hoped trustees of Victoria County should engage teachers capable of instilling lessons along the line of the domestic duties that their pupils, and they should as well paid for so doing. (Applause).

At 7.30 the meeting at the speaker was moved, by County Councillor Wilson, of Mariposa, and seconded by ex-Reeve Taylor Parkin.

Songs by Master Percy Mulhern and Miss Ethel Grey brought the program to a close.

Wednesday's Sessions.

This morning Prof. Zavitz was on hand, and gave a very interesting lecture on grain crops, and oats in particular. Each person was seated at a table and given several packets of seed, on which he was to do the experiments in the lecture grieceded. Many good points were brought out, and as the subject of oats was not entirely finished, the Professor decided to continue the same grain to-morrow morning.

At 10 the meeting met again to deal with Ayrshires, Jerseys and Dairy Shorthorns, and passed a very interesting afternoon. First, Mr. S. Dr. Alex. Hume of Menie Stock Farm, gave an interesting lecture on dairy cattle.

THE PROPER CARE OF CREAM AND MILK IN THE FARM DAIRY

Some Indispensible Essentials if First-class Quality in Product is Aimed at by the Producer or Maker.

There are four foundation stones upon which to build in order to make dairying a success—the Typical Dairy Cow, An Interested Dairy Farmer, Cleanliness, and immediate Cooling after Milking or Separating.

Milk in the udder of a healthy cow is absolutely pure, therefore in order to have good, sweet butter and cheese, milk must be kept in a pure, clean condition. All milk contains bacteria, which is the very small out form of plant life. These germs enter the milk immediately after milking. They are found on the cow's flank, hair, manure particles, bedding, and also found in bad air, dirty stables and bad drinking water.

These very minute forms of plant life will lie in a dormant condition in unfavorable conditions, but in a favorable condition will develop very rapidly. Milk is a favorable food for the development of these minute organisms, and when they once enter the milk it is impossible to have them removed. It cannot be accomplished by a strainer, as some imagine. The hair, manure particles, etc., may be strained, but the germ life is planted to remain. There are several species of germs which may be classed as belonging into two forms—the desirable and the undesirable.

The, unmalleable, or filth germs, get into the milk during milking. These give and flavor to the milk, which is a source of complaint by consistency.

Aside from bacteria that enters the milk in many ways, a great amount of genuine filth finds its way into the milking receptacle.

The whole remedy is cleanliness and immediate cooling, and immediate separation and cleanliness all the time, and the whole time. The dairyman should consider when caring for milk and cream that he is preparing human food for table uses, and should handle it as a clean, tidy lady would set up a good meal, or milk, cream, butter and cheese are four foods used extensively for table use. Cream cannot be properly cared for under present conditions. In order to have the best results for the manufacture of a first-class finished product, it is as necessary for the farmer to change or cold water to cool the milk or cream as it is for the manufacturer.

CREAM DELIVERED TO THE CREAMERY IN A SOUR, COAGULATED CONDITION WILL NOT GIVE AS GOOD YIELD, BUTTER OR AS GOOD QUALITY AS SWEET CREAM, NOR WILL IT GIVE AS GOOD YEAR'S SATISFACTORY.

It is very important to have milk or cream cooled down to 50 degrees as soon after separation as possible and kept cool. This checks the growth of the lactic acid, or desirable germs, and also checks the development of any foul flavors that may have entered the milk.

Have clean cows, clean barnyards, and clean stalls. Brush the loose dirt from the flank and udder of the cow, and then wipe the udder with a damp cloth.

Remove milk or cream from the cows as soon as possible.

Keep dust and dirt out of it. Use clean tin pails for milking. Wash the hand separator after every skimming.

Skim a rich cream; my from 25 to 35 deg. B.F. More butter of a better quality can be made from a rich cream than a thin cream, and the cream is easier kept sweet and nice than a thin cream. You have less milk to care for with a rich cream. You can churn at a lower temperature with a rich cream, which means less loss in the buttermilk. A rich cream will give you more skim milk for feeding.

Never mix warm milk or cream with the old. This will raise the temperature of the old and develop germs of a undesirable nature. Don't cover the cans till the milk or cream is cooled.

I would emphasize the importance of delivering cream sweet to the creamery. In order to have sweet cream, I find the same sample will vary as much as five per cent. We have been gathering cream three times twice a week in the summer months and never test it sour; always in a fine sweet condition. Such cream delivered to any creamery will yield more butter of a better quality than sour cream or ripe. It is simply impossible to supply sour ripe cream. The manufacturer cannot make only a medium or better quality, butter than the milk or cream delivered him no more than the miller can make a high grade of flour than the quality of wheat he grinds. I believe the flavor of cream should be considered in the value of cream as well as the quantity of butter fat. It is our fair for the careful dairymen to have his clean, sweet cream put in the same vat as his neighbor's who delivers a badly-flavored cream. I would say the fair way would be to have the cream graded—say, First, and Second, and Third. The Second grade churned by itself and sold under a separate brand. This system would encourage the clean, careful dairy farmer, and discourage the careless fellow who is now under the same conditions as himself, by giving him a premium at the expense of the good cream delivered.

COUNCIL OF BOARD OF TRADE SUBMITTED REPORT LAST EV'G

A Number of Thoughtful Allusions Made Therein—Annual Meeting on Thursday Evening for Election of Officers and Other Business.

Evening Post of Jan. 29

The Council of the Board of Trade held its last meeting for the year last evening, when several communications were read and referred to special committees for investigation and report. Messrs. Ray and Gluess were appointed auditors for the year. It was decided to hold the annual meeting for the election of officers on Thursday evening, in the Council chamber.

The following is the report of Council for the year:

To the members of the Lindsay Board of Trade:

Your Council takes pleasure in submitting herewith the report of its proceedings for the year just ended. The Council has met 19 times, and the attendance has been as follows: 2 members 19 times, 1 member 18 times, 3 members 8 times, 1 member 7 times, 2 members 6 times, 5 members 5 times, 1 member 4 times, 2 members 3 times, 1 member twice.

Your Council has not had much more than the usual routine of work before it during the past year, and if the work is to be done at all it would appear as if the Board of Trade was the last medium through which it could be accomplished. For instance, your secretary wrote in the neighborhood of 100 letters during the year, a great many in answer to enquiries that came to him or the Mayor, who usually refers each to the Board of Trade. Some of these, you may never be of any possible benefit to the town, but common courtesy demands that someone should answer them. During this year a committee of your Board went thoroughly into the matter of separation from the county, and in gathering the necessary information from other towns and cities quite a number of letters had to be written and answered. We have had several propositions for new industries up before the Council during the year, and each one was investigated thoroughly. As Lindsay is not in a position to float anything but a concern that has a good solid cash basis of work only, we can soon determine whether a proposition that comes before us has anything to it or not. It is a moot question whether anything is tolerated by citizens with the name hunter. It is very evident that most of the larger towns are getting tired of it, and the Toronto Board of Trade are promoting a bill before the Ontario Legislature to prohibit granting of bonuses. The Board of Trade are promoting a bill before the Ontario Legislature to prohibit granting of bonuses, or the selling of lots, making of loans, guaranteeing of bonds or stocks, or the selling of water, power, gas or other service, at less than cost.

During the year our factories have been worked to their capacities, but have now slackened off somewhat owing to the recent financial stringency. We think, however, that with the opening of navigation things will look up again, and we, as a country, will be all the better for the little breathing spell we have been forced to take, and we doubt Lindsay's factories will share in the good things going.

Our Town Council was good enough to vote the sum of $100 towards advertising Lindsay. This was done in the World's Week and the Toronto Globe and Mail and Empire, but, no doubt owing to the many strikes, nothing has as yet materialized. From all outward appearances our town was gradually filling up. A good class of houses are being erected, and in a few years there will not be many vacant lots left. The question as to whether the time has not arrived when we should make a start at permanent roadways is worthy of serious consideration, and we believe would be worth advertising by the Board. JAS. P. DONALD, Secretary.

Heavy Tips.

"Yes," said the talkative barber, "in recent years we barbers expect tips."

"I'll give you three," sputtered the man in the chair, as he blew the lather out of his mouth.

"You are very kind, sir."

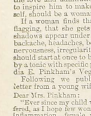
"Yes, I'll give you a tip that this barber's soap tastes like sale grease; the razor feels like a saw, and if you don't stop clipping the skin off my ear I'll get up and knock you spiral in an inch of your life."

A TRULY IDEAL WIFE

HER HUSBAND'S BEST HELPER

Vigorous Health is the Great Source of Power to Inspire and Encourage —All Women Should Seek It.

One of the most noted, successful and richest men of this century, in a recent article, has said, "Whatever I am and whatever success I have achieved in the world I owe all to my wife. From the day I first knew her she has been my inspiration, and the greatest helpmate of my life."



Mrs. Bessie Ansley

To be such a successful wife, to retain the love and respect of one of her husband, to inspire him to make the most of himself, and be a source of constant help, is a woman's ambition that all should share.

If a woman finds that her energies are flagging, that she gets easily tired, dark shadows appear under her eyes, she has backache, headache, bearing-down pain, nervousness, irregularities of the kind, she should at once set to work to build up her system by a tonic with specific powers, such as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Following we publish by request a letter from a young lady:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:

"For since my health was born I have suffered, as I hope few women ever have, with inflammation, ulceration, bearing-down pains, backache and wretched headaches. It affected my stomach so I could not enjoy my meals, and half my time was spent in bed.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me by a friend who had been given up to waste away in a decline. It brought me health, new life and vitality. Yours, Miss Esther Blakely, 611 South 11th Street, Tacoma, Wash.

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for Mrs. Ansley it will do for every sick and ailing woman.

If you have any ailment you don't understand, write to Mrs. Pinkham, Confidential, Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free and always helpful.

The Care of Chickens Explained by An Expert

Interesting Lecture by a Toronto Poultry Raiser of Note.—"The Hen That Lays is the Hen That Pays"—Improved Method of Preparing Fowl.

Evening Post of Jan 24.

Reeve George Jordan occupied the chair at the poultry meeting Wednesday evening, and introduced the speaker, Mr. L. H. Baldwin, of Deer Park, Toronto, in a few neat sentences.

The latter, in opening, complimented the officers and members of Poultry Association on the fine show held under their auspices, and the superior quality of the birds. The poultry was so generally forced as the poultry product, a fresh egg was a luxury, in addition to their breakfast tables, and boarding house keepers could probably secure more with chickens than with any other form of meat. He would say, however, with reference to the study side of poultry, that it was essential we should produce the best and bring it to the market in the best condition possible. The glut in the market usually came in the fall of the year, and consequently, if farmers and dealers collecting every available bird and marketing it, prices would be low, as in our case Toronto. Still, the price of the best fowl was just arrived at, and by the time January came it was good.

How can we produce the best? The first essential is that we have the right breed, and then we cannot keep from being, and the laying hen is the proper form. We not always depend upon the surroundings—we know that from our own experience. We know that a hen confined in a close atmosphere cannot withstand as much as the person who lives out doors. Fresh air has exactly applies to poultry. It is a mistake to attribute disease to the surroundings. Good poultry raisers now do. An American expert once said to him, "Put the hen in a warm house, and you will be forced to the care of houses convinced that animal keep in a cool and well ventilated house, rather than the one kept in warm quarters. So it is with fowl—it is far better to keep it in a cool house than a warmer one of down than the other, and it is healthier. It is wise to keep the fowl cool, so the windows in the poultry house should be on the side in the middle of the day in order that wherever the sun is bright, the fowl have been released from chicks under dry conditions, to introduce them into a warm house. The fowl will produce full moults, and the roos lien can't do a new coat as it can also on the other side.

In raising birds, whether by incubation or under hens, if you are looking for vigor and healthfulness, it is into laying condition at the right season. It is held to be a mistake to force the fowl into laying in August, as they often will when hatched in March. It is a mistake to force the fowl to lay them laying in October and continue to do so all winter, as they are not worth more than two dozen later in the spring. He would recommend chicks be hatched in March, and when they be placed further away from the house than is usually the case, and on a more ground. Lice are contagious. No doubt all understand how the rotation of crops—fresh ground about the house has any germs, lice, etc, the injurious effects are avoided if the chickens are placed on fresh ground. The best flock of chickens he had ever seen was at Guelph College, in the centre of a 20-acre field of corn. After the chicks had been occupied for a few days they were allowed to range wherever they got no water, and didn't seem to mind it a bit. They got plenty of clover and succulent grasses, and no doubt a certain amount of dew. The soaps need not be placed in the centre of a field. Dirtiness might find it more convenient to have them along the fence. His own best chickens were raised in a garden plot, and it was interesting to see how well the chickens occupying the rows of cabbages on space of ground and also the chicks were transfered according to the rotation of crops, and so got new ground. One of the most successful poultry raisers was the overcrowding of coops; he used the 7x7 coop, which gave the chicks ample room and fresh ground. The coops should be moved with each chick day, the object being to give the chicks fresh ground and also bring them gradually into the hen house in fall.

After the birds had become old enough to roost it would be the right time to take over the coops and put in its stead a roosting coop capable of holding 12 birds, and protected from the rain and wind. The chicks should be kept in a dry place and well kept. Shelter. When first hatched dry feeding is best. It was essential into the production of good eggs. Chicks which hatch were five or six weeks old they could be fed, meat, meat meal and bone meal, and not be exactly fed of it or get none. Of course, the meat should be thoroughly dry and prepared for market. Keep the windows of the henhouse open daily and let the fowl have the run of the house, sometimes the changes causes them to stop laying, when there is a change in the weather, but they will be injured permanently. If fed to much grain they become too fat. Hard grain is not good for layers and meat. If you discover a poor layer as a pullet you can be sure she will not be any better if or great one. Of course, the hen that lays the most eggs is the better; later on they will do well if kept for breeding.

A vote of thanks to the speaker was moved by Mr. Wm. Flavelle and seconded by Mr. Ramsay, as follows:

A NEW METHOD OF KILLING.

Mr. Jas. Scott, of Midland, exhibited his improved method of killing fowl. The birds legs were placed in a loop of a cord suspended from the ceiling, and by means of a foothook caught in the loop, the cord was attached to a cord was hung about a foot below the head. An incision was then made in the roof of the mouth, the blood fell into the pail below, and in about a minute the bird was ready for plucking. This method of killing, Mr. Irvin said, made the bird worth a cent a lb more than other fowls.

Growing Girls Need Pink Pills

This Tonic is Necessary for Their Proper Development and to Insure Health and Strength.

There are throughout Canada thousands and thousands of young girls who are in a condition approaching a decline. The complexion is pale or sallow, appetite fickle. A short walk or climb produces palpitation, breathless and with a violently palpitating heart. Headaches and dizzy spells are common. In such cases the doctors call this anaemia—which, in common English, means a lack of blood. It is just one sure and certain cure for this trouble—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mrs. Joseph Lapointe, of St. William's Pink Pills at once and see how speedily they will cure your girl. Miss Ethel Ward writes: Here is the proof. Mrs. Joseph E. Lapointe, St. Jerome, Que., says: "My daughter Ethel was unable to pursue her health at the age of thirteen years. She was pale, had palpitation and loss of appetite. Her appetite was poor, she was pale and apparently bloodless. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured her, and she is now able to do her share of work. Doctors' medicine failed to cure her and I thought she was going into a decline. She was in this condition for several months when a neighbor advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I decided to give them a trial. It was not long until she improved in health and the continued use of the pills for a month or more completely cured her and she has since enjoyed the best of health. I feel sure that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure any one of this kind."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will cure such troubles as the above, also such troubles as rheumatism, sciatica, indigestion, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance and the ailments that make the lives of so many women miserable. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Not a Miracle But Medical Science

Toronto, Ont.

Gentlemen,—

"Some time ago I began to lose flesh and lost my appetite, and was all run down. My physicians and all my friends said I had contracted consumption. I failed from 150 pounds down to 119. I was advised to go to the Canadian or the Adirondacks to both places under heavy expense. I consulted a local M.D. and was urged by the doctors to come home as nothing more could be done for me. Many persons to have left me.

"I read Dr. Peoples and since starting its use I have gained from 119 to 141 pounds. I was weak and pale, and the medicine. I am a well man and I cannot say too much in favor of Dr. Peoples. The strongest recommendation would be that my friends see the fat I have. I believe it has saved my life. It is without doubt the best remedy for run-down conditions and weak lungs.

Liberal Rally At Beaverton

W. J. Kester, of Scott, is Again the Candidate—Large Gathering.

Beaverton Express: When the President's panel called the convention to order in the Orange hall, the largest party of North Ontario, which had been called in convention in Akenson hall, Beaverton, last night, was well represented. From every part of the riding delegates had come, and the large hall was filled, perhaps, with the largest in many years. The presence of Hon. A. G. McPhillips, the party leader in the Legislative Assembly, and the close proximity of the provincial election, undoubtedly mainly the causes of the interest. The usual number of honorary nominations were made, and the result was really understood Mr. W. J. Kester, of Scott, a former candidate in the riding would again be put in nomination. All therefore retired, leaving Mr. Kester the nominee by acclamation. The usual resolutions and addresses calculated to raise the enthusiasm of the party were made by Mr. A. E. McPhillips, Mr. Geo. Ward, D. Grant, M.P. It was noticeable however, that no phrase was not spoken regarding or referred to, Mr. Ross of yore, and there appeared a very significant chilliness in the allusions, especially when it was found that a certain influential section of the constituent was inclined to be in the wrong side, whoever he might be, making himself plain as to his position as liberal, and the speakers, in their references earnest to do. It was delightful to watch the efforts to evade an expression of opinion on this question, all evidently being still afraid of an influence which they could not see and almost dreaded to see, but not until a late hour that Mr. Kester could be gravely upon to accept the nomination, and he gave an answer to certain private objections, but he will undoubtedly make a very acceptable candidate.

HOW SHE KEEPS BEAUTIFUL.

The Mystery Solved.

Like the flowers that bloom in the spring the young girl just budding into womanhood is as charming as she is delicate. Her beauty is the result of perfectly healthy, well-balanced constitution and of her health and constitution remain good. Let her be careful, and have plenty of sleeping nights, and how soon does it take for wrinkles—crow's feet and dark circles to appear in the face? Her cheeks were rosy but she has begun to suffer from woman's weaknesses and the constantly recurring pain. Her cheeks fade away so quickly from the beautiful age to the premature middle age. It is not meant for women to suffer so—it is due to over fastidiousness, but civilized methods of living, and to the fact that we have neglected those small life which soon lead up to larger ones. Nothing so drags a woman down as these constantly recurring periods when she suffers more and more from a chronic condition that can be easily cured. No woman should use an alcoholic compound for that will disturb digestion, and the food is quickly exceptional and becomes hard and tough in contact with the stomach, rendering the food indigestible. She must go to Nature for a cure. The native Indians of early times were far from wrong when they called a successfully effective medicinal plant "Squaw root"—what the Indian squaw knew about childbirth, physicians now of our day called hydrastis or Blue Cohosh. This and Black Cohosh (Black root), Lady's Slipper and Unicorn root, are important medicinal ingredients of a powerfully active nature, used in modern times, namely, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which Dr. Pierce made a specialty of the diseases of women in the early years. It is a concentrated glycerine extract of these roots with Hydrastic root, Black root and Lady's Slipper root, combined in just the right proportions, made the most powerful remedy for the distressing complaints of women. Where other medicines fail, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, or Medical Discovery, is the most powerful remedy. It is therefore this prescription directed attention to the diseases of such cases. That is why Dr. Pierce soon had a world-wide reputation. He procured all over the United States.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets, so far from being the condition that afflicts some women and children, constipation, headaches, and pains almost unbearable. An hour after taking a Pellet the bowels are moved and the system is cleansed. Nature has been assisted to the opportunity of doing her work. Dr. Pierce's Pellets are a most powerful remedy for stubborn complaints which weaken a woman's strength. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Dr. Pierce not only assures the public that "Favorite Prescription" is honestly made, but he lets you know just what it is made of.

The best of medical authorities recommend the use of Glycerine and Medicinal Ingredients in "Favorite Prescription." Dr. F. Ellingwood, Professor of Materia Medica, Bennett Medical College, Chicago, says of Black Cohosh, "It is an important remedy in disorders of the uterus. In all cases where Lady's Slipper root be apt, Black Cohosh root is a valuable substitute, and in certain conditions it is the most efficacious remedy." Dr. Pierce's Pellets pain, etc." Prof. Ellingwood, Ex-President of the Eclectic Medical Society, says of Black Cohosh root: "This is a most powerful remedy, and valuable remedy." "Plays a very prominent part in diseases of women in the painful conditions incident to womanhood. It is frequently used in combination by no other drug, being of great value in the treatment of the diseases of women." "The action is slow, but its effects are permanent." "It is the best remedy for uterine pain from neuralgia or dysmenorrhea it is especially useful."

Dr. John Fyfe, of Saugatuck, Conn., author of "Practical Hints on Practice in Time Exercise Review says of Unicorn root, "Unicorn root is of the chief Ingredients of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which is a most valuable remedy." "Plays a very prominent part in diseases of women in the painful conditions incident to womanhood." "Is frequently used in combination by no other drug, being of great value in the treatment of the diseases of women." "The action is slow, but its effects are permanent." THE FIELD OF SPORT

What is Occurring in the Town and District, and Sporting Circles Generally.

Hockey.

SURPRISE FOR SOMEBODY

Peterboro Review: A big crowd will go to Lindsay on Friday night to see the game between Lindsay and Peterboro in the intermediate O H A series, which promises to be the best game seen in the district this year. The locals are going to get back some of their reputation by putting it over Lindsay on their own ice, and the line-up will be entirely different from that that expected Peterboro. A number of regular faces will be seen on the ice, and as the outfit has been practicing faithfully they are confident of demonstrating to the Victorious Midgets that all the hockey in the district is not played in Lindsay town. The Senior people spent $200 at the game, the old variety between the two towns bringing out the crowd.

LINDSAY II—PETERBORO 8

Evening Post of June 25

The fastest game of the season was played last night between the Peterboro Strathconas and the Lindsay Intermediates, at Lindsay-st. rink, before a crowd of over a thousand enthusiastic spectators. Too much cannot be said of the game put up by the Intermediates, every man playing his best, while the new man Taylor, seemed to be all over the ice at once all evening; wherever the puck went or was likely to go, "Goosie" was sure to be there. He seemed made of steel, and despite the fast and hard game he played, remained quite fresh till the end. Boyle was the centre of all eyes in his spectacular rushes, and the number of hard knocks he took, and attempted tripping he overcame was wonderful. When the Straths saw him starting on one of his marvellous rushes, the whole team generally dropped their positions and unobtrusively themselves together to stop him. The only thing that could do it, however, was trippings he overcame was wonderful even from McWilliams and Andrew Randall also put up a good game, remarkable for the fact that even when a Peterboro man took him by the throat and threw him up in the air he kept his head and didn't get ruled off through fighting. He did some good work with the puck, too. In fact every man on the team deserved a medal, and that each was the right man in the right place, and put up the game of their lives.

The Strathcones' line-up was: Wasson, goal; Glover, point; Fairbell, cover-point; Bay, rover; Flanigan, centre; McWilliam, left wing; Ross, right wing. It was a star combination and the hardest team they has run up against this season. They had practiced hard since the last break with Lindsay, and had all the and almost the entire line-up for last year men, in fact all out two or three of the line-up at last game and their places taken by men who played senior men last year. Peterboro no sound to wing whether or no, but have found out boys can put it over the best team they could raise in either intermediate or senior hockey. Our Midgets of the Junior League had just whipped the Strathconas, whose men played senior hockey last year.

Notes on the Game.

Cole played a good hard game. He plays a the corners better than the just game, and is a hard right there for a lot of combination work.

Randall was up against the hardest man from Peterboro, McWilliams, an old Midget, who has improved much since he left here. He roughed it continually and had more trouble Adam anyone else on the ice. But he couldn't get Randall into trouble. He took a sore face, was cut on the ear for 40 minutes and played a steady game. "Only off the ice once this winter," said he, after the game.

Referee McCord has been a long time in the business, and would not see Peterboro players "taking" "tripping" tripped last night. If a Lindsay player is checking, touched his opponent's face a Peterboro player would fall and McCord would penalize Lindsay.

Stockhart was the star of the forward line, with Cotey a close second.

The Examiner says: Even the remnant of the "Old Guard" were powerful enough to avert the defeat of the Strathconas in Lindsay last night, and the locals lost one of the hardest fought battles that has been seen in this district for years, going up down before the Midgets by a score of 11 to 8. The tally at half time was 8—4, with Lindsay in possession of the top end of the game, and although Peterborough had all the best of the last half, they could never get more than two goals to the Midgets. At that the game was close up to the end, and it was hard to kind or tuck the Straths should have scored oftener. On the play they were entitled to more goals, but they picked out many likely-looking shoes and others missed by narrow margins. Cotey was more looking for good hockey, but the many goals are accounted for partly at fault, by the fact that both defences played an open game, taking chances on frequent rushes. It was fast, hard hockey all the way, in which Lindsay had nothing on their opponents. The Midgets were helped by the boisterous cousins-like sides of the rink. When they had made of the goal the pond would rebound in front on the nets and there would be another shot before the defense could anticipate it more. Nearly all the goals in the first half were scored this way and it looked lucky for the Midgets

The above picture is a representation of "The Forbert Cup" the trophy put up for competition in the Town League last year by Mr. Jas. Forbert, the Shoemaker. It is at present held by the C. A. S. team, last year's winners, and they will put up a strong fight to retain possession of the coveted trophy.

Curling.

WILL COMPETE FOR TROPHY

A handsome curling trophy is on view in the window of Mr. Dutton's hardware store. It is in the form of a curling stone, supported on bronzes, and rests upon an ebony stand. It is to be competed for between the Curling Clubs of Fenelon Falls and Bobcaygeon, four rinks on a side, two to go to each village, at the same time, two contests to take place at each village. The basis of the winning club is to hold the trophy, and it will become the property of the club that succeeds in winning it three times successively. The first contest will take place at Bobcaygeon Thursday, Bobcaygeon being 3 up all round.—Bob. Independent.

WON THE PRIMARY

At practice last night the rinks won out in the competition in Group 1 of the Tankard and Primaries, defeating Newcastle in the Dance Saturday afternoon by a handsome score. Little defeated his opponent in the morning score of 34 to 2, while Skip O'Connor was 7 or 8 up.

It is expected that the Tankard games will be called on early next week.

CLAIMS TO BE "FAST GUN."

Gosa, Perry, late of the R. C. R., Halifax, whose home is in Barrie, now he is reported to have arrived. He claims to be able to do 2 1-2 miles in 12 minutes flat, and 1 1-2 cross country in a fraction under 9 minutes.

SHRUBB BEAT FIVE

Alfred Shrubb, the English long-distance champion, defeated a five-mile field at Stockholm on June 18th. Shrubb covered the distance in 51 minutes and 33 2-5 seconds. When he finished he had a lapped advantage over Black Hawk, the last runner, two of which he had passed on Myers at the start. Shrubb runs a five-man combination at Philadelphia this week.

LONGBOAT'S FAST TRIAL.

Star; Tom Longboat, who has been away on the Indian reserve near Syrmoe for a visit to relatives, returned to Toronto Tuesday, and just to show Tom Flanagan that he had not seen or heard from Longboat since from his score at the Princess Theatre to the King and Queen-st. Longboat, accompanied by Jim Gibson, ran the greatest time he ever ran before.

MADE FAST TIME.

Toronto World: Claude Pearce, the Irish Canadian's 18-year-old runner, established a pedestrian record from Hamilton to Toronto that will likely last till the spring, but his wonderful run into the blizzard nearly all the way plainly shows that he can easily cut down the time considerably under favorable weather conditions. The record 14,729, and is the first of the kind, all previous attempts being failures by reaching in slow time. There was a relay mark between the sides of something like four hours.

RACING AT HAMILTON

It is said that the Hamilton Jockey Club have taken up the option to purchase the race track from the Park Company for $50,000, and that $40,000 has been paid on account. The glab will have to pay a rental of $2,000 a year until the whole of the purchase money is paid.

HE WON THE HEAT

"If you didn't take so much interest in horses you would be better off," snapped Mrs. Growler. "You have had horses on your brain all your life."

"I guess that is how I happened to marry a nagg" retorted Mr. Growler, his face unbecoming behind the sporting page.

ROUGH KIRKFIELD PLATES

The Valley Farm Stable has purchased from the Kirkfield Stable for $2,000 the pick of prospective King's Plate candidates; Kirkfield, to fill by the Dominion Government, Lot, b. f. by Gold Car or Martimas—Pee Weep; Shimonoe, b. f., by Martimas—Lydiade. Kirkfield was unplaced in the Guineas last year, Lydiade, the dam of Shimonoe, won the Plate in 1896 and 1897 with varied well. Mr. Rod McKenzie, the Kirkfield Stable owner, lives in Toronto and consequently his horses are not eligible to run in the Plate. For this reason he has disposed of these horses.

Odds and Ends of Sport.

A DIFFERENT STORY

Four years ago Tyr Cobb played baseball for a salary of $50 a month and thought himself fortunate to get that. This year he demanded $5,000 for the next season.

"PLAY FAIR."

"Play fair!" This principle must be made dominant in our Canadian life. It must rule in our sports, it must rule in politics, it must be taught to regard the unfair as the contemptible. We need teach them to the Canadian and develop the spirit of fair play that should be our characteristic as a people. We need Canadian energy. It should rule in our sports as it does in those of the Motherland. The player who takes a mean advantage should be hissed off the field. Unfairness should be chased with horse derogatory, and unfair or cribbing.

We are engaged in building the Canadian character. Let it be as we proposed to do, to build its structure and fashion its form that the people of other nations shall in the future point to us and say, "Here is the Land of Fair Play."—Hamilton Spectator.

New York, Jun. 22.—Henri Mosse, who is walking around the world in four years on a wager of 50,000 francs ($10,000), called on Mayor McClellan on Thursday to get the mayor's official signature for a certificate of his arrival in New York.

Mosse started with seven other men nearly four years ago to cover 40,000 kilometers. He lost three companions in Asia, and his natural death two were murdered in Abyssinia, one was killed in an accident in China, and two committed suicide in Turkey. In his walk Mosse has been in every continent. So far 40,000 kilometers or about 25,000 miles have been covered.

The wager will be decided on June 11, when Mosse is due in the Forrer, whence he started. He must pick up Mr. Henry Barbusse in Paris, and from Quebec will steam for France.

WILL GO TO LONDON

Low Sasser and Lindsay are expective announcements that he will positively row at the Olympic regatta in London next summer, representing the Toronto Rowing Club. Why should he not give all the wet trained the week next summer at Olympic?

IN GOOD COMPANY.

David Hartley, Peterboro's famous back-discover wrestler will take part in a big six-day walking tournament, at Kansas City, starting on February 21, under the auspices of the Missouri Athletic Club. He is the only Canadian invited to compete. He will meet Peter Weston, one of the world-famous pedestrians, and participate in the event, walking 12 hours a day.

A NEW PITCHING STUNT.

Mercy! Another elusive ball has been discovered. The new ball, which is known as the scratch ball, is the property of Moses Mannel, last year with New Orleans, but now a member of the Chicago White Sox. He uses a pocketful of starch during a game and delivers the ball a better effect on the ball than saliva, and claims his ball is an improvement on the spitter. Sporting Life.

NOT UNKNOWN IN LINDSAY

Toronto World: That cockfighting is a despicable pastime no one can deny, but that it is carried on in the parts is a sad but different story. They do still train roosters nowadays for the pit and a report from Buffalo shows how well Buffalo lovers were given a tremendous clinging by a man and his friends of Oshawa, last Thursday morning. The man was half drunk and had gone to wager on their stock, and thinking had a choice collection of birds he was shocked by the fact that they carried off the booty in bulging pockets. It is said that not one of the Buffalo "trial" birds escaped, and that such a clean-up has not been known in the cockfighting circles. The birds were weighed in before the main opened, but only fighting roosters were entered. The Oshawa winning the necessary seven, while the Buffalo birds could only score in four. The exact amount of money won and lost probably cannot be definitely stated, but it is said that the Buffalo losers owed about $1,000 poorer since the affair.

"Chancer" Elliott has been appointed athletic manager of the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association. "Chancer" was coach for the football team that won the big four championship for this also last fall, and will undoubtedly make one of the best men it ever had.

The Settlement A Dignified One

British Press Praises Canada's Agreement re Jap Immigration.

London, Jun. 22—The British press generally speaks in terms of praise of the agreement arrived at by Canada and Japan, and expresses the greatest pleasure at the friendly and friendly settlement of the immigration question. The Morning Post says that the consideration of attitude of Japan was inspired largely by her friendship for Britain. The Post graphic observes that it would be impossible not to contrast this dignified termination with the humiliating spectacle of British Indians in the Transvaal.

The Times says the passage in which Mr. Laurier turned to the Commander aspect of the immigration question, touching on the Britishness of Canada, Japan's sympathy with the appreciated the solidarity of the British race in matters relating to the rest of the world, and Japan's wonder a responsive thrill throughout the empire. "Commercialism," it says, "were admittedly concerned with a question of the utmost delicacy and secured voices and almost on an equality with them. It is a cheering sign of her sense of dignity and reality that she should thus begin her career with separate honor in the world by remembering that her strength and honor are bound up in the strength and honor of the mother country.

LINDSAY, FRIDAY, JAN 31st, '08

AN IMPORTANT MATTER.

In another column of this issue will be found a communication in which "Ratepayer" calls attention to a matter of considerable interest to Lindsay in a business way, and one in which the farmers of Manvers, Emily and South Ops are vitally interested. We refer to the south approach to Ops swing bridge, which was "improved" last summer by the County and Township Councils.

"Ratepayer", who is one of the solid men of the community, one whose modesty will not permit him to sign his name—knows a great deal about roads, and in conversation with The Post gave it as his firm opinion that the approach in question will be utterly impassable for loaded wagons next spring unless his advice is followed and a rock foundation constructed for the clay bottom road, way put down by the Commissioners in charge of the improvement.

Lindsay business men will quickly see the point of the matter. Whilst the bridge was being rebuilt and the approaches made they lost many good customers to Omemee and Janetville stores, and if the loss is to be repeated during the coming spring it will be a serious blow to them. That matters being certain, it is to be hoped that something will be done by the County and Township Councils along the line indicated.

ENTRANCE TESTS ARE GONE.

The education department has evaded the sane conclusion that the education of our youth is not to be regulated hereafter by their ability to stand certain specified tests, remarks the Kingston Whig. The minister (or the superintendent of education, as he is the technical authority,) has decided that the progress of many students has been seriously affected by the examinations.

There has been only the one way of passing from the public school to the high school, and from the high school to the university, or training school, and it has reduced all the candidates to a common level. It is conceded to be right and just that those who are going into the professions should be adepts in certain subjects, important in themselves, and essential in certain walks of life. But those who are going into industrial pursuits and seek the highest technical training the colleges afford, should not be handicapped by a devotion to studies which can have no material relation to the work they have in view.

Hence the abolition of the entrance examination, and the adoption of the "approved school system," which will allow students access to the secondary schools with the understanding that they, the model and normal schools, and even the schools of education, will give to the requirements of the teaching profession the attention that will overcome any defects in the standing of the students in the lower schools.

Here is the point of special interest to our School board, as it touches a question which came up last year, and was referred to the school management committee:

"Subject to judicious departmental control and direction, it is the aim of the education department to place upon the trustees and teachers the responsibility of providing, according to local needs, the education for life work which every pupil has the right to receive. As a result largely of the dominant examination influence, our school system has failed to take sufficient account of our economic condition. We have educated too many for clerical and professional pursuits, in which there is little room, and too few for industrial pursuits, in which there is always room. The future of life work demands that this shall cease."

The proposal to found a class in connection with the public schools to do advanced work and have preference to those who are desirous for industrial and commercial careers, takes on an important aspect in view of the proposed declaration from the education department.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Ontario has now more king's counsels than England and Wales.

The Toronto News does not spare Whitney though he snubs. It says the laws of business cannot be violated with impunity, and that Mr Whitney will discover that this is just as true in government as it is in finance and commerce.

Hamilton Times; Bottle Nesbitt? Ah, yes! We remember him now. Isn't he the fellow that sat out in chairs of the Globe editor with an armful of terrifying looking legal documents? What has become of him?

The New York Sun is quick to appreciate the great advantages which the new French treaty brings to Canada. It cordially admits that we have made an excellent bargain, and in a spirit which speaks congratulations as thereupon. How very different with the unpatriotic Tory organs, which seek by every means possible to misrepresent and discredit!

Mr. Asquith may succeed Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman in the titular leadership of the Liberal party, but he will not have the confidence to the extent, and confidence counts for a large percentage in leadership. Sir Henry held the confidence of his party in the dark times, and kept it in good times. In the bad times Mr. Asquith was out ploughing furrows with Lord Rosebery.

In the current issue of 'Varsity the magazine of Toronto University students, an article on the University Hymnal moves the Toronto Telegram to comment:

"Is the spirit of the article signed W. S. Milner the dominant spirit of the university of Toronto? If so, this possibility that justifies public comment on the culture that expresses itself in contempt for 'hot-house pietism,' its 'piffling refrains' and 'maze soothing' like 'God Be With You Till We Meet Again.'"

If the faculty of Toronto university desires to retain warm and pleasant relationships between the people and the university, which it might be profitable to do in view of the generous grants the provincial government is making to it, that spirit among the students should be discouraged. The great bulk of the people of Ontario are not educated above the humble songs of the church, nor do they want to be.

Montreal Herald; Dr. Macnamara, English M.P., wants to help the Canada about 20,000 children, now publicly reported, whom he declares are strong and healthy. That is all right, if the goods are as described, and the Canadian born dealer will find himself more popular here than the organizations which busy themselves ridding England of the same undesirable and unwilling to be employed classes, and unloading them on us Canada.

Toronto News: The recent panics in places of amusement should not be allowed to pass out of mind until the lesson has borne fruit. Every theatre, theatorium, hall or room in which the public is accustomed to assemble should be brought under such regulations to ensure protection against fire, and ample exits should be provided. (The suggestion made once more be advanced that the theatres should be compelled to bring all their exits into communication in connection with every performance. In this way the galleries of the playhouses will become habituated to these avenues of escape and resort to them in case of emergency instead of jamming one main entrance in a mad rush for safety.

Lord Cromer, who ruled so long and so wisely in Egypt, now which has returned home to the old country, has re-entered politics, and by the way he is making since his position on tariff and other tariffs, promises to be more or less of a bother among the Unionists. His recent speeches he has given no uncertain sound on the question of trade. He has come out boldly as a Unionist Free Trader, meeting all the arguments of his protectionist friends, and declaring that free trade makes for peace among the nations. One thing his opponents cannot do. They cannot charge him with being a Little Englander, one of their favorite weapons when they have otherwise baffled. Sir Arthur Balfour will have to reckon with Cromer in the coming campaign.

Montreal Witness: Courts of law in the United States are experiencing some difficulty just now in dealing with the breach contained in the doctrine saying that corporations have neither souls to be condemned nor bodies to be punished. A case just decided before the United States district court of New Jersey, which resulted in a decision by the presiding judge in support of the axiom. A company engaged in the manufacture of oleomargarine, having been found guilty by a jury in a lower court of violating the law in regard to the manufacture and sale of its product, appealed to the United States court. The decision of the judge was that he could not legally punish the offending company, though its guilt was clearly established, because the law required him to impose a sentence of imprisonment as well as a fine, and it was impossible to imprison a corporation. The question, however, the effect is to give manufacturers of oleomargarine and other like products a clear field for law-breaking in that state. An appeal has been entered, and the case will probably be carried to the Supreme Court of the United States. In involves the same question which has arisen in trade of railway companies for rebating, and of other corporations and trusts which have systematically violated the law, yet cannot be punished as the law directs. The difficulty may not be beyond the power of legislation to overcome, although it appears hard to devise a statute which will grant the penal personality of incorporated law-breakers for punishment.

By "The Stroller."

We met a prominent citizen of this town, the other day, a ratepayer, and he chided us, not for the observations we made from week to week but for those we did not make. He said it was all very well to write about the destruction caused by rats, the meeting of the Emperors, and John D. Rockefeller, but we had promised, at the start, to touch on local affairs—abuses was the word he used—and he wanted to know why we had not touched them for the last few moons. He went on to give us his opinion of what was being done, and what was not, but which ought to be. There was a liberal use of adjectives and adverbs, all going to show that the same gentleman was pretty well "bet up." At last we said, "Look here, old friend, we will put down just what you say, in good printable language, if you allow us to mention your name." Oh, no! he would not do that for the world, and we told him we were getting tired of playing the monkey with the chestnuts for him and his likes. We told him that a newspaper man was a good deal the same as the preacher. The preacher might beat the air, and pace the ground and pound the desk until none of his congregation could feel comfortable sleeping, when discovering no ill, and as long as he made his remarks general, everyone would go away satisfied. On the contrary, should he pick his hands with glee, and say to his wife that if "Jones had heard that sermon he would have jumped up, he was incorrigible, and Brown would be saying the same about Smith. At the dinner table Jones would look meaningly across the table, and remark to Jones matter that that sermon was just what Robinson needed, and the same notion would probably be in Robinson's mind about Jones. When the minister, however, came down from the upper deck, and put his arm around, and said, "Thou art the man," look out for squalls. It would be time then for that preacher to look around for another sat. The people will stand preaching about the "other fellow's" sins, but not about their own. They want "comfortable" preaching, or there will be trouble.

It is the same way with the local newspaper man. He can call Jonhn D. or Hitchman, anything he chooses. He can discuss kings and queens, and show up their inconsistencies. He can thinglumit the "other side" in either Ottawa or Toronto. He can even touch on the peculiarities of our own and only Sam, and it is all right, but when he gets down to everyday matters, that touch our fellows, then look out for trouble. It does seem very funny, but it is nevertheless true. A citizen will go up to a public meeting about something that has gone awry, and he (the official) can use language that—well, that would not look well in print—and yet if the same thing is put down on the page of news, even tenderly, the newspaper writer is criticized most unmercifully by the general public official. Sometimes the chronicler has to tone down, and in some cases leave out, language that has been used by some of these officers themselves about themselves, at their own meetings, and yet if the political boss is recorded to say one-fifth of something that is a common by-word amongst the people, the results are, as the boys would say, fierce. Some play the baby act, and although it makes one smile to see it acted, yet it is there to be put up with. So we told our friend that, in spite of the wrongs we had been gifted on the back, and been shaken cordially by the hand, and assured that we had, as a town, stood this and that sort of thing too long, we often had to go out to the back stoop and weep copiously at the way it has brought the hornets around our ears. When public servants, in a small hallowick like Lindsay, are not doing their whole duty, it is just as well to hand the town over to them until they are tired running it, if you go for them after they are out, it doesn't seem to hurt them so bad, but when they are—well, the common people are there to pay, not to find fault.

Economy in Chewing.

A man who allowed twenty cents worth of tobacco a week concluded to try a cure. In two weeks he ate $1.50 worth of the cure, and for the next two weeks he used ten cents worth of gum, five cents worth of candy, five cents worth of cough drops, and five cents worth of peanuts. During the two weeks he also consumed two rubber erasers, six the rubber tips from fourteen pencils, chewed up a dozen pen holders, and inveigled of his matchbox as high as he could reach. He is now chewing tobacco in the interest of economy.

Nearly Through.

A stranger entered a church in the middle of the sermon and seated himself in the corner pew. After a while he began to fidget. Leaning over to the white-haired man at his side, evidently an old member of the congregation, he whispered:

"How long has he been preaching?"

"Thirty or forty years, I think," the old man answered.

"I don't know exactly."

"I'll stay then," decided the stranger. "He must be nearly done."

License Reduction in Belleville.

Belleville, Jan. 29.—The question was last night presented to the City Council asking that the number of hotel licenses be reduced from sixteen to ten, and the license fee raised from $450 to $1,000; that shop licenses be reduced from sixteen to two, and the license fee raised from $450 to $700. The matter was referred to a special committee, and it looks as if Belleville is practically certain that the Council will submit the matter to the electorate, and that the vote will be taken, though they have the right to do so.

The Georgian Bay Canal.

(The Toronto News.)

The proposed Georgian Bay Canal would reduce the distance from Port Arthur to Montreal by 500 miles, and cut down the time consumed in the passage of a grain boat between the ports by two days. Vessels of 22-foot canal the largest grain boats could reach the ocean without breaking bulk, and the transportation cost would come down. The northern latitude of the projected waterway would give it for all time an advantage over the proposed Chicago-Mississippi route in the transport of perishable food stuffs in warm weather. These are the main features of the Canadian contention on the project presented to Parliament. What is the cost? Is there any need to give Canada confederation to the project? Herb. OBITUARY.

Thomas Gladman, Exeter.

Peterborough Review: The news of the death of Thomas Gladman will be learned with regret by many Peterborough citizens. A telegram received in the city this afternoon from Exeter, where he has resided with his son, Mr. F. W. Gladman, for the past two months, brought the sad news to his family and friends here of his rather sudden demise. At 11.30 this morning he became seriously ill and at 1.30 he passed away.

Mr. Gladman was 80 years of age. He was born at Moose Factory, Hudson's Bay, on May 28, 1826, and he has resided in Peterboro for 35 years. He was known during his life as a trustee prominent in religious circles, and had journeyed in almost every country of the globe.

His sons and daughters survive him, namely, Mrs. F. A. Kerr, G. G. Gladman, and Chas. Gladman, of Peterborough; Dazia, of Niagara Falls; Mrs. J. A. Morrow, Harry Sound, and F. W. Gladman, Exeter.

The body will be brought to Peterboro for burial and will arrive here on the noon C. P. R. train on Thursday. Interment will take place on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Henry Gladman, postmaster, of Lindsay, is a brother of the deceased. He will have the sympathy of our citizens in his bereavement.

James Wilson, Carden.

We regret to note the death of Mr. James Wilson, son of D. Wilson, Carden, which occurred on Jan. 25th, 1903 at the early age of 29 years and 5 months. He had been ill for about 3 months and in spite of his sufferings were very great, but in all his pain he was fully conscious of the Saviour's presence. A fortnight before he died he had a purgative dose of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills administered. All that medical skill could do for him was done, but without avail. Deceased was well known in his neighborhood and highly respected, and will be sadly missed by his many friends. He was a member of the Methodist church and Sunday school, and a regular attendant. Interment took place on Monday, Dec. 30th, and although the weather was very inclement a good number of people gathered together at the Dalrymple Methodist church, where a funeral sermon was preached by Rev. J. G. Bellamy, after which the remains were removed to Kirkfield cemetery for interment.

The Late John Graham, Sr., of "Blythe Fenelon Township."

The following from the Fenelon Falls Gazette will be read with regret by many of our citizens, including all who attended their summer's at Sturgeon Point:

The death of Mr. John Graham, sr., of "Blythe," on Friday, Jan. 16th, while not unexpected, is mourned by a wide circle of friends. The late Mr. Graham had been in failing health for a year, and had been under the constant care of his daughter, Mrs. Graham, at her home, the nurse of Rochester, since last spring. The whole trouble was a disease of the nervous system, brought on by continued medical skill of several prominent specialists with whom he had consulted.

The late Mr. Graham was 65 years of age, having been born in Fenelon township, about four miles west of Peterboro, on the 14th of December, 1838. With his parents he came to Fenelon township in 1838, settling on the magnificent farm known as "Blythe," on which he died. His wife died on the 15th June, 1873, and his mother on Christmas day, 1878. In the fall of 1884 he lost his eldest son, Robert, by death.

The deceased was a councillor for Fenelon township for 3 years, and was a member of the Baptist church for 39 years. In politics he was known as an independent. His wife still survives him, as also three daughters and three sons, as follows: Mrs. Boist, Kennedy, of Toronto; Miss Powers Graham, of Rochester; Mrs. Graham, of Fenelon Falls; John Graham, on the homestead; and Mr. Thomas Graham, of Toronto.

Among those from outside points who attended the funeral were Mr. Kennedy, of Toronto; Mr. Harry Graham, Buffalo; Messrs. Graham, of Mount C. Moore and D. Cole, of Bobcaygeon; Thos. Gillies, of Lindsay.

Against Half Holidays.

Stratford Herald: At the annual meeting of the Retail Merchants' Association of Guelph one of the most important matters settled was that respecting the Saturday half holidays for clerks during the months of July and August. The Association decided that while the merchants individually could make any arrangements with their own clerks respecting half holidays, it was the sense of the meeting would no longer agree to close up the stores every Saturday afternoon as at present during the above mentioned months. The Association, says the Herald in its report, felt that the weekly half holiday was not in the interests of trade, that it entirely closed up the city and practically killed trade for one day each week. The motion was not the result of any dissatisfaction of the merchants with the Saturday half holiday, but because, as it has in most cities and towns, it became it is thought to be in the best interests of trade.

DUNSFORD

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

There has been very little excitement in Dunsford during the past week on account of the bad condition of the roads.

Many of the young people of Dunsford attended the Epworth League convention in Lindsay last week.

The Dunsford skating rink opened for the first time this season last Saturday night. Although the ice was not in good condition, about twenty young people enjoyed an hour's skate.

The train from Bobcaygeon due to arrive in Dunsford at 4.27 p. m. was cancelled on Monday owing to the stormy weather.

Miss Lily Gordon and Miss Laura Brice have retired after spending a few days with friends in Lindsay.

Miss Bick of Bobcaygeon, is visiting at Mr. Silas Thurston's.

The Farmers' Institute meeting of Friday afternoon and evening was a great success, being well attended and great interest shown. Excellent music was supplied by local talent at the evening session.

There are many of our young men attending the course at Lindsay. Prof. Reed explained the proceedings which will take place at the Farmers' Institute meeting here.

Omemee defeated the Wanderers of Bobcaygeon 5-3 Saturday night. Good hockey was shown on both sides. On Thursday evening we do battle against Fenelon Falls, whom we defeated here last year.

Large numbers of our people attended the Epworth League Convention at Lindsay and were delighted and profited.

A Valuable Book Free.

One of the most remarkable books of this class that has ever been issued in Canada, has recently been published by the Toronto Lithographing Co., Toronto. It is entitled, "Sloan's Dictionary of Dreams and Book of Life." Besides being a very reliable interpreter of dreams, it contains many other features of great interest and value. Among them are a chapter on "How to Give First Aid to the Injured," "A Fortune Teller"—a great amusement feature suitable for parlor or social entertainments. In addition to these features it possesses a vast fund of valuable information for dressed and suffering humanity. The book contains fifty pages of interesting matter, and is bound in a handsome three-colored paper cover. This cover is a study in itself, being a modern mailed Knight Crusader, who has been escorted by a lady Philanthropist. Between them a most interesting conversation takes place. This book will be mailed free upon request to any one sending their name and address, and saying they saw it in this paper. to Dr. T. A. Slocum, Limited, Toronto.

TRIUMPHANT ADMINISTRATION

The management of the post office under Liberal auspices is typical of the spirit that has prevailed in all departments. The Tory press would be able, no doubt, to find in its statistics another proof that the people were being taxed higher now than the post office revenue contributed by them amounted to $2,971,653, whereas in 1906 it was $5,933,342, indicating, according to Tory logic that $2,961,689 more was paid in taxes in the latter year than in the former.

In point of fact, the "taxation" was one-third less. The same amount and weight of correspondence in 1896 as in 1906 would have cost one-third more. Correspondence that cost $30 in 1896 would cost but $20 in this year of grace.

For 33 years, or almost from Confederation, there had been deficits in the post office. In the eighteen years of Conservative rule, from 1879 to 1896, there never had been a deficit of less than $423,000 and it had been as high as $911,031. During those eighteen years the deficits in the post office totalled over $13,000,000. And every agitation for cheaper postage was answered by pointing to the deficit.

During a large part of the time the United States had a two-cent rate. Torontonians who had friends in the United States were frequently chagrined to recognize that a letter came from San Francisco at a lower rate than from Hamilton or Oshawa.

It is a study to see what happened as soon as the Liberal Government took charge of things. The change of Government took place in July, 1896. The reign of extravagance could not be closed at once. Contracts had to be allowed to run their term. Nevertheless, during that year the deficit was reduced from $781,152 to $586,540. By 1898 it was down to $47,602.

Hon. Mr. Mulock then thought it opportune to take the step that brought about Imperial penny postage, a piece of administrative courage for which he must ever be renowned in the annals of the post-office. Domestic penny postage followed immediately.

In the meantime the needs of the Yukon and Atlin Lake miners were pressing on the Government, and that altogether abnormal call for postal expenditure arose. Between the lowered rate and the Yukon service the deficit again went up to six figures namely, $398,918. It was $461,662 in 1900, and $416,184 in 1901, but 1902 saw the first surplus in 33 years. It was the modest one—$5,109—but it has grown as follows;

1904	304,784
1905	490,845
1906	1,011,765

In opposition to triumphant administration of this kind we have a lot of charges that are as vague and impalpable as the east wind, and just about as satisfying. A jury would throw them out of court without leaving the box.—Globe.

Hamilton Times; The Japanese question may be shelved. Even Billy McLean is constrained regretfully to say that Mr. Lemieux's mission "must be pronounced sufficiently satisfactory."

Exchange; A Toronto man fell on a slippery cement walk, struck his head and died from brain concussion. The cement walk may be economical and advantageous in summer weather, but can anyone imagine a more exasperating, insecure, danger lurking footway in the average Canadian winter season? The man who will invent a method of keeping cement walks free from ice will have his fortune made.

Stratford Beacon; Germany has this year a public deficit of over one hundred millions. A country, no matter how industrious its people may be, cannot keep armed to the teeth and indulge in large expenditures on a useful navy without feeling the pinch, and Germany is feeling it now. The highest protected country in Europe though it be, the distress among the working class is greatest. Hundreds of thousands are out of employment and many more receiving only a bare pittance of wages, which owing to the protection on breadstuffs and meats, provides a very spare bill of fare.

ON THINGS IN GENERAL

By "The Stroller."

During 1907 the County Council spent on bridges nearly $10,000. One peculiar feature in the Municipal Act regarding bridges is that any municipality outside of a town can call on the county to build a bridge, if 300 feet or over, and the county is compelled to do it. The judge declares the proportion the county has to pay, and the proportion the municipality has to pay. In the matter of towns such as Lindsay, the county is not compelled to build its bridge, and here is where the rank injustice of the matter comes in. For 1907 Lindsay's proportion of payment for county bridges will be $1420, for which she does not get a quid pro quo of one cent. The argument, of course, is set up that all bridges and good roads must benefit Lindsay more or less, which is no doubt true, but they benefit the rural districts infinitely more, and we should no more be called upon to pay for their bridges than that they should be called upon to pay for repair of our streets. Three other items appear for 1907, in which we are very slimly interested, and they are printing, salaries, and sessional expenses, amounting in all to $4381, or a total, including bridges, of $14312, for which, as a municipality, we don't get five cents' worth of benefit. Some one will say, is not the printing done in Lindsay? which is true, but as value is supposedly given for the money, there is nothing in that argument. The salaries and printing, and a good proportion of the sessional indemnities, would be spent here in any event, only if value was given for the money. We do not object to our share of the latter items so much as we do to the item for bridges. If we were relieved of that it would be no more than justice, and it would go a long way to quell the dissatisfaction that now exists. This item is not going to grow any less in the future. As the country grows, we want permanent bridges and roadways, and these back county members are going to see that they get them, even if we of the south have to pay for them.

One item about which there is a good deal of dispute as to who pays it, is the hospital grant. In 1906 it was $1200 from the county, and in 1907 $1100. Of that amount Lindsay's share is about $170, leaving $930 actually paid by the county outside of Lindsay. Some county members claim that the grant from the county ought to be pro rata according to patients, in which case it apparently would be much less, but only apparently. We have ex-Mayor Vrooman's word for it, and also ex-Mayor Ray's, that a great many cases are sent up as coming from Lindsay, whilst in reality they are from the outside, and if there were any pro rata business, they would have to get orders from their own municipalities for admittance, instead of looking to the Mayor of Lindsay for them. The same proceedings would be observed about the House of Refuge. To-day Lindsay is credited with more than its fair share of inmates because they happen to get an order from Lindsay, although as a matter of fact they belong to other municipalities. There is another feature of the Hospital business that the rural members ought to be seized of, especially those of the surrounding townships, and that is the up-keep of the place. We find, for instance, that the edibles, such as meat, butter, eggs, milk and vegetables, used in 1906, amounted to $1261.76, and in 1907 $1,489.07. These are not raised or made in the town. We do not know whether they are bought in the town Presuming they are all bought in Lindsay, there would probably be a profit of ten per cent. to Lindsay, and all the rest would go to the surrounding townships, or possibly further, but in no case outside the county, and as the whole of it comes out of the ground, the farmers get every cent of it in some shape or other.

We can thus see that in making their donation to the hospital they are paying back less than they get. However, outside of the one or two injustices we have pointed out, we do not see that very much is to be gained by separation. If the county will not do us justice, then separation is the only remedy, but before going that far, we would make a brave attempt to get these inequalities set aside. We would not go hat in hand, either. It is purely justice we want—no favor. As we remarked before, as one of the richer municipalities, Lindsay must expect to pay more than its share, and it would only be right that she should do so, but that does not mean that she should be bled to the extent of from $1500 to $2500 per year for mere sentiment. We believe that if our case is properly handled we can get what is right. It is up to Messrs. Jordan and Eyres to see that we get it.

There are several well-made points in Mayor Begg's speech at the inaugural meeting of Council the other day. Mr. Begg is given credit for being endowed with the rare gift of good common sense, and although not given to flighty oratory, like some of his mates, his words generally have a telling effect that counts. His advice to Council boiled down, was to look into everything closely, don't pay too much attention to the newspapers, (he must have had our colem in his mind), and if Council did their duty and made Lindsay a cheap, clean and comfortable place to live in, they need not worry about size, as the size would take care of itself. We rather like that way of putting it. We happen to know something about the propositions that come before the town Council and the Board of Trade regarding factories wanting to come to Lindsay. We have taken the trouble to go over them with our secretary, and really it is amusing to read some of them. The propositioners generally have everything, including gall, except the one thing needful, and that they imagine Lindsay has in profusion, at least that is what one is left to infer on reading their letters. Some ask if we have buildings vacant, as if a town like Lindsay would be in that position. We have before us an advt. in a Toronto paper that must have cost at least $50, setting forth the size of a manufacturing plant that can be had for a song, and electric power at $12.50 per h. p. We see these sort of ads. ever now and then of towns all over Ontario and Quebec, which goes to prove that some places are not full up the same as Lindsay is.

Does it ever strike our citizens as a really wonderful fact that we have not got a factory building of any description vacant in the whole town? Then take a walk around on a Sunday afternoon and note how the vacant lots are gradually filling up with houses, and those of a fairly good value and all taken as soon as finished. This, to our mind is, after all, the best and safest way to build up a town. It certainly is the one entailing least strain and worry on the few. The mistake Lindsay made in past years was in handing over so much money to the G.T.R. and its predecessors. We would have got all, or nearly all, we have now, had we given nothing, or at most very much less than we gave. We are better situated than Peterboro, and they were wise enough not to make any such blunder. As a result our tax rate is high and theirs is low. Another mistake was made in spreading the town over too much ground. Were we confined to one half or even one-third of our present area, we would all be better off, and still have plenty of snow to shovel off the walks. These blunders, however, are irrevocable, and our only remedy is to get the vacant lots filled up with taxable houses and people in them with taxable incomes. The Mayor's idea that a well-ruled town will attract, is well taken, and we hope he will so direct his Council that he will be able to show an increased assessment as a result. The paragrapher of this paper the other day, in calling attention to the fact that Berlin had a Board of Trade of 350 members, managed to get in a wipe at our own Board by saying that we had hard work to galvanize life into one of 50. Well, he is a little out in his figures, but that don't matter—these newspaper fellows must say something, and very often it depends on whether they have had pie for dinner, as to whether it is complimentary or otherwise.

There is one point in which Council can do a lot to help the town, and that is in being honest and living up to their agreements. A corporate body has just as much right to be honest and have their word as good as their bond, as an individual, and they have no more right to take advantage of a technicality than an individual has, and are just as open to opprobrium for so doing. This has been done by our town Council several times of late years, and it does not do the town any good. We know one firm that has paid $400 that the town agreed to remit, and another firm $200, and still another a similar amount, all because some little point was overlooked. When two honest men make a bargain they do not seek means of evading it in any way. Why should a town? We do not want to descend to any lobsterian trickery like the Yankees.

Rural postal delivery is a question that is bound to loom up largely during the next few years. In a country such as ours it is a different question entirely from what it is in older and smaller countries, such as they have in Europe. In Canada it is in a measure, a different question from what it is in the neighboring republic, whose example we copy and follow in so many things. There they have a population of 90 millions to our six, over territory about equal in extent, and in addition we have a climate and roads that puts us in a different class entirely, even were our populations equal. It is one of those things that is bound to come at no distant date, but situated as we are, it is going to take longer to introduce into Canada than into the U. S. We are sorry to see a tendency on the part of the "outs" at Ottawa to vaguely promise this to the people in the hope of catching votes, because as sensible men, they must know that there are more important things to do, before rural postal delivery can be thought of.

In the meantime of course, it is a good thing to worry the government with. The U. S. have evidently gone into rural delivery for good. That is one feature about it that we must not overlook. One we enter into it, there can be no such thing as turning back. If the outlying and thinly populated districts do not get it, and they see the more populous centres getting it, there will be blood on the moon for somebody. In the U. S. the vacant lands are practically all taken up, and there are postal routes and post offices in every part of the land. In starting the rural delivery, they are able to do so without detriment to the newer and more sparsely settled districts. The rapid increase in the outgo, however, just goes to show how each congressional district will insist on getting its share of the service, and before they know it, they will have an item of expense on their hands that will throw the pension bill into the shade. One notable difference will be, that in rural delivery the people will be getting service for the money paid, and in the other they are not. We must not imagine, however, that the money they are spending on rural delivery is all expense. Just at present the scheme is in its infancy, and it will take years for the officials to find out the best and cheapest way to manipulate the district. In the meanwhile it is a case of graft with each congressman for his own district, and those with the most pertinacity get there, whilst the more modest have to wait.

As far as we can gather, the plan is to take a rural district with say six post offices in it, abolish the offices and have one central one to which all the mail for that district is addressed. Every person in the district is supposed to have a properly constructed box on the road, in which they post their own matter, and into which the touring car puts any matter for them. All our readers can see at a glance what a convenience this would be to the farmer. He would get his daily paper, and with that and the telephone and city plumbing, he would be in clover sure. It is a well known fact that every convenience brought into use, encourages the use of the post office service abnormally. We need only glance at the enormous increase in our own, by the reduction of the postage from three to two cents, and within the past year the reduction on magazine postage between G. B. and ourselves. There is no doubt in the world, but that this rural deliver in the States will so increase the revenue, that in all but sparsely settled districts it will start to pay very shortly after initiation.

In Canada, however, we are differently situated. We have vast stretches of country that are opening up, and as the genius of the post office is to give anybody and everybody postal service, we can readily see that there is a market for all our spare cash and energy in attending to the wants of the new comers. We, who live right in the midst of it, growl like children, if our mail is one or two hours late. What would we do were we to get a mail once a month, or once a year, like some of our compatriots do? It would no doubt be very nice to have rural mail delivery in old Ontario, or old Quebec, but would it be fair to our fellow citizens in the newer districts, where as yet there there are no roads to put so much capital into autos or whatever the deliveries are made with, so that it would be impossible to extend postal conveniences to them? We opine our right-thinking and unselfish citizens will think not. In five or at the outside ten years, we may be in a position to begin it somewhere, and by that time we will have the larger experience of the U. S. to guide us.

Sleighriding on the Walks.

Several complaints have been made to the police by pedestrians, of children using the sidewalks as toboggan slides. This is a most dangerous practice, and it is the duty of parents to warn their children, as in future steps will be taken to put a stop to this nuisance. There is a by-law prohibiting the use of the sidewalks as such, and the only kind of sleigh that is allowed on is one used by a parent for carrying a child.

Bitter Against Automobilists.

There is an agitation in progress in Ontario county, which has for its object a system of good roads. It is proposed to take advantage of the Provincial fund for that purpose, but the project will not be carried out without stiff opposition. The Cannington Gleaner says: What does a perfect road from Oshawa or Whitby to Orillia means? It just means a good road for the Toronto automobilists, and are the people of the County of Ontario to build an auto-mobile road for the multi-millioners of Ontario? We hope not and more, we hope the present County councillors see that such is not the case or allowed. Kill the 1907 Good Roads by-law at once.

About House Plants.

Be careful not to overwater them.

To find out if they need water, rap the side of the pot with your knuckles.

If it rings clear and sharp the plant needs watering.

If there is a dull sound, the soil is already moist enough.

Let the soil get fairly dry before wetting it again.

Plants thrive much better if not permanently kept in jardinieres.

The average living room is too hot and dry for growing things. They are best kept in a cool room, and moved into hot rooms only for temporary decoration.

The extremes of day and night in a window sill are too much for most plants. Carry them into the middle of the room at night.

Keep a pan of water in the room where they are kept, giving them plant food; spray them free from dust, and keep a sharp lookout for pests.

In ventilating the room see that the current of cold air does not strike them directly, and remember that gas fumes are deadly to them.

setting of somber river and somber stone.

Fraide smiled at her affectionately, then looked at Lader. "Chilcote has got a new lease of nerves, Eve," he said quietly. "And I believe—I have got a new benchman. But I see my wife beckoning to me. I must have a word with her before she flies away. May I be excused?" He made a courteous gesture of apology, then smiled at Eve.

She looked after him as he moved away. "I sometimes wonder what I should do if anything were to happen to the Fraides," she said, a little wistfully. Then almost at once she laughed, as if regretting her hopefulness. "You heard what he said," she went on in a different voice. "Am I really to congratulate you?"

The change of tone stung Lader incomprehensively. "Why you always disbelve in me?" he asked.

Without answering, she walked slowly across the deserted terrace and, pausing by the parapet, laid her hand on the stone work. Still in silence, she looked out across the river.

Lader had followed closely. Again her aloofness seemed a challenge. "Why can always disbelieve in me?" he repeated.

At last she looked up at him slowly.

"Have you ever given me cause to believe?" she asked in a quiet tone.

To this retort he could by no means though the subdued incredulity netled him afresh.

Prompted to a further effort, he spoke again. "Patience is necessary with every person and every circumstance," he said. "We've all got to wait and see."

She did not lower her gaze as he spoke, and there seemed to him something disconcerting in the clear, cruelly blue of her eyes. With a sudden dread of her near scrutiny, he moved forward and laid his hand beside hers on the parapet.

"Patience is needed for every one," he repeated quickly. "Sometimes a man is like a bit of wreckage. He drifts till some force stronger than himself gets in his way and stops him." He looked again at her face. His scrutiny knew what he was saying. He only felt that he was a man in an egregious, by false position, trying stupidly to justify himself. "Don't you believe that fortune can sometimes be washed ashore?" he asked.

High above them Big Ben chimed the hour.

Eve raised her head. It almost seemed to him that he could see her answer trembling on her lips. Then the voice of Lady Sarah Fraide came cheerfully from behind them.

"Eve!" she called. "Eve! We must go. It's absolutely 3 o'clock!"

CHAPTER X.

IN the days that followed Fraide's marked adoption of him Lader behaved with a discretion that was foreign to his qualities. Many a man placed in the same respectable and yet strangely irresponsible position might have been excused if, for the time at least, he gave himself a loose rein. But Lader kept free of the temptation.

Like all other experiments his show ed unlooked for features when put to a working test. Its expected difficulties vanished immediately, while others, scarcely anticipated, came into prominence. Not unlike a bit of wax, the likeness between himself and Chilcote, the bedrock of the whole scheme, which had been considered by no means easy, worked without a hitch. He stood literally speaking before the revenue credulity that met him on every hand. Men who had known Chilcote from his youth, servants who had been in his employment for years, joined issue in the unquestioning acceptance. At times the ease of deception bewildered him. There were moments when he realized a mind-numbing amazement at such a declaration of the truth, he would not be believed. Human nature offers its own eyesight to the testimony of any man.

For a time in this astonishing success he steered a steady course. In the first exhilaration of Fraide's trust, in the first egotistical wish to break down Eve's aloofness, he might perhaps have plunged into a vortex of action, let it be in what direction it might, but, fortunately for himself, for Chilcote and for their scheme, he was liable to strenuous reactions, sometimes wise and necessary curbs that go further to the steadying of the universe than the universe guesses. At times the quiet of the house on the same day that he had spoken with Eve on the terrace he had weighed possibilities slowly and cautiously. Impressed to the full by the atmosphere of the place that in his eyes could never lack character, however the temporary business, however proxy the voice that filled it, he had sifted impulse from experience as only a man who has lived within himself can sift and distinguish. He had drawn a line of first day his programme had been formed. There must be no rush, no heading plunge, he had decided. Time must work around. It was his first expedition into he new country, and it lay with fate to say whether it would be his last.

He had been leaning back in his seat, his eyes on the ministers opposite, his mind fixed in imitation of Chilcote's most natural attitude, when this final speculation had come to him, and as it came he had jerked himself for a moment and his face become hard and cold. It is an unpleasant thing when a man first unconsciously reckons on the weakness of another, and the look that expressed the idea is not good to see. He had stirred uneasily, then his lips had closed again. He was tenacious by nature, and by nature intolerant of weakness. At the first suggestion of weakening upon Chilcote's lapses his mind had drawn back in disgust, but the suggestion had again the disgust had lessened.

In a moment, perhaps—Chilcote would reclaim his place. Then would begin the routine of the affair, the routine of his indulgence and freedom, would find his obligations a pleasant yoke, would become a force; he would struggle for a time, perhaps.

A shadowy smile had touched Lader's lips as the idea formed itself.

Then would come the inevitable recall; then in earnest he might venture to put his hand to the plough. He had indulged in day dreams, but something in the nature of a vision had flashed across him and had held instant. He had seen himself standing in that same building, now transformed, but first bored, then hesitatingly transformed under his personal domination, under the one great power he knew himself to possess—the power of eloquence. The vision had lasted the moment he had been almost painful. Men who have attained self repression are occasionally open to a perilous outrush of feeling. Believing that they know themselves, they will blindly forward toward the lightbond and pitfall alike.

These had been Lader's disconnected ideas and speculations on the first day of his new life. At 4 o'clock on the ninth day he was pacing with quiet confidence up and down Chilcote's study, his mind pleasantly busy and his cigar comfortably alight, when he paused in his walk and frowned, interrupted by the entrance of a servant.

The man came softly into the room, drew a small table toward the fire and responded to by an equally quiet and unserviceable looking cloth.

Lader watched him in silence. He had grown to find silence a very useful commodity. To wait and let things develop was the attitude he oftenest assumed, but on this occasion he was perplexed. He had not rung for tea, and in any case a cup on a silver salver indicated his wants. He looked critically at the man's movements.

Presently the servant departed and immediately reappeared bearing a tray, with cups, a teapot and cakes. Having placed the tray to his satisfaction, he turned to Lader.

"Mrs. Chilcote will be with you in five minutes, sir," he said.

He waited for some response, but Lader grunted. Again he had found the advantages of silence, but this time it was silence of a compulsory kind. He had nothing to say.

The man, finding him irresponsive, retired, and, left to himself, Lader stared at the array of feminine trifles, tying, turning absently, he moved to the center of the room.

Since the day they had talked on the terrace he had seen Eve only thrice and always in the presence of others. Since that day he had felt strongly that had not invaded his domain, and he wondered what this new departure might mean.

His thought of her had been kept vivid in the last days, for, though still using steady discretion, he had been driven gradually nearer the fascinating whirlpool of new interests and new work. Shut his eyes as he might there was no denying that this moment, so personally vital to him, was politically vital to the whole country and that by a curious coincidence Chilcote's position was high forced him to take an active interest in the situation. Again and again the suggestion had arisen that should Chilcote smoldering fire in Persia break into a blaze Chilcote's commercial interests would facilitate—would practically compel—his standing in the camp against the government.

The little incident of the tea table, recalling the social life of the Fraide stations, had aroused the realization of greater things. As he stood meditative in the midst of Chilcote's room he was suddenly how absorbed he had become in these great things—how, in a strong of enjoyment, he had been borne inexorably forward, his calculations applying his intelligence to setting itself. He had so undeniably found his opinions that the idea of anything that needed gently as by natural laws until his own personality had become to order and shape his ends.

As this knowledge came he wondered quickly if it was a solution of the present little comedy: if Eve had seen what others, he knew, had observed—had chosen to shelve a person and things that he had not exhibited to them. Then, as he stood there, with the first egotistical wish to break down Eve's aloofness, he had suddenly seen his shoulders with his habitual abrupt gesture and his face set in the cold, hard line.

Eve entered the room much as she had done on her former visit, but with one difference—in passing Lader she stopped held out her hand.

He took it as quickly. "Why am I so honored?" he asked.

She laughed a little and looked across at the fire. "How like a man! You always want to begin with reasons. Let's have no time-wasting explanations after." She moved forward toward the table, and he followed. As he did so it struck him that her dress seemed in peculiar harmony with the day and the room, though he could not tell how or follow its details. As she paused beside the table he drew forward a chair with a faint touch of awkwardness.

"Why am I so honored?" he asked.

She thanked him and sat down.

He watching her, in silence as she poured out the tea, and the thought came to him that it was strange that thly long since he had seen a woman preside over a tea table. The delicate, fine fingers filled him with an unfamiliar, half inquisitive wonder. So intent was he on the fascination that when she held his cup toward him he didn't immediately see it.

"Don't you want any?" She smiled a little.

He started, embarrassed by his own tardiness. "I'm afraid I'm dull," he said. "I've been so—"

"So been a worker in the last week?" For a moment he felt relieved. Then, as a fresh silence fell, his sense of awkwardness returned. He sipped his tea and ate a biscuit. He found himself wishing, for almost the first time, for some of the small society talk that came so pleasantly to other men. He felt that the position was ridiculous. He glanced at Eve's averted head and laid his empty cup upon the table.

Almost at once she turned, and their eyes met.

"John," she said, "do you guess at all why I wanted to see you to-day alone?"

He looked down at her. "No," he said hesitantly and without embellishment.

The earnestness of the answer might have displeased another woman. Eve seemed to take no offense.

"I had a talk with the Fraides to-day," she said, "a long talk. Mr. Fraide made certain things clear to me. I wouldn't have believed from anybody but Mr. Fraide. He is a man I have known and looked from Lader's face back into his.

He took a step forward. "What things?" he said. He was almost astonished at the intensity, almost satisfaction that welled up at her words.

"Oh, I mustn't tell you!" She laughed a little. "But you have surprised him. She paused, and, with her head bowed up again with a change of expression.

"John," she said, and, strangely, there is one point that sticks a little. Why you always disbelieve me?" Her voice was direct and even, wonderfully direct for a woman. Lader realized that it was this trait, a certain force that beneath her remarkable beauty and sympathy lay in her strong character. It was not a possibility that had occurred to him to look at her a second time. In the new light he saw her differently, felt the force, felt himself him differently. Heretofore he had been dealing with a woman made up of three beads—idols, amusements and incumbrances. Now it crossed his mind that a woman might stand on another place—the place of a companion.

"You are very slaughtly," he said, still looking down at her.

She did not return his glance. "I think I have been made stupid," she said.

As she spoke the image of Chilcote sent through his mind—Chilcote, the weak, pleasure-seeking, pleasure-seeking man, the man who had aroused in her compassion for one woman in another. Lader felt a sudden rush of hatred.

Eve, unconscious of what was passing in his mind, went on with her subject.

"When we were married," she said quietly, "I was very ignorant in things, such a great belief in life. I had a little, I suppose, the usual feeling one of the coming men—everybody said you were one of the coming men, and I felt that my place was just to help to ask for. You didn't make very great demands, I suppose, but I felt that I had forgotten about love. I wanted to make up for it, and I felt like Lady Sarah—married to a great man." She paused, then went on more hurriedly: "I thought that I was doing it, but slowly things went wrong. You got poorer and poorer."

Lader changed his position with something of abruptness.

"Please don't think I want to be disrespectful," he said hastily. "I don't. I'm only trying to make you understand why—why I lost heart."

"I understand," Lader's voice broke in involuntarily. "Things got worse, and it seemed to me I could never make success. At last you ceased to have a husband."

"Until a month ago." She glanced up quickly. Absorbed in her own feelings, she had not noticed his strange, dreary tone.

But at that the Lader changed color.

"It's the most incredible thing in the world," she said. "It's quite incredible, and I don't know how I ever felt all my reason, all my experience, all my inclinations, I seem to have lost that last week something of what I felt at first." She stopped with an embarrassed laugh. "It's like a bit of magic, life has been picked up where I dropped it in 1900. Lady Sarah also stopped and laughed.

Lader was keenly uncomfortable, but he was too thick thinking to say:

"It seemed to begin that night I dined with the Fraides," she went on. "Lady Fraide talked so wisely and so kindly about so many things that I realized all we had missed for us, and—and he blamed me a little." She paused and looked over at him. "He said that when people have made what they call their last effort they should stop and rest for one effort more. He promised that if I could once persuade you to take an interest in your work he would do the rest. He said all that and a thousand other things, and I sat and listened. But all the time I thought of nothing but their uselessness. Before I left Fraide said to do my best, but my thought was still the same. It was stronger than ever when I forced myself to come up here"— She paused again and glanced at Lader's averted head. "I felt it came, and that if by conquering myself I had compelled a reversal, you would feel, you somehow seemed different. It sounds ridiculous, I know." Her voice was half amused, half depressed. "But it wasn't a difference in your face, though I knew directly it was you were thinking of others." Again she hesitated over the word. "It was a difference in yourself, in the things you were thinking in the way you said them." Once more she paused and laughed a little.

Lader's discomfort grew.

"But it didn't affect me then." She spoke more rapidly. "I felt it, I thought it then. And the next day when we met I felt it again and still refused to admit it, though I felt it more strongly than before. But I have watched you from that day, and I know you are a stranger. Mr. Fraide feels the same, and he is never mistaken. I never felt only nine or ten days, but I've hardly seen you in the same mood for nine or ten hours in the last month." She stopped, and the silence was impressive, as if waiting to plead for confirmation of her instinct.

Still Lader could find no response.

After waiting for a moment she leaned forward in her chair and looked up at him.

"John," she said, "is it going to last? That's what I came to ask. I don't mean to believe till I'm sure. I don't want to risk a new disappointment." Lader felt the earnestness of her gaze, though he avoided meeting it.

"I couldn't have said this to you a month ago, nor today I can. I can't pretend to explain why. The feeling is too inexplicable. I only know that it can say it now and that I couldn't a week ago. Will you understand—and answer?"

Still Lader remained mute. His position was horribly incongruous. What could he say? What dared he say?

Confused by his silence, Eve rose.

"I'm out of practice, don't try to hide it." she said. "But it's going to last —if my prayer has been heard. It's last"— She hesitated and looked up.

She was quite close to him. He could have been less than man had he been unconscious of the subtle contact of her hair, of the nearness of her presence, and no one had ever hinted that manhood lacking in him was a man moment of temptation. His own energy, his own intentions, seemed to have become and Chilcote's claims so distant and unreal. After all, his life, his ambitions, his personality had not got Eve. He lifted his eyes and looked at her.

"You want me to tell you that I will go on?" he said.

Her eyes brightened. She took a step forward. "Yes," she said; "I want it more than anything in the world."

There was a wait. The declaration that would satisfy her came to Lader's mind as he raised his head. The words were fateful. While he stood silent the door opened and the tea tray was silently brought in the ten reappeared.

He crossed the room and handed Lader a cup of tea. "Any answer, sir?" he said.

Eve moved back to her chair. There was a flush on her cheeks, and her eyes were fixed on Lader.

Lader tore the telegram open, read it, then threw it into the fire.

"No answer," he said decisively.

At the brusqueness of his voice Eve looked up. "Disappointed you?" she said as the servant departed.

He didn't look at her. He was watching the telegram withered in the center of the fire.

"Not at all," he said at last in a strained voice. "No; only news that I—that I had forgotten to expect."

CHAPTER XI.

THERE was a silence, an uneasy break, after Lader spoke. The episode of the telegram was, to all appearances, unimportant enough, calling forth Eve's question only from the fact that it was the sequence, yet in the pause that followed it each was conscious of a jar, each felt that what in some manner had been the thread of sympathy had been dropped, and that the two lives were left as inapplicable and to the other only too plain.

Lader watched the ghost of his message grow whiter and thinner, then dissolve into airy fragments and flutter up the chimney. He felt that he had wavered out of sight he turned and looked at his companion.

"I am a human being, not one commit myself," he said. In the desire to hide his feelings his tone was short.

Eve returned his glance with a quiet regard, but he scarcely saw it. He had a stupefied sense of disaster, a feeling of bitter self commiseration that for the moment overwhelmed all other considerations. Almost at the moment of justification the good of life had crumbled in his hands. Hatred of Eve ran beath his feet, and with an absence of logic, a lack of justice unusual in him, he let resentment against Chilcote sweep suddenly over his mind.

Eve, still watching him, saw the darkening of his expression and with a sudden movement rose from her chair.

"Lady Sarah has a theater party tonight, and I am dining out," she said quickly. "It is an early dinner, so I must think about dressing. I'm sorry you think I tried to force your hate anything. I must have explained myself badly." She had seen the change and the slight discomfiture that her tone betrayed, and as she laughed she moved across the room toward the door.

Lader, engrossed in the check to his own schemes, incensed at the suddenness of Chilcote's recall and still more incensed at his own folly in not having anticipated it, was oblivious for the moment of both her movement and her words. Then quite abruptly they obtruded themselves upon him, breaking through his egotism with some sting of the sharpness of pain following a blow. Turning quickly from the fireplace, he faced the shadowy room across which she had passed, but a multaneously with his turning she gained the door.

Making Good.

There is no way of making lasting friends like "Making Good," and Doctor Pierce's medicines have caused many, and their friends, after more than two decades of popularity, are numbered by the hundreds of thousands. They have "made good" and they have red made drankards.

The most honest, square-deal medicine of modern discovery is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It still enjoys an immense sale, while most of the imitations that have come into prominence in the interval of its disappearance have long "gone by the board" and are never more heard of. The reason is that it is doing for this long-time popularity and that is its "making good" in curing the sick. It is a medicine that acts on the liver, stomach or liver and blood affections, its superior curative qualities are widely known, hence it has survived and grown in popularity, while numerous other so-called proprietary articles have suddenly flashed into favor for a brief period, then were soon forgotten.

For the torpid liver with its attendant indigestion, dyspepsia, headache, constipation, sick headache, sour stomach, with yellow skin, loss of appetite, coated tongue, with distress after eating, nervous prostration and depression of spirits, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It makes pure, rich, red blood, and, when its ingredients printed on bottle-wrapper are known, no honest person will hesitate to use it. It contains no alcohol, nor any habit-forming drugs. Write Dr. Pierce, at Buffalo, N.Y., for a free copy of his pamphlet, "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," in plain English, with over 1,000 pages and 700 illustrations, sent on receipt of 21 cents in stamps, to pay expense of mailing only. Address as above.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the original Little Liver Pills, although the first and best pill in the market, still sell and when once tried are ever afterwards in favor. Easy to take as sugar. One to three a dose. Much doubled but never equalled.

JUDGE TREW WELL PLEASED

Below we present a copy of the report received by the Post from Trew to the Department at Toronto:

Lindsay, Jan. 24th, 1908.

Dear Sir—Lindsay's third annual Poultry and Pet Stock Show, just over, was a huge success in every way. There were close on 800 entries, and the quality throughout was simply grand.

I noted improvement in the quality of the birds over last year. S. C. Buff Leghorn—Cock, 1 Lush, 2 Lush, 3 Knight. Hen, 1 Knight, 2 Knight, 3 Wickerd. Cockerel, 1 Lush, Knight, 3 Lush. Pullet, 1 Lush, 2 Knight, 3 Robson.

Buffs, (Bantams)—Cock, 1 Ryley & Walsh, 2 Lawrie. Hen, 1 Ryley & Walsh, 2 Lawrie. Pullet, 1 Ryley & Walsh, 2 Lawrie.

Buff Cochin, (Bantams)—Cock, 1 Lawrie. Hen, 1 Lawrie. Pullet, 1 Lawrie, 2 Lawrie.

All the Leghorn family were well represented. The Whites were a very cool class, and some of the winners, like hard boiled egg, hard to get. Blood-lined Reds made a very nice showing superior to anything I saw here for some time.

The Houdans were quite numerous, and good. The Hamburgs were well represented in Blacks and Silvered Spangled, and there were some fine birds among them. Red Caps, Dorkings and Andalusians were small classes but very good. The Bantams were out in large numbers and very good throughout. We had also some nice pigeons.

In turkeys, geese and ducks we had large entries in each, and all through were a nice lot.—Yours truly,

D. C. TREW, Judge.

Eastern Farmers Lack in Ambition

Little Attention Paid to Quality of Live Stock on the Farms.

John Campbell, of "Fairview" Farm, who discontinued his work at Institute meetings in Western Ontario for a week, returned the Winter Fair at Ottawa, where he judged the sheep classes and talked on the "Relationship of the Quality of the Flock" regarding some of the western exhibitors were learned from attending foreign poultry breedings, the people in the east seem to have their opportunity. The poultry show in Ottawa was a large and entries, was in all respects very good. The swine exhibits were also fairly worthy of a prolonged gathering, but fat cattle and sheep were few in numbers and poor in quality, as to cause the management much discouragement. The Dominion and Provincial Ministers of Agriculture were present. They met several breeders gave addresses in the lecture room. On the Thursday night Col. Mathieson, provincial treasurer, President Creelman, O.A.C., Guelph, and Senator Derbyshire, of Brockville, addressed a fairly well attended evening session.

"Because of the continued lack of interest manifested by the eastern farmers in the lives took show, especially destined for their welfare, the wisdom of continuing the same will be fully considered by the most future. It is surprising how indifferent the eastern farmer are to making an effort in the way of promoting their own interests."

FARM NOTES

TO MAKE HOUSE ATTRACTIVE

Tie wood neatly.

Keep the barn clean and neat.

Keep walks and porches swept clean.

Clean up or fill up small, dirty ponds.

Burn as much of the garbage as possible.

See that fences are mended and painted.

Keep the grass around the house in good condition.

Make of all the rubbish pile up the piece of ground of all weed matter.

Keep the house in good condition. See that the roof is mended and the boards painted.

Put some paint in neatly and see that the screen doors have locks that are in order.

Don't keep garbage or wet material in wooden barrels, because the wood becomes soaked and can't be cleaned.

Don't empty dish-water right beside the kitchen door. It makes a very ugly place, which is often the source of disease.

Be sure that the fence around the pickle yard is in good shape, so that the chickens won't get into the garden.

Dig a deep pit and put all tin cans, tin, broken bottles, broken China, broken pots and kettles into it. Cover with earth.

Do not have too many trees right close to the house. It looks very pretty, but is often quite the opposite. If we find the round stump and the dead branch of a tree is often covered with moss.—Kitchen Garden.

THE HEN HOUSE

At this time of the year be sure that there are no cracks in the hen-house, especially where the roof blows and the snow drifts. The house should, however, be well ventilated and yet free from drafts, and in good health, and it is soon splitted in a close hen-house or stable. Clean the house daily and let the sun shine a way toward keeping the air pure. Let the sunshine through the windows possible; it is a disinfectant. Feed regularly in winter. Given the chickens every day a vitamin generator, and they will get helps in the assimilation of food. White corn slightly warmed makes a good meal. Scratch out the litter regularly; animals and fowls are more particular about feeding than people. Feed the hens in the morning and "any things" when dinner is late. Never water them at a snow bank, or from the tin hole under the eaves of buildings, but keep clean water, not too cold, for them all the time. Keep them supplied with green food; it is surprising how soon cabbage will disappear when it is suspended by a wire to a convenient height above the floor, and and dust are necessary supplies.

THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE IT.

The standard advice was given by Mr. Bell, Tober when he said the young men should be encouraged to remain on the farm. Agriculture is no longer a crude and tiresome occupation, but one in which science plays a distinguished part.

Of course farm will give to the world some of its highest minds, as it has the most. Somehow genius will assert itself and find scope for its development. But the average man who is dissatisfied with his farm and abandons agriculture will realize his mistake sooner or later.

Farmers are not, of course, the prices which some people seek. The grades and professions have their very capitals, so great and so numerous, in commerce contributes to the volume of business. There are the dull times 1907, 1 instance, 1907.

The farm is not sometimes as attractive as it might be, but it guarantees a comfortable living, and is found in no other spark in life. There is no happier man than the farmer, when he gets the right idea of his work from his toil all Go profit there is in it.

But here is forced in the words of the minister of agriculture himself a successful farmer, when he says; "Do you know that it costs more to live, perhaps, you think, more easily in town or city, stay in the country. The cost of living is practically the same on daughter all the city colleges train him or her for this old, yet now progressive, farming. Rum look to the Farm."

A WIDE-AWAKE BOY.

At a meeting of the Farmers' Association of Annapolis County, N.S., last spring, says the Maritime Farmer, a prize of five dollars was offered for the best essay on farming by a boy who should raise the most potatoes from three pounds of seed. This offer was announced by office-bearers and third prizes of three and two dollars. A further prize was offered by the Association for the best fifteen head of oats, which any boy might exhibit. At a meeting held at Granville Ferry, the boys decided on and award the prizes, the first prize went to a young son of Jordan De Long, who raised one hundred and thirty pounds of smooth, well grown tubers from his three pounds. Master Bernard Stevens, of Farmington, was second with one hundred and nineteen pounds, and Master Gordon Chesley in the third was hundred and thirteen pounds. Conditions of the oat contest, were not complied with, and no awards were made. But a son of William Bancroft, of Farmington, made an exhibit of oats grown from fifteen heads, the product being at the rate of one hundred and thirty bushels to one. A special prize was given him.

—S—

MILD WEATHER CONDITIONS.

"The continued mild weather is undoubtedly helping to solve the fuel problem," says John D. Philips, of South Gray. "The majority of the farmers in this district will get through if the spring is early, now show in opening, without buying any great quantity of fodder. It makes some sow a plight of sheep, but I know they can buy hay at from $12 to $14 per ton, which was bringing from $18 to $20 two months ago.

Stocks are doing remarkably well considering the way in which their rations are meted out to them. I may so that this year of adversity will be a year of education to a great many of us. Many who have always had abundance of feed and, scarcely ever thought of how much they could save by careful feeding, have this year been up against it, and perhaps in years to come, we will look back to the long-to-be-remembered 1907, and say it was one of the best years of adversity we ever experienced. It is a season of adversity but we are learning lessons, the world over, is into depression, for us, one gratulate ourselves when we think how much worse it might have been."

THIS IS PECULIAR.

A rather peculiar case was recently tried in a Western Ontario town. Farmers in that district engaged help in harvest time, and a farm hand sent by his employment agent hired with a neighbor, while so doing got an injury by which the sight of one eye was impaired. The man with the employer under the workmen's compensation act, and if he had been employed on his own farm, he would have been entitled to compensation. But as he did not get the injury on his own employer's farm the judge was most reluctantly compelled to give the claim because the injury was not got while working at his ordinary work on his own master's farm.

SAVE THE SCRAPS.

Scraps from the kitchen, waste fruit from the orchard, refuse vegetables from the garden, buttermilk of the dairy are, says the American Agriculturist, usually sufficiently abundant in the average household to two or four pigs on every farm. Much of this material would go to waste so that the cost of keeping the hogs is clear gain. To one who has had no experience it is exceedingly surprising to see how rapidly growth made by pigs fed in this manner. Disposing of the waste material in this way is not only gain for the farm but it keeps the farm in better condition.

Butter let the colt go unshod as long as you can. Nothing so stiffen the feet than the bare earth.

Superintendent Putman says that the attendance at farmers' institute meetings this year has so far been better than last year.

Many farmers would take frozen wheat for food if they could get it plaited at their farm for reasonable figures. It's up to the railways.

The Wisconsin dairy station says that a cow is at her peak in her fourth and fifth years, but she should not show any marked falling off before ten years of age.

The boy who does not love the farm had better be sent to town, but many a boy would love it better if he were given a chance and an interest in some part of the management.

No one seems to be impressed with the fact that the prices for horses are more than temporarily under an eclipse. That next season will see some old time prices in the opinion of many.

Sheep scale is a disease that should not infest the flocks of any farmer or man. It takes constant watchfulness and immediate action to keep the flock free from it. Fortunately it is not ever a bad epidemic in Ontario.

"You can't get the best men in cheese factories," says Mr. Barr, "not as long as they know you never will get the best milk or best cheese. If good men are to be attracted, they will and they will pay you in the long run.

W. J. Kennedy, of the town experimental station, says that potatoes contain at least 40 of carbonaceous matter, and thus should be fed in conjunction with feeding stuffs rich in protein. The feeding of twenty to thirty pounds of raw potatoes per year per day in conjunction with ground corn and cuts, and clover hay, ought to make a satisfactory ration. The stalls must be well ventilated.

Epworth Leaguers Gather To Discuss Church Work

Over Two Hundred Delegates Take Part in Stirring Meetings for the Promotion of Church Work—Convention Closed Friday.

Evening Point of Jan. 23

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

The prayer service was conducted by Rev. H. Adams, of Norwood. The "Quiet Hour" was taken charge of by Rev. L. S. Wright, B.D., Brighton, and was a very inspiring and helpful service.

Reports of districts were kept taken up, the appointment of the nominating committee following.

Miss Pearl Burnham, of Millbrook, read a very eloquent thought out paper on the Literary Side of League Life." Miss Nora Reynolds, Stirling, also read a paper on the "Social Side of League Life." The papers were well read and contained many useful hints for delegates which, if followed, will be helpful in their home leagues.

The session was well attended and was very enjoyable.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

The Epworth League Convention meeting held yesterday in the afternoon proved to be a very interesting and inspiring meeting. We were led in a review given to League missions work with $1,000 per member, Whitby Sta., and Cobourg 70c. per member. He also spoke well on the general work.

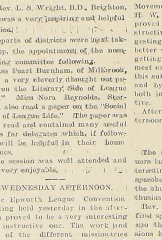
A conference of the "Forward Movement" then followed, led by Rev. H. W. Foley, of Bridgenorth, and proved to be very interesting and instructive. Its prayer meetings, meeting as it did so many newer and better ways of doing the work and of using the Leagues more fully, proved most expensive. Papers connected with this subject were read by Miss Ashton and by Dr. Oliver Day, and proved both interesting and highly instructive.

After a few announcements the afternoon session came to a close.

The Evening Session.

The convention of Epworth Leagues last evening was particularly interesting. The singing was good, the speeches bright and interesting, and the church was crowded with an enthusiastic audience.

Rev. Embemson, of Jagan, was the first speaker. He said that ten years ago the forward movement in missions had been inaugurated, and his



CAMBRIDGE-ST. M EPHODIST CHURCH,
Where the Convention Was Held.

was pointed out to the delegates and hearers, thus bringing all in closer touch with the men the Leagues that they represented were supporting. Letters of thanks from missions were so brought up for consideration, and many valuable hints were given the delegates by the talented speaker. In fact, the whole afternoon was replete with the well-worked out, interesting speeches containing solid facts and good suggestions, and spoke up to the shortest possible time. Rev. R. J. Greatrix, of Port Perry, opened the meeting with a short missionary prayer service at two o'clock. He was followed by a talk on "Our Summer School," by Rev. H. Foster, of Smithville. Mr. Foster had going to Japan as a missionary had been the outcome. He had been sustained by the financial aid of members of the different Epworth Leagues of four districts, to return he testified by thanks of himself and family. At the time this movement was organized the amount of money raised from this source was about $600 of now it was $52,000. (Now missions, sales were entirely sustained by individual Leagues, Sunday schools and families.

The days were closely connected with the Canadian church and British connection and our alliance, closely too, by them opening up their country to us. On the occasion of opening up of Canada for unrestricted emigration he proposed to give his opinion later on in the meeting. He said he would first consider the character of the people. There were five distinct classes. (The Japs. Chinese were intelligent, honest and honest. The Japs. Chinese as the most smart. From the lower classes of immigrants. The Jap is small in stature but is active and intelligent. Four years ago it was necessary to threaten them with alien forces before they opened up their country to the world. Since then they had made progress in leaps and bounds towards civilization. Contrasting with China, which had been open practically for almost 500 years. Japs were open-minded, ready to assimilate all that they saw was commendable in other nations. There were no idlers in Japan — every person is a worker. Manufacturing was mostly done in the homes, and the average wage was 30c. a day. Contrasting with Chinese manufactories and the Japs were making up during this time. He had read some long ago, in Canada that they have given an order for the largest single cruiser in the world, which would be a great power for a truly 300 miles long.

He had been disappointed in the reports of Japan, standing on their high banks one could only see a very small stream of water passing over a gravel bed, but when he saw the snow capped rivers when in flood after a few weeks' steady rain he had changed his idea as to their magnitude. There were fifth 300 feet high, and every opportunity afforded for the development of power. The people are loyal to an extreme, and when was to christianity made legal and free worship of Christ, they said when the Emperor was to pass thousand of people would line the streets and stand for hours in the pouring rain without umbrellas or shelter, with heads so bowed that they would not even see him in order to show their loyalty. They were courteous and kindly, and had the true instincts of a gentleman. He had mixed among the lower classes also. He had received the utmost kindness on deportation, and had been given every opportunity to pursue his work. When he was leaving for home 1000 pupils were at the station, about one hundred teachers, the governor of the province, the mayor of the city and officials, and many others, will bent out with him honor and expressing their good will.

Like our own people, the Japs have their faults. Their conception of women is one of their faults. She is still delegated to a lower position than a man; she never appears before company unless by invitation of her husband. This is becoming better, and it will take time to effect a change. The women who now are appearing in public are more butterflies—painted women of low character. The Jap conception of trade was also wrong, for the merchant was looked upon as the lowest of society. He did not believe in unrestricted emigration, but he would open close the doors to the Japs. Forty years ago thousands of Europeans rushed in and plundered many of the best building sites along the water front, and naturally the people felt sore. His sympathies were with the Japanese government wished to be fair, and would restrict emigration and would settle the question honestly and fair. He said thousands wished to come to Canada and he would welcome the Orientals were among them. The government were making it difficult for those intending to come, leave the country, and he was sure the question would be satisfactorily settled."

His work had been very satisfactory and the results were being seen. Christianity was making great strides in Japan. Many native christians were pushing the work at their own expense in private houses and public halls, and there was every prospect of winning Japan for God.

The Rev. Dr. Carey of Toronto, was the next speaker, taking for his theme, "What would we do without Christ." His subject was illustrated by a good story, and the convening address left only one conclusion—that the world would not be worth living in were it not for the christian religion. Dr. Carey is an excellent speaker—fluent, convincing and eloquent.

The Morning's Session.

This morning the Conference opened as usual with a service of prayer, led by Rev. S. T. Tucker, of Beaverton.

The "Quiet Hour," led by Rev. John Gilbert, of Bermondsey, and a paper on "A Young Man's Religion," by W. R. Cook secretary Lindsay, M. C. A. had to be omitted owing to the absence of the two gentlemen.

The election of officers for the next term then followed, and resulted as follows;

President—Fred R. Foley, Bowmanville.

1st Vice-Pres.—Wm. Ketchum, Brighton.

2nd Vice-Pres.—Rev. R. A. Whattam, Woodville.

3rd Vice-Pres.—Miss Pearl Burnham, Milton.

4th Vice-Pres.—Miss Nora Reynolds, Sterling.

5th Vice-Pres.—Mrs. S. C. Moore, Trenton.

Secretary.—Rev. L. S. Wright, Brighton.

Treasurer—Miss Edith Masson, Lindsay.

Conf. Rep. E. L. Board—Rev. S. F. Dixon, Bowmanville.

Mr. Wm. Ketchum, of Brighton, followed with a very interesting talk entitled, "Some Traits of Junior League Work," which was highly interesting and gave a deeper insight into little hints in junior work, as well as holding out to them some of the traits of junior work to delegates to keep things moving.

After a lesson, a "Round Table Conference of Junior Work," led by Dr. Crews, General Secretary, was held. It proved highly satisfactory and brought out a lot of hints for the improvement of the work in this department.

A few minutes were still left before dinner time, and Pres. Foley kindly called on the prominent "Quiet Hour," which was passed in prayer and praise.

During the "Round Table Conference" it was voted unanimously to raise $2,000 to send Dr. Stevenson, who has been ill, on a real trip to Japan and China. A committee of five were selected to bring about the proposed work.

The announcements for dinner then followed, and the delegates dispersed, some to go to dinner at restaurants, while others went downstairs to avail their turn at the tables laid there.

Thursday Afternoon Session.

Evening Post of Jan. 24

The afternoon convention was opened by a praise and testimony service led by Rev. B. McCulloch, of Omemee, followed by a discussion on Personal Evangelism, led by W. C. Frank, South Darlington.

A conference on Temperance was led by Rev. G. H. Clare, of Millbrook, and was taken part in by Rev. Wyte, of Seymour, Chapman, Pontypool, Tuckey, Cambray, Tucker, Beaverton, and A. M. Peterson, of Lindsay. (The discussions were most interesting, and the information laid before the convention will prove most useful.

A committee was appointed to put the points brought out in the discussion in the form of a resolution. The following is the result;

The committee appointed by leave to report as follows;

1st.—That after having listened to the reports from the different municipalities as to the conduct over the local option by-laws, we report that we are distinctly of the opinion that the provisions required 60 per cent. majority to carry such by-law should be altered so as to conform to the usual majority.

2nd.—That provision should be made to hold the license or proprietor of the house responsible for the infractions of the Liquor License law.

3rd.—That the fines accruing under the violation of the Liquor License law in municipalities which have passed local option by-laws be immediately available for the use and benefit of the officers of the said municipalities for enforcing the said by-law.

4th.—That the license commissioners and inspectors be officially charged with the enforcement of local option by-laws.

5th.—That a copy of the above resolutions be sent to the Hon. Premier Whitney and Hon. Provincial Secretary by the president and secretary of this convention—Carried.

6th.—That we urge the individual ministers and Epworth Leagues students to see that a letter be sent by them to quarterly and official boards and Epworth Leagues and Church Missionary Societies and to the representatives of the ridings in which they live, and also the Premier, embodying the above resolution—Carried.

The new officers were introduced to the convention and took their places.

Dr. Crews was called upon and gave an excellent talk on young men's bible class work.

Mr. A. M. Peterson read a most thought and most interesting paper on church union, which was listened to attentively and roused in meet the endorsement of the convention.

Thursday Evening.

Last evening's session was with the closing session of the convention, proved to be a very interesting one. The new president, Rev. Fred R. Foley, took the chair shortly after 6 o'clock, and the meeting opened with an anthem by the choir accompanied by the organ and Sunday school orchestra and led by Mr. C. Forsythe. Miss Florence Jackson took the organ.

A reading and prayer by President Foley followed.

Rev. A. J. Terrill, of Greenbank, then rose to move a vote of thanks to the pastors, officers of the Lindsay Epworth League, people of the churches, the music committee, and the officers of the church for the magnificent way the delegates had been treated during their stay in conference here. Mr. Terrill made a very pleasing speech on Lindsay hospitality. He was heartily seconded by Ex-Pres. E. A. Mordon, who also spoke of the enjoyment the delegates had had while in Lindsay.

President Foley, in presenting the report of the committee, said the delegates, said the convention here would be full of pleasant recollections for him and the other delegates, and he only hoped Lindsay people would think well of the convention. The motion carried unanimously.

In reply Rev. Mr. Phelps, of Queen St. Methodist church, said that he remembered the President when Mr. Foley was only a little fellow, and he (Mr. Phelps) was just developing into the work. He thought most thanks was due Dr. Bishop, who had had most of the work to do, but he thought it gave everybody a great deal of pleasure to have the delegates here and all would like to see them back again next year.

President Foley, in calling on Dr. Bishop, said it was as Mr. Phelps had said. He had worked well. Great stars in life from Mr. Phelps, and it was through him that for a time he was able to keep the work going.

Dr. Bishop disclaimed all credit for the good work done, stating that thanks was due, he thought, Mr. Foley and the young people of the league. Jay Bonwell, he was not surprised at the hospitality of the people since coming to Lindsay. He had found that however it might be in the larger centres, Lindsay has not lost its hospitality. He had gone to meet friends for the delegates' visit and that the conference to be held here in June will turn out as great a success.

A very pretty and much applauded selection was then given by the choir, after which a collection was taken up during an organ selection by Mr. Forsythe, and the result was a generous hush followed, Rev. Jas. Allen, General Secretary of Epworth League and speaker of the evening, in place of Rev. Jackson, walked into the church from a side train. He immediately took the platform and began his appeal for his branch of the missionary work. He said that the next hundred years would see the greatest development in Canada the world had ever seen in any country. From a comparison of our emigration of about of 250,000 and that of the United States in 1807 of 7000 we must see that at the rate we are going at the end of one hundred years we will have a population of 125 millions at least. Our emigration problem now are 96 times as large as those of the States in 1807 and if they keep on increasing how are we going to meet our responsibility? The U. S. emigration never reached over 1 per cent of the population yet. Ours is even now up to 4 per cent. We stand in trust for the future of these incoming millions. They will be what we make them, either a joy to the earth or a desolation and ruin to the rest of the world. We must plan for them, think for them, christianize them and educate them. We have the greatest destiny ever set before a nation. We must have men called of God to preach. That is our overpowering need of today. Dr. Wordsworth was sent to England to get men for the missionary field here, but we need more from our own christian homes. From our bible classes and from our colleges. The reason of our lack is the present day tolerference of the churches to the selection of candidates for the ministry. The situation has been saved in the past by the candidates themselves, who did not hesitate to come forward, but many must surely be kept back by the lack of a kind word and encouraging hand in the direction of the ministry.

Rev. Terrill said Rev. Allen, "struggled with a call to preach for about two years and said, nothing to stop you except a few glasses." Rev. Dr. Briggs shortly, and although he did not know me, he asked me questions and encouraged me and finally made arrangements for me to study. After he left, Dr. Burnsah took hold of me and taught me. He was so quiet and sympathetic with young men, there will be no lack of candidates, if there is only the godliness of the church in the failure to provide funds to properly support its ministers on the home field. Going by what some of these struggling men are receiving, and what some of the largest churches are giving, we ought to have about $150,000 more in the church could support 100 more missions if all the churches have in proportion to what some of the more humble do.

We need consecration of our church to God and His service. Conversion is not sufficient to engage the energies, graces of sin, but means sympathy with humanity and with the plans of God.

A hymn and prayer followed, at the close of which President Foley announced that the convention was closed, not closed, for they hoped to meet soon in some other place.

The Epworth League hymn "Onward, Christian Soldiers," was then sung heartily and the meeting broke up. Many of the delegates departed for the church, and friends going to the Sunday school room, in the basement for a few minutes' social talk and to say good-byes to each other.

The delegates seemed immensely pleased with the hospitality shown them, and the Lindsay people seemed just as delighted to have been hostess to such a fine lot of men. One announced one of the most successful conferences they had attended. The Conference Epworth League ever held.

POOR MAN'S CHURCH

A model "Poor Man's Church," with plenty of soup, biscuits, religion and possibly beds, is to be a branch of the great revival now in progress in 207 Chicago Protestant churches, under the auspices of the laymen's evangelical movement. The plans of the new church were announced recently by Dr. A. C. Dixon, pastor of the Moody church. They comprise the establishment of an "open-door church" in the lodging-house district, for the purpose of reaching the great army of the unemployed.

MASTERPIECE RECOVERED.

Vandyck's great masterpiece, "The Erection of the Cross," which was stolen from the church Notre Dame in Courtrai, Belgium, last month, was found near Bruges on Thursday in a waggon owned by a band of gypsies. The waggon was passing through the town of Ardoye when the horses fell and the waggon upset and the canvass fell out. A policeman who saw the accident immediately recognized the picture and took possession of it. He will receive a reward of $4,000 offered for its recovery. "The Erection of the Cross" is one of the world's famous paintings. It was stolen on December 6 last, from the old church of Notre Dame, where it had hung for 260 years, almost since Vandyk painted it.

MOTHER OF METHODISM.

Barbara Heck, "the mother of American Methodism," is to have a proper monument, at last. Her body's place of sepulchre is marked by a pretty stone which gives no hint of remarkable service to religion and records her simply as the wife of her husband, Paul Heck, who was no doubt a good man, but ought to have taken second place on the stone, which should have read "In memory of Barbara Heck," (her date) "and of Paul, her husband" (dates again). This headstone stands in the churchyard of the Blue Church on the bank of the St. Lawrence, a short distance above Prescott. But Methodists of Canada and America are now agreeing to erect a memorial stone to Barbara, who brought into heractive labors for Methodism the noted Philip Embury, and who founded the first society of Methodists in Canada. The Hecks were Loyalists, which was the reason for their coming to Canada, and it has been suggested that this fact may have had something to do with the long neglect of our neighbors to do honor to Barbara.

CAMBRIDGE-ST. METHODIST.

Rev. Dr. Bishop of the Cambridge-st. Methodist church, took his text on Sunday from John, 17 and 15, "I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil." He said that the church has undoubtedly grown worldly. The present day reproach of the gospel is the inconsistency of christian people. The world is tired of a religion that fails to make Christ shine. There is a distinction between the genuinely converted man and one unconverted, the closer a man is to God the further separated is he from the world. Church architecture is different from other architecture, and christian men and women shall so live that they may be known from the rest of the world in their business, their talk, and in fact their whole life. If we do not impress men as we meet them, then there is a failure somewhere in our lives.

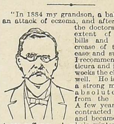
In the past men have gone out of the world and apart in order to remain Godly, but this is not right to take from the world our influence for good, and there is not much Godliness in us if we have to shut ourselves up for fear of being contaminated. We must come in contact with every part of humanity to be of use to Christ. It is perfectly right to have an interest in art, music, politics and the life around us, but we must exert ourselves for good, for the uplifting of everything we are concerned in.

The rule and realm of Christ and of the Evil One are not merely different to one another, but are entirely antagonistic. According to James "Friendship of the world is enmity to God", and we must grasp this fact. If the real world spirit does not hate me, then there is something wrong with my life. Everyone is under one banner or another, and there is no middle course.

TWO REMARKABLE CURES OF ECZEMA

Over Twenty-three Years Ago Baby had Severe Attack—Years Later Grandfather Suffered Torments with the Disease—Virulent Sores Developed from Knees to Toes.

BOTH OWE COMPLETE RECOVERY TO CUTICURA



"In 1884 my grandson, a babe, had an attack of eczema, and after trying the doctors to the extent of heavy bills and an increase of the disease and suffering, I recommended Cuticura and in a few weeks the child was well. He is to-day a strong man and absolutely free from the disease. A few years ago I contracted eczema, and became an intense sufferer. A whole winter passed without once having on shoes, my ankles and nearly from the knees to the toes being covered with virulent sores. I tried practitioners, specialists, dermatologists, etc., to no purpose. My daughter-in-law reminded me of having prescribed Cuticura for my grandson more than twenty years ago. I at once procured the Cuticura Remedies and found immediate improvement and final cure, till to-day, though well along in years, I am as though I had never had that disease. I am well known in the vicinity of Louisville and Cincinnati, and all this could be verified by witnesses. M. W. LaRue, 845 Seventh St., Louisville, Ky., April 23 and May 14, 1907."

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of scalp, as in scalled head; the facial disfigurement, as in acne—all demand remedies of extraordinary virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills are such stands proven by testimonials of remarkable cures when many remedies and even physicians have failed. One set is often sufficient to cure.

Cuticura Soap to Cleanse the Skin, Cuticura Ointment to Heal the Skin, and Cuticura Resolvent (or in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, in vials of 60) to Purify the Blood. Sold throughout the world. Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Sole Props., Boston, Mass.

A Missionary Institute for the County of Simcoe, North Ontario and Muskoka, is to be held at Orillia on February 10, 11, and 12. This Institute is held under the joint auspices of the Missionary Boards of the various churches. Similar Institutes have been held in Toronto, Montreal, Galt, and other large centres in the United States, and have done much for the spread of missionary information and the increase of missionary zeal. The one at Orillia is intended to reach the church people of the whole district for fifty miles around. The Mission Board of the various churches are joining in providing the programme, and among the speakers will be the Rev. R. P. McKay, D. D., who has recently returned from China, and the Rev. A. E. Armstrong, representing the Presbyterian church; the Rev. Canon Tucker, Missionary Secretary of the English church: the Rev. F. C. Stephenson, M. D. Missionary Secretary for the Methodist church; the Rev. J. G. Brown, D. D., Missionary Secretary for the Baptist church; and the Rev. R. W. Wordsworth, Secretary of the Association of Christian Stewards.

Missionary exhibits, stereopticon views, and study classes are to be features of the Institute. All missionary organizations in the district have been invited to send delegates. But the number of these is not limited, and the Orillia churches extend a hearty invitation to, and will provide the entertainment for, all who may be sufficiently interestrd to attend Copies of the programme and further particulars may be secured on application to the local clergy or to the secretary of the committee, Miss Robina Thomson, Orillia.

Many Seekers After This Job

Local Farmer Receives Basketful of Replies to Advt. for Laborer.

Evening Post of Jan. 25

A few days ago Mr. J. W. Arnold, the well-known meat dealer at the market, advertised in a Toronto paper for a farm laborer. The advt. appeared but once, yet he has been kept busy ever since opening and reading replies. Up till noon to-day the tally was 84 letters, and no doubt the number will be increased when to-night's mail arrives. Most of the letters are from Toronto, and furnish a strong evidence of the congestion existing in the city labor market at present.

Mr. Arnold secured an assistant through the Salvation Army in Toronto the day after the advt. appeared, and knowing that other farmers in this locality are in need of help, he very thoughtfully offered to leave the letters at this office for the benefit of enquirers. Farmers who wish to look over the applications and copy some of the addresses are invited to call at any time.

Remembered Our Late Queen.

Montreal Witness, Wednesday; To show that the memory of 'Victoria the Good' is still cherished by her subjects in Montreal, a beautiful wreath of red and white roses and other flowers was this morning placed on the statue on Victoria square. To-day is the seventh anniversary of Queen Victoria's death, which occurred on Jan. 22, 1901.

Was there a similar demonstration of reverential loyalty in the capital of Ontario? We have not heard of it;

The building contractors of Duluth, Minn., have declared a lockout of their employees. The Building Trades Alliances is well organized and there is a prospect of a long and bitter struggle before the troubles are adjusted.

John Mitchell will leave the presidency of his union with a record absolutely perfect, and one which the great labor leaders should do well to emulate. He will also leave it as poor a man as when he entered upon his duties years ago.

Carpenters' Union in Madison, Wisconsin, has registered a splendid increase in the last season. From a membership of 112 last March, the union now has 317. All members have had the eight-hour day the last season for the first time.

Thoroughly trained and highly skilled railroad mechanics, foremen, mechanical engineers and draughtsmen are now being turned out in Pittsburg, Pa., by the School for Apprentices, established and maintained by the New York Central lines at McKees Rocks.

In a recent interview with a committee of the Washington D. C., Plate Printers' Union, Speaker Cannon emphasized his belief in organization, but as strongly stated his opposition to any attempt of a trade organization to arbitrarily control the votes of its men.

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Positively, not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing Hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds; it strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help.

If you would have strong Hearts, strong digestion, strengthen these nerves—re-establish them as needed, with

Temperance Wave Surging Forward

A Prohibition Measure Has Been Adopted by 63 Missouri Towns.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 23.—With such force has the temperance wave struck Missouri that 63 out of 114 are already dry, and many others are approaching that state.

St. Louis, not in any county, is still wet, except on Sundays, when Governor Folk's lid is kept on tight. But even St. Louis, whose industries include the largest brewing plant in the world, is liable to become a teetotaler. The larger part of St. Louis doesn't want to stop drinking, but may be compelled to by Missouri. Some "anti-saloonists" admit that the city will vote wet by a majority of 20,000 to $25,000. Kansas City and St Joseph, too, like their beer and whiskey, and probably can be relied upon for wet majorities. The state voted under 700,000. The St. Louis vote is about 115,000; the Kansas City vote about 35,000, and the St. Joseph vote about 12,000. The wet majorities of these three cities combined, which the rest of the state must overcome in order to abolish the liquor traffic in the state, will not exceed 30,000 or 40,000, according to statements made to The News correspondent by experts who have watched the situation closely.

The present strong temperance sentiment in Missouri is the outgrowth of a movement begun in Jefferson City, the state capital, March 13, 1883, by a speech delivered by Frances E. Willard who was touring the United States delivering lectures in every city of 10,000 population and over and obtained permission to speak in the State House of Representatives.

One reason for the success of the Missouri Anti-Saloon league is the breadth of its creed religiously and politically. Republicans, Democrats, Protestants, Catholics and Jews are bound together in this remarkable organization to fight one common enemy—rum.

COMMUNICATIONS

RE APPROACHES TO OPS BRIDGE.

(To the Editor of The Post.)

Sir,—I would ask your permission for space to call the attention of the Municipal Council of the township of Ops, and also of the County Council, to a matter of vital importance; not only to a considerable portion of the ratepayers of the said township, but also to the citizens and merchants of the town of Lindsay. Now that the excitement of elections is over, and the time to display executive ability at hand, we presume our remarks will be quite in order, and the suggestions given promptly acted upon.

With regard to the swing bridge south of the town; While there is room for which the commissioners in charge of the construction work on said bridge are deserving of credit, yet there is also evidence of great lack of judgment displayed in the proper completion of the work on the approaches to the bridge. If the two rows of posts had been properly bevelled it would have served a double purpose—danger of accidents and the liability arising therefrom would have been avoided; not only this, but the snow, instead of continually blowing off the approaches, having them bare and unfit for winter traffic, would have been retained on the line of travel, rendering it possible for farmers to do their share of hauling.

There is also another matter which deserves immediate attention. The road south of the bridge from where the material was taken for filling the approaches, will be until the spring rains have some prompt attention is taken to remedy the same. The time to act is NOW, and the County Council is now in session. We would suggest that they and the Ops Council see that this road is put in proper condition for spring travel. To my mind it would require 100 cords of stone placed along the west of the road, say twenty feet apart. Have those broken by men at present out of employment. When the snow disappears, have the broken stone spread along the centre of the road bed. Some years ago, when our good old friend, David Walker, was the "war horse" in municipal affairs, matters of this kind would have been dealt with in a manner deserving the approbation of the travelling public.

We regret that the Township Council allowed this important matter to escape their attention, and we beg to remind representatives from the township of Ops and town of Lindsay to bring this matter before the attention of the County Council. It is highly important, on this main highway, to have a good and substantial roadbed secured to the ratepayers of the township of Ops and to the merchants and citizens of the town of Lindsay.—Yours respectfully,

RATEPAYER.

WRONG IMPRESSION CORRECTED.

(To the Editor of The Post.)

Sir,—Mr. Geo. H. Barr, a member of my staff, who was official referee of butter and cheese at Montreal last season, in speaking of his work at the recent Dairy Convention held at Perth, has made the statement that 'only 2 per cent of the cheese which he examined were of No. 1 grade." This statement has been widely quoted as showing a serious condition in the Canadian Cheese Trade. As there is nothing in the statement itself or in the facts of the case to warrant such a conclusion, I ask your permission to make the following explanation;

As Mr. Barr explained in his statement, he examined less than half of 1 per cent. or about one in 500 of the 200 lots of cheese received at Montreal during the season, and further, as he was asked to show up only these lots which were suspected of being inferior in quality, or which had been complained of by purchasers, it is not surprising that only 2 per cent were first grade. The showing as a statistic is good only rather than a bad one. As a matter of fact, the quality of Canadian cheese never stood as high as it does at the present time. More improvement has been made in the last five or two than for many years previous. The writer has just returned from a lengthy visit to the markets of Great Britain, and can speak with confidence on that point.

By giving space to this explanation you will greatly oblige.

Yours, J. A. RUDDICK,
Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner.

Wireless to the Seven Seas.

Paris, Jan. 26. — A highly placed French military official stated to day that the French Government, by means of its wireless station on the Eiffel Tower, hopes soon to have a unique method of communication with French warships in all parts of the world. "Communications will be sent to our warships without very long land receiving station. In the case of the campaign in Morocco we send despatches direct to the French warship that is in the vicinity of the point we wish to reach. In the study which the Kleber was lying in New Orleans, for example, we could send our messages direct without employing the present roundabout methods."

Honor For Old Lindsay Student

Rev. E.B. Cooke, Formerly of Dunsford and Little Britain, the Recipient.

Many friends in the vicinity of Dunsford, Little Britain and Oakwood, as well as Lindsay, Kinmount, will read with pleasure the following article from the Picton Gazette of Jan. 21st, describing a presentation on Northport Methodist circuit:

The many friends of the Rev. E. B. Cooke throughout the Conference will be glad to know that his self-denying labors on all parts of the Northport circuit are appreciated and that in token thereof he was presented a beautiful fur-lined coat, accompanied with the following address:

To the Rev. E. B. Cooke;

The members and attendants of the various congregations on the Northport Methodist circuit desire to place on record their approval of your course, and their appreciation of your labors during the eighteen months of your pastorate.

They have followed with much interest, your conduct of the work on the charge entrusted to your care, and have observed with pleasure your faithful discharge of the duties devolving upon you as well as the fidelity and energy which have characterized your efforts to raise to a higher standard of efficiency the various interests of the circuit. In your pulpit ministrations, attention to pastoral duties, and in other ways, you have shown unmistakable interest in the welfare of all classes—with the exception of Epworth Leagues, you have crossed swords with a spirit among the young which must be of great benefit to them, and ultimately of much gain to the church.

Your unfaltered sympathy with the suffering and the afflicted, and your readiness to impart consolation to those who sorrow because of the death of a loved one, have endeared you to the hearts of all. We further assure you of their fervent wishes that success, prosperity and happiness may always attend both you and Mrs. Cooke, whose interest in, and readiness to perform the work of the church, have already secured for her a warm place in the affections of the people. Signed on behalf of the contributors, Wales Osborne, Horace Pullman.

Rev. Mr. Cooke, prior to going to Northport, was on the Dunsford circuit for three years, and previous to that located at the Little Britain circuit. Mr. Cooke received his education at the Lindsay Collegiate Institute.

Fags Away.

(Hamilton Times)

A Hamiltonian on a visit at Vancouver writes home to a friend, and from what he says of the Coast he is certainly not in love with it. He says it rained 30 days in succession, when he stopped keeping tally, but he remembered that it rained on Christmas Day and New Year's Day, and is practically a Baptist country. Turkey sold at from 20c. to 30c. a pound, beef 18c. a pound, chicks 25c. to 30c. a pound, eggs 75c. a dozen, etc. The date of his letter Vancouver was crowded with idle men, and living was so high out there, compared with Hamilton, that it paid if he has anything like a job. Houses rents are high, and property is very high. Lumber is $18 to $30 per 1000 feet; brick for inside walls $18 per 1,000, for outside walls, $30 per thousand. Carpenters' wages, once slumped from $4.50 to $3.50 a day, members $3.75, clerks in stores $40 to $60 a month. Real estate is quiet. Some of the Japs, the correspondent says, are very non-fashionable poor spenders, but the Coast is no place for them. Don't go to the Coast seems to be the conclusion of this Hamiltonian.

MERRY WEDDING BELLS.

Martin—Griffin.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. James Griffin, in Fenelon township, adjoining the village, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday evening, 15th inst., when their youngest daughter, Charlotte E., became the bride of Mr. W. H. Martin of Verulam.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. A. Cook, of Coboconk, an old friend of the family, in the presence of about fifty of the immediate friends and relatives, the bride, who looked charming in a beautiful cream gown, was attended by Miss Ida Martin, as bridesmaid, and the groom, was assisted through the trying ordeal by Mr. Hector Griffin.

The numerous presents were elegant and costly, and evidenced the high esteem of that many friends. We extend to the young couple our heartiest congratulations and best wishes for a prosperous and happy life together.—Star.

Ritchie—Gibbs.

At the residence of Wm. J. Gibbs, Riverdale Farm, Cannington, the marriage of his daughter, Eleanor Louise, to Frederick W. Ritchie, of Point Marra, was quietly celebrated on Wednesday, Jan. 15th, 1903, by the Rev. Wm. Major, of Peterboro. The bride was given away by her father and was attended by her sister, Miss Jennie, as bridesmaid, while her brother, Mr. Frank, was best man. The bride gown was of cream colonne over cream silk with lace and touches of pearl velvet trimmed with seed pearls, also the conventional bridal veil.

Mr. and Mrs. Ritchie left on the evening train for Toronto and other points, the bride travelling in a military suit of navy blue broadcloth and hat to match. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold locket and chain, to the bridesmaid a gold locket and to the best man a gold mounted fob. The guests from out of town included Mr. and Mrs. F. Keiver, of Olds, Alberta, Mrs. J. Wardlow, of Calgary, sister of the groom, Mr. Frank C. Gibbs, of Winnipeg, and Miss Gertie Hunter, of Toronto.

His small son, William, a child of three years and nine months was drowned in a well on Wednesday, 22nd January. The remains were taken to Pine Grove cemetery for interment. Rev. Mr. J. WRITING OF PROPER NAMES.

More Care Should be Taken By Contributors to the Press.

The attention of regular correspondents, as well as casual writers to the press, is directed to the fact that all proper names—especially of persons and places — should be very distinctly written. Many writers apparently labor under the delusion that because a certain name is quite familiar to the writer it must necessarily also be well known to the printer. Bad penmanship can generally be deciphered, and the sense of illegible words supplied by the context. Not so with names of persons and places. The printer is often termed "the intelligent compositor", and he deserves the title, but it is only in rare instances that he is a mind reader.

GLENARM

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

On account of snow storms for the past three weeks, times are dull. As the storms came at the week end, our congregation has been lessened.

The Sunday schools of Fenelon and Eldon townships held a conference at Glenarm on Jan. 21st. Mr. Yellowlees, of Toronto took charge of the afternoon session, when questions pertaining to Sunday school work were discussed. Though not an enthusiastic meeting, it was very helpful. In the evening Mr. Brownlee gave a very interesting and helpful address. He also sang the old favorite, "My Ain Countree," which was appreciated by all.

Mr J. McKay and sister were guests of Mrs. Gilchrist recently.

Miss Chrissie McMillan, of Beaverton, is visiting relatives and old school chums in our community.

Rev. J. A. Ferguson is spending a few days in Toronto this week.

Mr. Sinclair, of Stayner, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Brown.

We are pleased to see the proceedings of Eldon and Fenelon townships published. We hope Eldon will stick to their motto, "the strictest economy," and Fenelon Council should adopt the same motto.

It is gratifying to have local option win the day. We hope accommodation will be provided for the travellers by some of the good people of our village.

County Council in Session
Dr. Mason Elected Warden

Opening of the January Session Thursday Afternoon---Reeve Jordan and Others Polled Good Votes---Chairmen of Committees Appointed.

Evening Post of Jan. 29

The inaugural meeting of the Council of the County of Victoria was held yesterday at 1.30 in the Council chamber at the Court House. Those present were Councillors Jas. Boate, Geo. Byng, Robt. A. Callan, Jas. B. Campbell, Jos. G. Eures, Jas. Graham, Donald Grant, Jas. H. Hopkins, Richard Howkins, Geo. A. Jordan, J. Michael, Taylor Parkin, Emerson Tiers, Thos. H. Watson, Henry H. Young and Dr. Mason.

ELECTION OF WARDEN.

The first business of the session was the election of a Warden for the year 1908. The nominations were as follows;

1st Voting.

1 Jordan—Parkin, Mason; 7.
2 Grant—Howkins, Watson; 8.
3 Graham—Callan, Fielding; 6.
4 Watson—Hopkins, Graham; 8.

2nd Voting.

1 Howkins—Grant, Boate; 7.
2 Fielding—Watson, Michael; 6.
3 Graham—Hopkins, Fielding; 6.
4 Jordan—Eyres, Young; 8.
5 Mason—Tiers, Byng; 9.

Dr. Mason was declared elected Warden of the County of Victoria for 1908, and took the Warden's chair.

COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN.

The appointment of the chairmen of the different committees was next dealt with, and resulted as follows;

Finance and Assessment—Thos. H. Watson.

Roads and Bridges—Richard Howkins.

County Property—Geo. A. Jordan.

Education—Fielding.

Printing—Taylor Parkin.

Appointments to Office—Emerson Tiers.

Watson, Howkins, — That Messrs. Grant, Eyers, Hopkins, Fielding, Parkin and Byng, be an Advisory committee for 1908.—Carried.

Jordan, Eyres,—That Messrs. Parkin and Watson be committee on the House of Refuge.—Carried.

OTHER BUSINESS.

The Council then made a number of recommendations to the Advisory committee re the appointment of auditors of the Administration of Justice, members of the Board of Examiners, County representative on the Board of Education, and auditors of the County accounts.

Hopkins, Graham,—That the report of the Board of Management of the House of Refuge be read.—Carried......The report showed things to be in a very satisfactory state.

Judge McMillan was then heard and introduced to the Council President Creelman, of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph. President Creelman said he was endeavoring to show the farmers improved methods of doing things; that it was his purpose to systematize the methods of the farmers' boys, rather than teach them altogether new ways, because the farmer who already lives and works on the farm knows the practical side of farming, and what he wants is, not to be shown that he is altogether wrong, for he is not, but to have new, better and more money-making ways shown him. There are about one million people living on Ontario farms — a very large large proportion of the population of the whole Dominion. One or two colleges at widely separated points can not do all for these people that they should, and so the government has selected six towns, of which Lindsay is one, to establish, what you might call supplementary branches, and so bring the good things of the colleges closer to the people and help them get bigger crops, better stock, and so fort. A good man was put in charge of each station, Mr, F. H. Reed in the case of the County of Victoria, and the Council would do well to afford him every assistance, monetary and otherwise, as he was endeavoring to help the people of the county.

Professor Zavitz, of the same college, also spoke, and gave the Council some interesting facts concerning the relation of the farm products to the products of the mine, forest and fisheries, saying the one was three times as great as the others put together. He predicted a change in farm crops within the next ten years and said the farmers should go about breeding cereals just as earnestly and scientifically as they now breed animals.

Mr. S. J. Fox, M.P.P., also said a few words, expressing his pleasure at having President Creelman and Prof. Zavitz here.

The Council adjourned after making arrangements to visit the Ross Hospital and the House of Refuge Wednesday morning.

The county gaol and buildings were visited immediately after adjournment.

WOODVILLE

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A number of our young people attended the hockey match at Cannington, between Cannington and Toronto on Wednesday of last week.

Mrs. Wm. Newman and son, Allan, are visiting her parents in Kingston.

Miss Moore, our junior teacher, is visiting her parents in Dundas, Ont.

Miss Ethel Thomas has returned home, after spending a few weeks with friends in Oakwood.

Mr. Richard Moore, of Markham, was in town on Tuesday.

Quite a number from town and surrounding district attended Mr. Rueb Thomas's sale on Tuesday.

A sleighload from here were at Cannington rink on Friday night. All report a good time.

Owing to the bad weather and roads on Sunday last the attendance at the churches was very small.

The friends of Woodville sympathize with Mr. and Mrs. R. Switzer because of the death of their little daughter. The child was only sick a short time when she was seized with convulsions and died. A quiet funeral took place and the remains were interred in Smith's cemetery.

KILLED AGED WOMAN

Woodville Youth Confesses Murder of Mrs. Welch in Detroit.

ROBBERY WAS THE MOTIVE

Boy of Eighteen Tells Police How He Slew the Woman—Beat Her With His Fist Until Unconscious—Then Kicked Her In the Face and Head Until She Was Dead—Then Took Trip to Buffalo.

Detroit, Jan. 29.—Percy Boyne, a youth of Woodville, Ont., last night confessed to murdering Mrs. Cornelia Welch, who was found dead in her home in this city on Jan. 7. Boyne was arrested in Woodville on Jan. 17, and brought to Detroit, where he was locked up. Since then the police have been giving him sessions in the sweatbox daily, but it was not until yesterday afternoon that he showed any signs of weakening.

Boyne says he beat Mrs. Welch with his fist until she was unconscious, and then he kicked her on the face and head until she was dead. Then he dragged her body into her bedroom and tied her hands and feet, tore her diamond earrings out of her ears, ransacked the house, stole $14 in money and escaped.

He went to Buaffio, where he sold the earrings, and then went to his home in Woodville, where he was arrested.

Although Mrs Welch was murdered, according to Boyne's confession, on Jan. 3, her body was not found until Jan. 7.
